FAREWELL TO IDEAL.

Here's Lodge Proving that George Washington Did Swear.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—George Washington actually swore, because Senator Lodge told the Senate so today and produced the documents to prove it. Senator Lodge said: "President Washington once did visit the Senate and confer about a pending Indian treaty, but the discussion on the floor was hardly satisfactory to him. John Quincy Adams in his diary says: 'As the President left the Senate chamber he said: "I'll be damned if I'll ever go there again," and he never did.'" Senator Lodge produced Adams's diary to prove the incident.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Chairman McCombs, who has been under orders of his physician, is in such condition that he is not expected to resume work at Democratic headquarters for some time.

Gov. Wilson is much concerned over the break-down of the man who managed the campaign in the ante-convention period and at Baltimore, and urged Mr. McCombs to take a two months' rest.

Baroness Von Suttner,

SHE TAKES JANE ADDAMS SEVERELY TO TASK.

In No Uncertain Terms She Tells Her She Should Not Use Her Station in Hull House to Further the Pretensions of a Politicaster—Issues a Public Letter.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] Jane Addams, of Hull house, who greeted Theodore Roosevelt on the platform at the Bull Moose convention here, is criticised in no uncertain terms for her action in aligning herself with the Roosevelt party, in an open letter from Baroness von Suttner the world famous international peace advocate.

The Baroness intimates that in following the third-term cause, Miss Addams, in effect, is joining an anti-peace organization, which has for one of its issues the building of battleships.

THE LETTER.

The letter says in part:

"My dear Miss Addams: I know my dear Miss Addams, that among your other achievements you have won a prominent place in the peace programme, and upon its platform therefore I have been puzzled by the support you have recently given to a platform that stands for the fortifying of the Panama Canal, for the building of battleships as the best means of securing peace and whose leaders protest against the reinstatement of the arbitration treaties between this country and France and England."

DEMANDS EXPLANATION.

Baroness von Suttner then proceeds to request that Miss Addams give her an explanation "of what seems to be a distressing contradiction."

The Baroness goes on to ask Miss Addams if her joining the third-term party is an open espousal of the cause of war. She concludes by saying that Miss Addams's action, while it may have lifted her in the eyes of many men, has certainly shaken her from "the pedestal on which the women of the United States had placed her."

SPITE FENCE GOES UP.

Master Building By Democrats.

Mr. Taft Indignantly Resents Their Petty Efforts to Coerce Him.

Increasing Bitterness in War Between the Congress and White House.

Pressing Business of the Biggest Republic Delayed by Peanut Politics.

BY SUMNER CURTIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Peanut politics seems to be the only correct characterization of the fight the Democratic leaders in the House are making in the present war between the President and Congress.

Having failed to pass the legislative, executive and judicial bill over the President's veto, the House this evening passed the measure as revised by the Appropriations Committee. This revision eliminated the seven-year tenure provision for classified employees to which the President objected and retains the provision for the abolition of the Commerce Court.

SPITE FENCE GOES UP.

Thus far the action marked a legitimate attempt to compromise differences of opinion between President Taft and Congress. Much in the spirit of a man who builds a spite fence, however, the House proceeded to knock out of the appropriation bill, as previously agreed upon by both houses, several features known to be dear to the President's heart and for the insertion of which he had exerted his influence when the original measure was pending.

These provisions contained appropriations for the Trade Relations Bureau and other bureaus in the State Department, which the President regards to be of far-reaching importance to the business interests of the country. The House, in the view of the President's friends, admitted the justice and importance of these appropriations when it accepted the first conference report.

INCREASED BITTERNESS.

The warfare is taking an increased bitterness with every development. President Taft's determination to veto the big appropriation measure that carries the salaries for the three great branches of the government if it again comes to him with the provision abolishing the Commerce Court has been strengthened. The President has announced a willingness to fight it out on the present issue, if it takes all summer and fall. The Democratic leaders opposing him say they are prepared to sit on the job indefinitely. Somebody is bluffing.

The gravamen of the course set by the Democratic leaders, in the President's opinion, is to be found in suggestions carried to the White House today that if the President would relent in his opposition to the abolition of the Commerce Court he could have all the others which it had been planned to strike out of the original bill that he vetoed. The President indignantly resented this alleged attempt of coercion.

Thus far, it is admitted by the impartial observers, the President has carried himself well. The country—such of it as is willing to view things with fairness, has been impressed with the fact that politics—the attempt to put the President in a "hole" and to make a "record"—has outweighed the desire to legislate in connection with certain matters.

PARIS IS A SLOW TOWN GEORGE ADE DECLARES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hearing that George Ade, a humorist, was in Paris, a French newspaperman sought him out, intending to wring from him the secret of universal gaiety.

"Please, Mr. Ade," begged the correspondent, "whisper to me the secret of the gaiety of Paris."

"The gaiety of Paris," mocked the humorist, "it does not exist. It is all stage managed for benefit of tourists."

"But the tourists are gay," suggested the correspondent.

"Gay nothing," he answered. "I've seen tourists. They hustle, baggage laden, into the hotel at midnight, hurry out before breakfast, buy a bunch of picture postals and pass the rest of the day addressing cards to envious friends back in America from a list as long as a city pay roll. Then they rush madly on to the next burg, buy more postals and beat deeper the dent of envy in the home coterie.

"We must always remember one thing," expounded the humorist. "Take a fish out of water and it can only do a silly flippity-flip. Take John Smith of Main street and put him on the Boulevard Montmartre and he is little better than a lunatic. The same applies when you put Johnny Crapaud on Main street. Moral: Every Billy Butts is best in his own bailiwick."

"But, Mr. Ade, why are you in Paris if it is not amusing?"

"Because," glared the humorist, "I have just attended two political conventions and had to go somewhere."

FORMER OUTLAW WANTS TO BE COUNTY ATTORNEY.

Al J. Jennings, Once Pardoned from Life Sentence in Oklahoma for Robbing Mails, Now Democratic Candidate for Office in Which He Will Have to Prosecute Men Who Have Offended as He Has Done.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OKLAHOMA CITY, (Okla.) Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Now that Al Jennings, the ex-train robber, has won his nomination for the office of County Attorney on the Democratic ticket, his campaign has commenced in earnest. As he did in the primary, he is fighting his battle alone, so far as the county organization is concerned. He has frankly declared he cares nothing for its support and that he did not consider himself under any obligations to the "machine gang."

His opponent is a popular young Republican attorney, who has a host of friends, but the spectacular course adopted by Jennings has drawn a large and devoted following to him and since the county is normally Democratic by a good majority, there seems but little doubt of his election.

HIS PLATFORM.

"The day of the grafter in Oklahoma county politics is about at an end," declares Jennings. "The Courthouse gang found itself fighting tooth and nail and I'm proud of it. No wonder they don't want me in office. They know what will be the result if they are given their just desserts and that they can expect nothing from me but a full enforcement of the law."

From now until the night before election, Jennings expects to be busy telling the people his story, train robbery and all, and then calling attention to the high taxes, the many alleged shortages of county officers and promising that he will prosecute all embezzlers and cut down expenses in case he is elected.

HIS CHARACTERISTICS.

Jennings is a small man, physically, with a flaming head of auburn hair and his spectacular campaign attracted thousands. The entire machinery of those who considered themselves powers in politics was arrayed against him. He denounced them, one and all, charged that graft in immense proportions obtained in the county government, and promised that he would make a change. In spite of the fact that all the other candidates in the race but one withdrew, Jennings triumphed by a decisive majority. For the past ten years he is declared to have led an exemplary life and he has taken part in thirty murder trials during that time, obtaining acquittals in every case save one.

A CHECKERED CAREER.

The story of Jennings's outlaw career and the circumstances leading up to it, as told by himself, reads like a romance.

"I came to Oklahoma City when the country opened in 1889," said Jennings, "but older and better lawyers got all the practice, so I moved over to the then new town of El Reno. I had good success and in 1892 was elected County Attorney of Canadian county. This was my first political office, although I had taken an interest in politics ever since I was a mere lad.

DENOUNCED CONVENTION.

"In 1894 I was elected as the sole delegate from Comanche county, Kan., to the Democratic State convention at Leavenworth, which nominated Thomas Moonlight for Governor. At that time I was not quite 21 years of age. I will never forget my feelings when the convention nominated a negro for a State office.

"I was only one small boy against the entire convention, but I stood up and denounced them, telling them that they were insincere and that their action would cause the defeat of the ticket. They laughed at me. That night at the hotel, Mr. Moonlight, told me he believed I was right, and when the votes were counted that fall they showed a defeat, even worse than usual.

A FAMILY TRAGEDY.

"But coming back to my story—after my term as County Attorney expired, I went to Woodward to visit my father. While there, I became engaged in an altercation with Temple Houston, son of old Gen. Sam Houston, but friends of both sides prevented trouble. I went to my father's house, fully intending to see Houston the next day, when he was sober, apologize for what I had said, and insist that he do the same.

"That night, at midnight, I was aroused by a voice calling to my father, 'Judge Jennings, get up. Your two boys have been killed downtown.'

MAY VETO CANAL BILL

Bold Stand By the President.

Mr. Taft Insists on Respecting All Treaties With Foreign Nations.

His Eyes Foresee Staggering Complications in Measure as It Is.

House Adopts Conference Report, Which Now Goes to White House.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The House tonight adopted the conference agreement on the canal bill and it will be the next thing to command the President's attention. Those who hold Congress has committed an indefensible act in disregarding the Hay-Pauncefote treaty by granting immunity from tolls to certain classes of American vessels passing through the canal, thereby paving the way for international complications of staggering magnitude, have hoped the President would again assume a bold stand and with his power of veto declare for the national honor, which Congress has repudiated. The President talked about the canal legislation with several callers today, and there are possibilities of a veto.

MR. TAFT'S POSITION.

This is the President's position as made known today: He believes that the United States has the right to provide free passage through the canal for American ships engaged in the coastwise trade, but he disapproves of any action that may involve the government in international complications, as he fears the measure would, as passed by the two houses of Congress. Too late, as he explained, the President urged those in charge of the canal bill to insert a provision declaring that nothing in the act should be construed as an abrogation of existing treaties. He now has to deal with the measure in the light of its disregard of treaty relations.

EXTRANEOUS MATTER.

The President also is opposed to the insertion of legislation affecting general interstate affairs in such measures as those designed to provide merely for the administration of the canal; although he favors, standing apart, the provisions giving the Interstate Commerce Commission power to deal with the separation of railroad and water transportation interests, and he approves the prohibition as to railroad-owned ships.

What the President now is considering is the veto of the measure on the ground that international difficulties may follow its operation and the return of the bill to Congress with the recommendation that it be repassed with an accompanying joint resolution declaring that there is no purpose of abrogating any treaty.

HOUSE ADOPTS IT BY VIVA VOCE VOTE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The Panama Canal Bill as agreed upon by conferees of the Senate and House was passed by the House again this evening by a viva voce vote.

As passed, the bill, which provides for the government administration of the canal, contains provisions for the passage of American coastwise vessels through the canal free of tolls and the admittance of shipbuilding material to the Canal Zone free of duty.

The bill already has passed the Senate, and it now goes to the President for his signature.

SPECIAL RULE.

A special rule prohibiting points of order against the measure prevented Representatives Moore and Olmsted of Pennsylvania, Republicans, from renewing their attack on the provision for the free admission of ship materials. As a result there was little opposition.

Mr. Moore was taken severly to task by Representative Alexander, chairman of the Merchant Marine Committee, for his allegations that the free admission clause would injure American ship yards and work a hardship on American labor.

Alexander held that with free material shipping would be greatly benefited and that such a provision would in no sense affect the labor situation in American yards. He defended the admission of foreign-built ships to American registry on the ground that American ship yards were not building vessels for the foreign trade.

RAILROAD SHIPS.

The exclusion of railroad or trust-owned ships from using the canal, in the opinion of Representative Sims of Tennessee, Democrat, was worth all the labor and time taken to mold the bill. He felt, he said, that a long step forward had been taken in the solution of the trust problem.

UP TO THE PRESIDENT.

President Taft has not decided whether he will approve the Panama Canal bill as agreed to by the Senate and House conferees. The President told friends today that the free tolls provision of the bill might prove a serious embarrassment to the United States. Mr. Taft favors an amendment which in effect would permit other nations to test the free tolls provision by suits in United States courts.

COLD-BLOODED MASSACRE STIRS PEOPLE OF MEXICO.

St. Bartholomew's Night Recalled by More Than Two Hundred Rebel Suspects Being Lined Up Against Adobe Wall and Shot Down Without Trial by Order of Prefect in State of Michoacan.

BY FITZGERALD SLOCUM.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TIMES BUREAU, NO. 77 DE LA 6A. CALLE DEL FACTOR, MEXICO CITY, Aug. 10.—Proofs of one of the most horrible massacres of innocents ever recorded in any country pretending to the usages of civilization were received at the office of the Ministry of War this morning, when the announcement was officially made that 214 human beings had been ruthlessly slaughtered in the name of the law at Puruandiro, State of Michoacan, in revenge for an attack made on the city by rebels a few weeks ago.

CRAZED BY BLOOD THIRST.

Although every effort was made to keep the facts from the public as well as from the government, letters and telegrams of protest were received by President Madero indicating that the Prefect of Puruandiro, Angel Loza, had been crazed by a thirst of blood and at his orders all the prisoners suspected of rebellious tendencies had been herded in a corral and shot down in cold blood. Orders instantly were given by President Madero, that a rigid investigation of the facts be made at once and that all persons responsible for the massacre should be arrested and held for trial.

CRIES OF ANGUISH.

According to the information received at the War Office the carnage was the result of denunciations made by four former rebels, who for a consideration agreed to point out the culprits who were engaged in looting the city, the details of which were published exclusively in The Times, a few days later. Irregular soldiers acting under the orders of Prefect Loza were sent in every direction looking for the criminals and those who were unable to prove their innocence of all complicity were immediately thrust into the City Jail, which as a result soon became overcrowded with suspects. With no provision for the accommodation of such a large number of prisoners, the unfortunates became desperate with hunger and enforced servitude until their cries of anguish are said to have irritated the Prefect until his wrath was changed into a form of frenzy.

SHOT IN COLD BLOOD.

Almost without warning, twenty-two of the most noisy prisoners were marched into the patio and at a signal from the official in charge all were shot down in cold blood before they had a chance to either escape or fight for their lives. It is admitted as a fact that the blood of these victims trickled under the doorways and threw the populace into a state of panic that almost resulted in a riot in front of the prison.

INDISCRIMINATE MASSACRE.

Unable to appease the indignant citizens, the Prefect is alleged to have then ordered the massacre of every person suspected of sympathizing with the uprising and company after company of helpless prisoners were led before their executioners and shot down without further ceremony. It has been established as a fact that the butchery was not entirely confined to men alone and at least two bootblacks believed to have stolen a few trinkets when the city was raided, also were killed. Several prominent residents of the city called upon the Prefect and attempted to dissuade him from following such a bloody course but without avail and the callers were told to make themselves scarce if they did not wish to court a similar fate. A few hours later, it is claimed by eyewitnesses, many of the relatives of the protestants were taken prisoners and subsequently lined up against the adobe wall.

POSTED NAMES AT CEMETERY.

Overcome by fear the populace kept silence and the affair probably would never have been made public had not a public-spirited citizen sent a letter to the government asking for an investigation. In order to make the massacre still more horrible, it is charged that Loza ordered a list of victims printed and placed at the portals of the cemetery, where all might read.

RETRIBUTION PROMISED.

Upon corroborating the facts as here stated, the government of President Madero made no effort to excuse the deed, but on the contrary put in motion the machinery of justice with a view to punishing all those who were in any way connected with the murders. Secret service agents have been sent to the scene to obtain proofs of guilt such as are acceptable in a court organized under the Roman code and assurances are given that substantial justice will be meted out. Rumors to the effect that two Americans had been included in the list of dead were current among the American residents of the capital, but an investigation seems to indicate that only Mexicans and Indians were made victims. At least no American in this city is aware of any fellow-countryman being in Puruandiro at this time as all are said to have left the city previous to the attack several weeks ago.

THE NATION STIRRED.

The details of the unwarranted tragedy has stirred the entire country and many of the higher officials characterize the massacre as a second St. Bartholomew. Within a day or two, it is expected that full details will arrive in Mexico City and no time will be lost in forwarding the account to The Times.

KILLS HIMSELF FROM REMORSE.

MEXICAN COURT CLERK SELLS ADVANCE INFORMATION.

Leakage of Proposed Decisions of Supreme Tribunal Used as Basis for Extensive Speculative Manipulation and Market Operations by Bribers of Judicial Attendant.

TIMES BUREAU, NO. 77 DE LA 6A. CALLE DEL FACTOR, MEXICO CITY, Aug. 10.—That a regular traffic in advance information regarding the decisions of the Supreme Court of the nation has been conducted in the interest of litigants, was a curious feature of life in Mexico disclosed by the suicide of Eusebio Vega, a trusted attendant of the court who stabbed himself to the heart in the Hall of Justice when caught in the act of receiving money from a supposed litigant.

For several months, the president of the court has been advised that his future decisions were already known and in several cases large fortunes had been made by speculators in possession of advance information.

SPECULATION BASED ON LEAK.

Suspicion of a leakage in the court was changed into a certainty a few days ago when it was discovered that a case involving $11,000,000 was being made the basis of large market operations in advance of the decision of the court being made public.

As there apparently was no record of such a state of affairs in any of the higher courts in civilized countries, the officers of the government were at first inclined to believe that the leakage had been due to an error of judgment rather than criminal intent.

WALKS INTO TRAP.

The case was placed in the hands of a secret service agent and after a conference with the court, the detective approached Vega with the proposition that he be allowed to read the judge's notations in a certain case, in return for a large sum of money.

Without suspecting that his caller was a member of the secret police, the court officer is said to have entered into an agreement with the stranger and at the same time he explained that the custom of selling advance information was by no means unusual.

The unsuspecting attendant was quietly led into a trap which resulted in his exposure and confession.

OVERCOME WITH REMORSE.

While the members of the court were discussing the best means of punishing the unworthy servant, Vega, suddenly declared that he was overcome with remorse and that his heart was breaking as a result of his crime. The appearance of a copious flow of blood on the accused man's clothing caused the court to make an investigation and it was then found that Vega had penetrated the heart with a small dagger.

With his dying breath Vega denounced his own actions and said that he had not realized the enormity of the offense. He leaves a widow and nine children in modest circumstances.

EXPECT FEDERAL TROOPS.

City of Juarez, Evacuated by the Rebels, May Be Occupied by the Government Troops Tomorrow.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JUAREZ, Aug. 17.—It is considered by railway men that Federal troops cannot occupy Juarez before Monday at the earliest date. In advance of the Federal army, under Generals Rabajo and Tellez, which today reached San Pedro, a point ninety miles from Juarez, is a repair train, and today two trains left Juarez to repair the road from this end. Determined to have some vestige of civil government the citizens of Juarez today met and named three commissioners, each with equal power of ballot. In this way Juarez bears the distinction of being the only city in Mexico with a commission government. On the day before Juarez was probably the only city in civilization with no government at all.

All is orderly, however, and the newly-organized police force has experienced little troube. The location of the rebel forces, which, led by Gen. Orozco, left here for the south, remains a mystery.

CORNERED AMERICANS STAND OFF REBELS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO, Aug. 17.—Reports of fighting by twenty Americans of the Tominil mine in the State of Sinaloa, with rebels and strikers besieging them, reached there today. It is said by officials here that no Federal troops can be spared to go to the Americans' aid. The Tominil mine is located eighty miles from the coast. The American Consul at Masatlan has received an appeal for aid.

A letter received here today contained a telegram also asking for assistance, to be sent to Gov. Colquitt of Texas.

ANOTHER REBEL RAID.
AMERICANS BEATEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN LUIS POTOSI (Mex.) Aug. 17.—Rebels raided an hacienda yesterday belonging to Frank A. Dickinson, American Consul here. His property is near Absalo, Guanajuato. Employees on the property were beaten and the manager fled to Clapato.

AMBASSADOR ACTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 16.—Ambassador Wilson requested the Foreign Office today to investigate the murder of Rowan Ayers of Cincinnati. Ayers, decapitated, was found near Morelia, Michoacan. He had been captured by rebels.

FOOD FOR REFUGEES.
CONGRESS PROVIDES FOR THEM.

(BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—To provide for the increasing number of American refugees from Mexico the House authorized today the use for their subsistence of $20,000 to be taken from the $100,000 fund already provided for their transportation. The Senate has approved.

To Extradite Fuente.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Minister of Foreign Affairs Lascuirain confirmed today the report that the Mexican government will ask the extradition of David de la Fuente held in El Paso on a charge of violating the neutrality laws. It is understood he will be charged with complicity in the robbing of the National Bank in Chihuahua.

President Taft today nominated Francis Walker of Massachusetts to be Deputy Commissioner of Corporations.

AGGRESSION AS KEYNOTE.

Republican Managers Are Going Right Ahead.

Scores of Volunteers for the Campaign Work.

Will Meet Every Move of the Opposition.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At Republican national headquarters in this city plans are being made for the speaking campaign. It is the determination of the Republican leaders that everything of activity and aggression which the other side may do in the way of campaigning shall be equaled, if not bettered, by the Republicans. The actual campaign in the country "governed" from Chicago headquarters probably will not begin for two weeks, but then it is to start "all at once and all together."

SPEAKERS' BUREAU.

A man has been chosen for chief of the speakers' bureau who is to make his headquarters in this city. His name for the present is withheld, because he is trying so to adjust his personal business that he can take the place. A definite answer probably will come from the chosen one not later than Monday. He is a man of considerable prominence in public life and at times has been known to have shown symptoms of progressive intentions. This, it is assumed, will make him of particular value to the Republican campaigning cause.

THE TAFT SPEECH.

The speech which President Taft made yesterday to the editors who called upon him at the White House is an example of the kind of campaign in which the Republicans expect Mr. Taft to engage. The President will speak on several occasions at a distance from Washington and the summer capital at Beverly, but in the main it is his desire and the Republican leaders, desire that he speak at length uppon policies and legislation only from the home doorstep, to delegations representing business, political, economic and sociological organizations.

MANY VOLUNTEERS.

At Chicago headquarters today it was said, that scores of prominent men have volunteered their services as speakers during the campaign. The task of selection will occupy two weeks. Neither Mr. Mulvane nor Mr. Scott believes that August is a "necessitous" time. Speakers will go into Kansas, Nebraska and Illinois and other States of the Middle West a little later. The wisdom of keeping speakers out of the field just at present the Republicans and Democrats and some of the Progressives, too, for that matter, think lies in the fact that there has been a surfeit of politics in the "farming States," and that the people willingly will submit to a two weeks' rst.

BLUES CHECK ADVANCE ON SAN FRANCISCO.

Glory Enough for All in Battle of Sargent, Which Is to Be Followed on Tuesday, the Last Day of the War Game, by Decisive Engagement in Vicinity of Morgan Hill.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Its advance on San Francisco effectually checked by a determined stand of Col. W. H. C. Bowen's advance force of the defending army, the invading "Red" army in the war game was forced to camp tonight on the north side of Pajaro River. Theoretically, the river is not fordable, and the "Reds" will be delayed until a bridge, dynamited by the enemy, has been repaired.

BATTLE AT SARGENT.

The battle of Sargent, fought today, was the first big engagement of the mimic war. Col. Bowen's 400 men, who are harassing the advance of the invaders, engaged the first division of the "Red" army, in command of Maj.-Gen. Wankowski, in a narrow pass near the Pajaro, and though driven back by a fierce encounter, he accomplished his purpose in delaying the enemy's march. The commissary and field battery of the "Blue" force at Gilroy has been moved back several miles. It was to protect his supplies that Col. Bowen marched his force out into the hills this morning and engaged the superior forces of the enemy. The "Blues" at times exposed themselves to a withering fire. One troop of cavalry, Co. D, of Los Angeles, was under fire of a mounted battery platoon, and the umpires probably will rule that it was entirely wiped out.

CAUGHT IN TRAP.

Col. D. A. Smith crossed the river east of Sargent with guardsmen of the Fifth Infantry, N.G.C., and made a flank attack upon the Blues. The Blues finally were compelled to retreat across the Sargent bridge, which was burned after being dynamited. Blue infantrymen to the east of the bridge were caught in a trap by the Second Regiment of the Reds and were forced to retreat on the double quick across a meadow, where, in actual warfare, they would have been annihilated.

GLORY ENOUGH FOR ALL.

Utah guardsmen bore the brunt of the fighting for the Blues and were highly complimented by Col. Bowen.

The Salinas cavalry troop distinguished itself for the Reds, turning the flank of Col. Bower's men and giving them much trouble. The signal corps of both armies were complimented today by the umpires.

FORCED MARCH.

The Red army is now a division. There are two imaginary brigades. The third is Gen. Wankowski's. The main Blue army, under command of Col. Cornelius Gardener, which is moving south to meet the invaders, made a forced march from Redwood City to San Jose, a distance of nearly twenty miles.

DECISIVE BATTLE TUESDAY.

Late tomorrow Col. Gardener expects to join Col. Bowen's forces. He said today, however, that he did not look for a decisive battle until Tuesday. After the march tomorrow, which will be under the direction of Gilroy, it is expected the blue commander will not be hampered by umpires. The dogs of war will then be loose and the commanders of the two armies will be told to go ahead and fight it out. It is expected that the big fight will be in the vicinity of Morgan Hill. Experts said today they expected it to begin on Monday night, continuing throughout. The maneuvers will end Tuesday night.

JAPANESE TAKE NOTES.

When the red army, which represents an invading force, camped last night at San Juan, a well-dressed Japanese was busy about the town endeavoring to rent a horse. Failing to secure a mount, the Japanese informed the different livery stables that he would purchase one. He was unsuccessful also in this. The man was pointed out to several regular army officials at that time. When the reds and blues were fighting in the hills near here this morning that same Japanese was recognized on one of the hills with a book making notes. He was seen later riding along the roads between the two camps.

EIGHT MORE JAPS ARRIVE.

The attention of the commanding officers in the regulars has been called to the affair and it is believed an investigation will be ordered. Late this afternoon eight more Japanese arrived at Sargent Station by train and brought with them a bicycle, each.

The "red" force encamped at Sargent expected an attack tonight and two battalions of the Twenty-seventh Infantry were sent out to reinforce the outposts to the north. In addition, patrols of cavalry and mounted scouts were sent far ahead to determine if possible the enemy's position. The "red" headquarters announced tonight that the main division, which is a theoretical force that disembarked from the transports at Monterey, is now at Langley, and will march to San Juan Bautista tomorrow morning. The actual "red" forces will act as an advance brigade for the main hypothetical body on the march to San Francisco.

CAREY HEARS A BIG NOISE.

He Calls It Roosevelt and He is Quite Sure It Will Soon Die Out. No Necessity for Third Party.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] William Ellis Corey, former president of the Steel Trust, returned today on the steamship France, from a three months' motor trip abroad.

"How about Roosevelt?" was asked.

"Certainly not," laughed Mr. Corey. "Nor can I see any necessity for a third party. The majority of my friends and practically all the Americans I have met abroad feel the same about it.

"The country was never in a better condition during the months before a Presidential election. The noise over Roosevelt will soon die out and we will settle down."

INTERPRETERS IN DEMAND.

NEEDED TO TRANSLATE DR. WILSON'S SPEECH.

Correspondents Get Him to Annotate a Peculiar Sentence He Uttered in New Jersey Just as if He Were Talking in "Plattdeutsch." He Welcomes the Women.

SEAGIRT (N. J.) Aug. 17.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, at the New Jersey day celebration today, welcomed the women of the nation into "the field of politics." As he stood before hundreds of women who gathered to organize the Woman's Wilson and Marshall League of New Jersey, the Governor declared the entry of the women into politics would make the country's politics "the same pattern with our life," a thing "devoutly to be wished."

The Governor said:

"I suppose you know the force that is behind the new party that has recently been formed, the so-called progressive party. It is a force of discontent with the regular parties. It is the feeling that men have gone into blind alleys and come out often enough and that they propose to find an open road for themselves."

ANNOTATION.

In his statement explaining that reference the Governor said tonight that the independent and progressive forces of the country had utterly failed to get control of the Republican party, but had absolutely proved their ascendency and their entire control within the Democratic party; that the people had found they could make use of the Democratic party as a proper medium for their purposes.

This, he said, seemed to him most obvious and the most encouraging circumstance in our politics.

TO THE WOMEN.

To the women the Governor recommended participation in politics because, he said, they were "in contact with the high cost of living and the pocketbook."

"When the last word is said about politics," said Dr. Wilson, "it is merely the life of all of us from the point of view of what can be accomplished by legislation for administration of public office. I think it is artificial to divide life up into sections; it is all of one piece though you can't attend to all pieces at once. And, so when the women who are in so many respects at the heart of life begin to take an interest in politics then you know that all the lines of sympathy and intelligence and comprehension are going to be intersected in a way in which they have never been intersected before, so that our politics will be of the same pattern with our life. This, it seems to me is devoutly to be wished."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REVERE BEACH (Mass.) Aug. 17.—Honesty in nominations and elections and social and industrial justice was the text of a speech delivered here today by Theodore Roosevelt. The third term candidate contrasted his attitude toward his platform with that of Gov. Wilson toward the Democratic platform. Whereas Gov. Wilson, he said, stated that "the platform is not a programme," Col. Roosevelt declared he treated his platform as a programme and a "contract which we shall scrupulously fulfill if the people give us the power."

"I wish to emphasize the fact that we are absolutely clear from affiliation with either of the old parties," he said.

A DEMONSTRABLE PROPOSITION.

The far-reaching, constantly increasing popularity of The Times as an advertising medium is the result of regularly multiplying the profits of its advertising patrons. Expert buyers of advertising space recognize that the confidence of its readers is the most valuable asset any newspaper can offer its advertisers, and it is this quality, the faith The Times' readers have in this journal, that makes Times advertisements such splendid dividend paying investments.

The Times has not only a much larger circulation than any of its local contemporaries, but its readers, representing all classes of society and constituting the bone and sinew of this rich section, have greater purchasing power than those of any other newspaper in the Pacific Southwest.

The Times carries the story of your goods and presents your appeal to a vast army of readers who are able to buy advertised articles, and who, on account of believing in this paper, are predisposed in favor of its advertisers.

The Times' circulation is a business-getting combination of quantity and quality that is the envy and despair of all other local newspapers. No amount of brag, bluster and sophistry can alter the fact that this paper's year-in-and-year-out advertising supremacy is the outgrowth of its circulation superiority, and that advertisements backed by The Times' influence and prestige increase business and make for prosperity.

INDIANA RALLIES FOR MR. TAFT.

Socialist Menace Arouses Business Men.

Roosevelt Danger Unifies Conservatives.

Chairman Sims Sees Signs of Victory.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Perhaps there never have been in Indiana so many business men pledged to take an active interest in the campaign as are now represented in that class who as advocates of conservatism have without solicitation offered their services to the Republican State Central Committee. In 1896, when there was fear of free silver, and a sound money movement was started in this city, the business men felt a keen interest in counteracting the Democratic heresy and hundreds of them joined the movement regardless of their past political affiliations. But the interest manifested in 1896 at a corresponding time in the campaign is hardly to be compared with that which is impelling business men now, and not in the history of Indiana parties has the promise of division on the line of conservatism been what it is today in both of the old parties.

THE SOCIALISTIC MENACE.

Months before the Republican split at Chicago the conservative element in Indiana parties had begun to look upon socialism as a menace to the country and had begun to study its growth in the past three campaigns with a view to invoking the best means to counteract its influence. What was then a mild apprehension has come to be real fear in the light of the "confession of faith" of Mr. Roosevelt and the promulgation of the progressive platform. Both the candidate and the platform are regarded as dangerous adjuncts to the Socialist propaganda and the nomination of tickets in practically all the States has given the danger an imminence that is as unexpected to the conservatives as its counteraction is now regarded as vital to the well-being of the country.

THOROUGHLY AROUSED.

Republican State Chairman Sims has encountered many pleasant surprises in the last two weeks and they continue to come to his headquarters daily. These consist in a large number of letters from business men who have never been known to take active part in political campaigns; then in the large number of letters from Democrats who are opposed to the national and State platforms of their party; and lastly in the number of letters and personal visits from Republicans who, while being recognized as such in their respective localities, have never been known to identify themselves with the active work of the campaign. In business circles and at clubs in this city practically the same spirit is manifested that is represented in the letters daily reaching the Republican headquarters. Probably in no respect has the change been more noticeable than in regard to former Senator Beveridge, who now heads the Progressive ticket for Governor.

JAM BILL THROUGH BY THE GAG RULE.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] After the Democratic steam roller had flattened the obstructive Minority Representative Mann of Illinois, who fought the Democratic program for the free entry of paper material, the Democratic majority of the House today passed the Panama bill. The House today's action was the result of another Democratic gag rule which provides that the rules of order should be applied to the conference report.

When the report was presented to the House last night, Mann made a point of order on the ground that the agreement inserted in conference report was in violation of the House rule that all revenue bills must originate in the House. The point of order was overruled by Speaker Clark and the conference report was adopted.

Speaker Clark presided over the House until today and Underwood, chairman of the committee on ways and means, who had brought in a rule to put the Panama bill through, presided over the House.

Mann's protest against the gag rule received but a solitary vote, that of Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, and when the latter moved to instruct the House conferees to insist upon the House provision for free paper material, Speaker Clark ruled that the motion was not in order.

Mr. Stevens of Minnesota, the only Republican leader of the House who refused to sign the conference report, explained his opposition to the toll section. Stevens said he was fearful this section might be a contravention of existing treaties and that for this reason he could not approve the report.

Objected to the Sea-to-Sea Limited relating to the embargo placed upon the Panama railway-owned ships, and suggested that the matter be referred to the committee on commerce.

President Taft will sign the bill at some time tomorrow to the engrossed copy of the bill as passed by the two houses.

TULARE, Aug. 17.—While the State Railroad Commission was hearing the application of the Big Four Electric Railroad Company for permission to issue $35,000 stock for construction purposes, there was a sensation when several stockholders residing in the Woodville district protested against the granting of the application on the ground that the officers of the company are not the proper men to conduct the affairs of the road. The protestants, with one or two exceptions, later withdrew their objections.

It is the intention of the company to construct an electric railway from Tulare to Woodville, and later to extend the line to Porterville, Lindsay and Visalia. While the commission did not indicate what action it would take on the application, it is believed they will grant it with certain restrictions.

JUDGE SWEENY PASSES AWAY.

Continental Building-Loan President Dead.

Business Troubles Hastened End, Relatives Say.

San Francisco Friends Are Shocked by Demise.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Edward Sweeny, superintendent of the San Francisco mint, and president of the Continental Loan Association, at present the object of several court actions, seeking its liquidation, died suddenly this afternoon of heart trouble in the Granada Hotel. At his bedside, when death came, were Mrs. Sweeny, his sister, Mrs. K. L. Corrigan, and several nieces.

FRIENDS SHOCKED.

The news of his death came as a great shock to his friends and business associates. Although he had complained Thursday and Friday, he had nevertheless, attended to his duties at the mint and many of those who came in contact with him had no intimation he was seriously ill. On returning home Friday night he complained of pain, and later in the evening, had to take to his bed. During the night he grew steadily worse and early yesterday it was known his vitality was at a very low ebb. During the day stimulants were administered and he gained consciousness long enough to say a last word to his relatives assembled at his side.

CONSTANT WORRY.

That his illness was superinduced by constant worry over the affairs of the Continental, was the statement of relatives, who believe his life paid the sacrifice for his association with the concern.

During the investigations of the State Building and Loan Association commissioner, who took charge of the Continental's affairs to liquidate, Judge Sweeny appeared deeply worried over the outcome of the affair.

Although Judge Sweeny persisted in his belief that the affairs of the Continental were solvent, he alone of its officers advocated a full investigation by the State Commissioner.

Judge Sweeny said on one occasion he would sever his connection with the Continental at the earliest possible moment following the settlement of the present trouble, but he did not want to do so at the time, as it might appear he was running away from trouble. He was president of the association for the past two years.

BORN IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Judge Sweeny was born at Fall River, Mass., December 25, 1853. When only 6 years old he came to California with his parents, where he has since resided continuously. His family home was in Redding, where he married Miss Mary Andrews in 1891. There were no children by the marriage.

For eight years he was District Attorney in Redding, following this service with twelve years as judge of the Superior Court there. Several years ago he was a candidate for the Supreme bench of the State in the Republican convention and lost the nomination by a small margin. Although he was offered his place again in the Superior Court, he declined. Shortly after this he took the superintendency of the mint here, and had filled this office for the past five years, establishing an enviable record.

The message was received here at 2 o'clock a.m. and the Pleiades operator added that he was about to turn in.

NEWPORT SINKS AT BALBOA.

Assurance Given That No Lives Are Lost, But That Property Loss Is Half Million.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—The Pacific mail liner Newport was sunk at Balboa, Panama, this morning by the collapse of the wharf to which she was moored. All on board were saved.

Assistant General Manager A. J. Frey of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, said today: "According to our advices from the agent at Balboa, the shed over the wharf crashed down upon the steamer and sank her within a few minutes. Up to this time, we have been assured that no lives were lost. I do not know how many passengers were aboard at the time, but I am inclined to believe that only a few went to their staterooms during the night as it is the custom for them to board just before sailing time in the morning.

"The Newport was carrying iron and steel, drygoods and foodstuffs. While I do not know the exact value of her cargo, I believe that the loss will reach close to $500,000."

Railroad Record.

TO MAKE RATES FOR RAILROADS.

It's the Next Step in Legislation, Kenyon Says.

Bill Passes to Regulate Classification Lists.

Slips Through Without One Word of Debate.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] Senator Kenyon of Iowa talked today of his bill giving the Interstate Commerce Commission power to regulate classification of freight.

This bill, which the Interstate Commerce Commission deems highly important, slipped through the Senate last evening without a word of debate.

"If this bill becomes law," said Senator Kenyon, "the next step will be to give the Interstate Commerce Commission power actually to make rates. I hope the House will pass it. Railroad commissions and shippers all over the country have urged it."

Senator Kenyon says he is encouraged by the passage of the freight classification bill to push his resolution calling for a sweeping investigation of railroad problems looking to the establishment by the government of a maximum and minimum system of freight.

TAFT SERVES ULTIMATUM.

Says Commerce Court Must Be Retained.

House Passes Legislative Bill Over Veto.

Objectionable Civil Service Clause Eliminated.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Taft told callers today he intended to fight Congress for the retention of the commerce court, if it kept him in Washington all summer. He declared he would again veto the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill if it came back to him containing the provision to abolish the court.

Mr. Taft was aroused over reports that Democratic House leaders planned to retaliate for his veto by refusing appropriations for the State Department, the bureau of trade relations and other adjuncts of the department which the President considers of immense importance to interests engaged in foreign trade.

Two Republican Senators, Smoot and Sanders, assured the President that the Senate might pass the bill as reported to the House yesterday, but they were confident it would not pass over a second veto.

Those who talked with the President in the White House offices today quoted him as saying he could listen to no offers of compromise on the bill and must do his duty as he saw it.

After a short debate the House repassed today the vetoed legislative, executive and appropriation bill, still carrying the provision to abolish the commerce court, but lacking the provision to limit tenure of office of civil service employees to seven years.

It now goes to the Senate for the second time.

WOULD FAIL IN SENATE.

The Appropriations Committee made no change in the bill after it came back from the White House, except to drop out the civil service restriction. The measure passed without a roll call, and contains the provision for the immediate abolishment of the Commerce Court, the transfer of its business to the Federal District courts, and the retention of the five judges as extra United States Circuit Judges.

Before the Senate acts on the measure, it will go through the hands of its Appropriations Committee.

Should the bill, as passed by the House today, go through the Senate without change, it is believed the President again will veto it. Democratic leaders believed the bill containing the abolishment of the Commerce Court if vetoed by the President, could be repassed by a "two-thirds vote in the House, but it probably would fail of such repassage in the Senate.

ALASKA CIVIL BILL.

Report for a Legislature of Two Branches Is Repassed by the Senate.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The Alaska civil government bill, as agreed to by the Conference Committee of the House and Senate, was repassed by the Senate this afternoon.

Conferees reported in favor of striking out the Senate's amendment for a Territorial Senate only and provide, as originally proposed, for two legislative bodies, to be known as the Senate and the House of Representatives of Alaska.

The other Senate amendment proposing the appointment of a railroad commission to investigate the transportation situation in Alaska will remain in the bill and be pressed for passage.

PENSION BILL SIGNED.

Survivors of the Wars and Fighters of Today Will Get Their Money This Week.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Taft's first official act today was to sign the $160,000,000 pension appropriation bill. The Pension Office was immediately notified and telegraph orders were sent to the eighteen outlying agencies to start payment at once of the money so long held up by Congress.

Every pensioner in the United States will be paid by Tuesday at the latest.

Paymaster-General Smith of the army today authorized payment to enlisted men of the regular army for the month of July, leaving the June pay to be distributed later. The officers already have received their pay for June.

The pay of the regulars has been held up in the general deficiency bill.

SIDE-TRACKED.

WORKS AMENDMENT GOES OVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The constitutional amendment proposed by Senator Works, limiting the tenure of office of the President to a six-year term, was side-tracked in the Senate today until Monday. The Senate spent the greater part of the day over the conference report on the Indian bill.

FORMER OUTLAW.

I dressed, ran out, and met my brother, John, badly wounded. He said that he thought Ed was killed, and I ran down through the dark streets until I saw a crowd surging around the front of a saloon.

"When I went in, I found Ed lying on his face in a pool of blood. He was shot in the back of the head and over the left ear, the second bullet ranging forward. I learned that Temple Houston had fired one of the shots and Jack Love the other. I knew that they had assassinated him, but decided to let the law take its course. They were acquitted by one of the worst travesties on justice in the history of Oklahoma."

"I wired another brother at Denver, Colo., and we determined to avenge the killing of Ed. We took up our abode at the 'Spike S' ranch on Duck Creek, twenty-five miles southeast of Tulsa with an old friend, John Harless. We made many efforts to find the murderers, but being so well known, we were foiled in our attempts."

ACCUSED OF TRAIN ROBBERY.

"One evening, I rode up to my father's house in Tecumseh, where he had just been elected county judge. He looked inquiringly into my face and said, 'My boy, what in the name of God are you doing?' I did not know what he meant and was surprised when he told me I had been charged with robbing a train. I assured him that I was innocent and he asked me to face my accusers."

"I refused. I told him it would be impossible for me to prove that I was at the ranch the night of the robbery, for every man there, excepting my brother and myself, was a fugitive and could not go into court. Some very bitter words were spoken, after which I left, riding away into the night.

"Next morning, I rode up to a store in the Seminole country to get something to eat. Several armed men were standing around. I didn't know whether they were horse thieves or deputy marshals, there wasn't much difference in those days, and they paid no attention to me. I finished my crackers and cheese and rode off.

"When I was two or three hundred yards away, the merchant and the other men came out and opened fire on me. My horse was killed and I was badly wounded. I was so enraged that I drew my Winchester and built a blaze around those cowardly curs, running them into the timber.

LED LAWLESS LIFE.

"Then, for the first time in my life, I committed a crime. Out of sheer madness, I robbed that store, getting $27.50. I didn't want or need the money. I was sore at the world. Helping myself to another fellow's horse, I rode off to the ranch, arriving just after dark.

"Through the dull glow of the firelight, I looked into the sun-browned faces of the 'Long Riders' as I told them my experience, and saw that they were greatly pleased. They had always wanted my brother and me and they got us. For two years, we lead a lawless life. We never at any time molested the poor, but often shared our booty with people living in dug-outs or sod-houses. In all of our misdeeds, every woman we met was treated with the greatest courtesy and they were never robbed.

"My brother and I had occasion to go to Central America and it was while there that we made the acquaintance of Sidney Porter, better known as O. Henry, the short-story writer. We did not know who he was at the time, and, needless to say, he didn't know who we were, but we became close friends, the friendship continuing after our return to the United States.

HELD UP TRAIN.

"On October 1, 1897, after our return, we held up the southbound Rock Island train between Minco and Chichasha in broad daylight. An old priest, who was on the train, was lined up against the fence with the rest of the passengers, and ordered to hand over his money. He had but 50 cents, and I told him we did not want it, handing him back a five-dollar bill with it."

W. I. Gilbert of Stuart, Cruce & Gilbert, an Oklahoma law firm, was in Jennings's office as he related the story. Incidentally, all three members of the firm are among Jennings's supporters in his present race for County Attorney.

"I remember that hold-up," said Gilbert. "I was a struggling young lawyer at the time and Al made me fork up $3.37, every cent I had. Since that time Al and I have been together in some of the hardest-fought legal battles in Oklahoma."

NARROW ESCAPE.

"After we robbed the Rock Island, hundreds of armed men were scouring the country for us," continued Jennings. "We eluded them until the morning of December 1, 1897. Four of us were at the 'Spike S' ranch, hoping to get a little rest. It was about 9 o'clock, when Mrs. Harless came running in the house and cried, 'You are surrounded and will all be killed.'

"I stepped to the kitchen windows and was greeted by a crashing volley fired by the hidden officers. The window was shattered and the flying glass cut my face in many places. I was wounded at the first volley, but we fired through the windows at every puff of smoke we saw. The house was literally riddled with bullets, and we ran to the orchard, where we turned and silenced the officers.

STOLE INDIAN TEAMS.

"We made our escape by capturing two Uche Indians and their team, keeping them two days and nights. Three of us were wounded and suffered a great deal. We had no food for two days, and were finally betrayed and turned over to Deputy Marshal "Bud" Ledbetter, and his men, who had attacked us at the ranch, by a former acquaintance.

LIFE SENTENCE AND PARDON.

"I was finally convicted and sentenced to prison for life for robbing the mail, which I did not do. I was taken to the Ohio penitentiary and after serving three years and four months, was pardoned by President McKinley, through the efforts of Senator Mark Hanna. I came back to Oklahoma, resolved to regain my former good name, if honest efforts would avail. It was not until 1907, however, that President Roosevelt restored me to full citizenship.

"No one will ever understand how hard the effort has been. I have been insulted and had to bear it, by public officers whose lives were blacker than mine, but who had not been caught. I care nothing for the office of County Attorney, except to re-establish myself by an honest enforcement of the law, and to thereby be a help to the suffering public."

WILD BUFFALO MULTIPLYING.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug 17.—Lieut.-Col. Brett, commanding Yellowstone National Park, has reported to Secretary of the Interior Fisher that his men have seen more buffalo in the wild herd in the park recently than for ten years. They counted forty-eight buffalo, he said, all of which appeared to be in fine condition. The tame herd, which is kept in an enclosure in the park, said Col. Brett, now numbers 144. Nearly one-half the buffaloes in the United States are in Yellowstone.

Workers Made Biggest Contribution.

Moving Picture Films an Important Item.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All labor unions which contributed to the McNamara defense fund will receive copies of an elaborate seventy-page pamphlet setting forth a detailed statement of the manner in which the fund was put and the present balance of $8,246.54. Seventy-four pages of the pamphlet are devoted to detailed statements of contributions to the fund and two pages to the expenditures, the largest of which was $36,195.35 paid to Clarence S. Darrow as chief counsel for the defense. The statement shows that $236,195.35 was contributed to the funds of which $227,950 was paid to Darrow. Other attorneys, Lee M. Rappaport and Henry Seyfried, received $1000 and $1000 respectively. Other large expenditures are for bail bonds, $4657.75; printing and mailing literature, $2628.50; money for production of exhibition of Bellmore films, $3142.19, and many other items of less importance. FIFTY WORKERS CONTRIBUTE.

Fifty-three single contributions to the fund were by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, which paid $35,000 on assessments of $5 on each of whom were being collected.

Two members, of which the fund consists, two members, made seventy contributions, two in excess of $1000 and one of $3000.

DEAD ROOSTERS DO NOT CROW.

Reno Divorce Colony Complains to City Council Over Early Call of Chanticleer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because the early morning sleep of the divorce colony has been disturbed by the crowing of roosters, the City Council has been called upon to place a ban on roosters and an ordinance will be drawn up to abate the nuisance. At a meeting of the Council last night the matter was put to them directly. Dr. T. J. Bean made the formal complaint and Councilman Sam Frank suggested that an ordinance be passed compelling roosts to be built near the top of the chicken-house so when a rooster attempts to crow he would strike his head on the ceiling and be knocked senseless. Councilman William Watt suggested the ax be used, but Dr. Bean thought this too severe. Councilman Fred White moved that the matter be referred to the Ordinance Committee to draft an ordinance so that divorcees could enjoy their sleep without disturbance. The matter will come up for final action next Monday night, when members of the colony will be invited to be present and explain their troubles.

WIRE IN RESIGNATIONS.

Receiver and Register Are Willing to Retire to Save Land Office to Redding.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDDING, Aug. 17.—Register C. W. Leininger and Receiver Lloyd Carter of the Redding land office wired their resignations to Washington today. Congressman John E. Raker had advised them that if both resigned he might be able to forestall the proposed consolidation of the Redding office with that at Sacramento. The plan to consolidate the two offices, it is said, grew out of inharmonious relationship between Leininger and Carter. Redding now expects to retain the land office, which is regarded as important to the development of counties in the northern part of the State.

Labor.

GREAT LOSS TO WAGE EARNERS.

Sickness Cuts Deep Into Income of Workers.

New York Labor Department Has the Figures.

It Also Promulgates Ideas as to Prevention.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] More than $266,000,000 was lost in wages over 13,400,000 cases of sickness among wage earners in the United States last year, according to a booklet on industrial diseases just issued by the New York Department of Labor.

It is the intention of the department to inform manufacturers and physicians of preventive and safer industrial methods, and it is hoped that with the assistance of the medical profession, the necessary facts may be gathered, not only as to the six reportable diseases, but also as to any other diseases clearly attributable to employment. For this purpose, the department's quarterly bulletin, containing valuable material on industrial diseases, is circulated widely among manufacturers.

In addition to this, there is now being sent to the physicians, hospitals and dispensaries in the State, a revised and improved reporting certificate in form similar to the United States standard certificate, with which physicians are generally familiar.

"LITTLE MAJOR" IS DEAD.

Dr. C. Annette Buckel Gained Fame on Bloody Battle Fields of Civil War.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OAKLAND (Cal.) Aug. 17.—Dr. C. Annette Buckel, famous nationally as the "Little Major" of the Union army, because of her services during the Civil War, expired today at her home in Piedmont after nearly eight decades of a remarkable life.

Dr. Buckel was born in Warsaw, N. Y., August 25, 1833, and was graduated from the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania. At the outbreak of the Civil War she volunteered for service in the Union army and accompanied the troops through some of the bloodiest battles.

She held a pass from Gen. Grant permitting her to go through all the lines between any of the army hospitals.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] In front of the old Police Station in Delancey street, in the heart of the East Side, which has been rented for a moving-picture house, there hung a large sign tonight on which was printed:

"Actual scenes of the Rosenthal murder, or the great gambling scandal."

"What are you going to do about it?" acting Capt. Mahony, in charge of the Clinton-street Station, was asked.

"Nothing, unless there is rioting on the part of persons who try to see the show," he answered.

INSPECTORS MUST EXPLAIN.

Police Commissioner Waldo Plays Lone Hand.

Starts Graft Investigation of His Own.

Officer May Have Sensation Up His Sleeve.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Aroused by charges of police graft, following disorderly house raids made by the District Attorney's office, Police Commissioner Waldo plans a public investigation of his own. Together with Cornelius J. Hayes, the police inspector whom he yesterday reduced to the rank of captain following discovery of disorderly houses in his district, three other inspectors will be placed on trial by the commissioner next week and asked to explain the existence of disorderly places in their districts. These trials will be the result of the commissioner's proposed investigation. It was reported today that Hayes intended to see District Attorney Whitman on the latter's return Monday from his week's end rest and offer to make some sensational disclosures.

BECKER BANK ACCOUNT GROWS.

The record of Police Lieut. Becker's bank deposits has reached $83,000. Becker accounts of $3000 and $5000 respectively were furnished to the District Attorney's office today by two more banks, these being the last to report of eight institutions within the city in which the police lieutenant placed money during the last eight or nine months. Efforts to trace accounts in three out-of-town banks are being continued.

HAD SIMPLE METHOD.

Becker, according to evidence gathered by the prosecutor's efforts, maintained a surveillance over disorderly houses which attempted to do business without paying for protection. According to this evidence, Becker raided one place which had been sold by one of the smaller protected "vice trusts" to an "independent" who failed to "come across."

WHITMAN MAY MEET SCHEPPS.

Sam Scheppe, the material witness in the Rosenthal case, may be joined on his trip to New York by District Attorney Whitman at Albany tomorrow night. The prosecutor is now with his family in Manchester, Vt., and it was rumored tonight that Scheppe's trip from Hot Springs, Ark., in custody of Assistant District Attorney Reubin was delayed at Buffalo, that Whitman might see him before he reaches New York.

BY CHANCE HE'S FOUND.

Five-Years' Search for Missing Husband Suddenly Ends in Street Brawl.

Mrs. Effie Anderson has been searching for her soldier husband, Porter Anderson, for more than five years. She wanted to find him to divorce him. For several years she has been living with her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Niles Mattson, San Bernardino. The three have carried on a systematic search through Alaska, the Philippines, Porto Rico and other distant colonies for some trace of him in the army. Three weeks ago they gave up hope, and stopped writting to the Federal authorities.

Last night, Niles Mattson was in Los Angeles. He was sightseeing along Main street between First and Second streets when he saw a street brawl. He went over to inspect the battered victim after the assailants had fled. It was Porter Anderson. He telephoned his sister-in-law the news. On Monday she will serve divorce papers on Anderson who is laid up with an injured skull and a face that is pulpy from the effects of the fight. Anderson was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

Removal Sale of Fitzgerald Music Company's Entire Stock

CIRCUMSTANCES force us to sacrifice our entire piano stock at prices we would never consider under usual conditions. With our lease sold, and our future home not ready we have to take temporary quarters, not big enough for one-tenth of our stock. The only alternative left for us is to sell 90 per cent. of our stock before we can move.

If you don't own a piano your time to get one has arrived. No home is complete in happiness and refinement without the entertaining and elevating influence of music. You are going to have a piano sooner or later, you will not get such a chance as this again. The prices are cut to the quick and you won't need to pay much money down.

LIGHT FROM THE EAST ON THE LIVING ISSUES.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] The following editorial comments on topics of the hour are printed in eastern papers:

PANAMA CANAL.
HERALD SEES A HOODOO.

[New York Herald, Aug. 16:] Roosevelt has not exhausted the "hoodoos" for even President Taft, one of the most equitable of men and one of the most prudent of statesmen, has been overtaken by a fate that pursues all who have anything to do with the Panama project.

In violation of America's solemn treaty obligations he has agreed to fortify the canal and now seems disposed to accept the bill discriminating against foreign shipping utilizing the waterway.

Panama is indeed a "hoodoo."

DEMOCRATIC HANDICAP.
THE DONKEY PARTY.

[New York Press, Aug. 16:] As a party of obstruction and destruction, the Democracy is handicapped for lack of a majority in the Senate and by the presence of a Republican President in the White House, but what it has been able to do through its control of the House of Representatives ought to bring the people to their senses in considering the consequences of complete Democratic rule in the nation.

ONE SHIP NOW.
THREE NEXT YEAR.

[New York Times, Aug. 16:] To build only one new battleship this year means that we must build three next year, if not more. Perhaps the situation will be such next year that even the "economical" members of Congress, like Speaker Clark and Senator Tillman, will recognize the need of more ships. There will be no political campaign to confuse their minds then.

PLAN AND PRAY.
VIEWS OF "JOE" CANNON.

[New York World, Aug. 17:] The front of battle lowers dubious to the eyes of Uncle Joe Cannon, but that is not what damps his cheer and stills his song. He is affrighted by the monstrosities that rise around him in battle array, "artful demagogues." Says he: "People that play poker and say prayers with the same hand;" leaders, he adds, "who write platforms and letters of acceptance in which each individual can turn to some sentence or expression that suits him, notwithstanding that everyone knows one-tenth of them disagrees with the other nine-tenths."

Just how any man can pray with the same hand that he plays poker with is not clear to most folks, but all can understand how his appearance in Uncle Joe's field of vision would be truly startling to that stern stickler for keeping the one game free from interference by the other. It is gratifying, too, that even in the face of such a bluffer the veteran will not back out. He lifts his voice in a hymn for courage and calls for more cards. The chances are it will go badly for the other fellow on the show-down.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.
A SUNBEAM.

[New York Sun, Aug. 17:] One does not have to be actually decrepit to remember when there was something almost ludicrous or eccentric about women in politics. We see them now in places requiring sound judgment, exquisite skill, tact—which nobody will deny them—in short, having an opportunity to show in practical political work those qualities that have been admired so much in their administration of charities and in their religious and educational occupation and aversions. We hear a good many folks of sound mind and blessed with even judgment say that woman suffrage is coming, that it is near, that the enlarged share of politics of the day is a sign and percursor of triumph; that even the Bull Moosian movement will work for its good, that the madness of the militants is forgotten; that in fact, the male politicians need two mens' votes. The question whether the women want to vote is too ancient to ask or must be regarded as settled by the enthusiasm of those that do.

Are these things so? We only repeat what we hear. We speak agnostically, neither believing or disbelieving; except that we disbelieve utterly in women's incapacity at least to equal the lofty intellectual and moral stature of our present masters.

DECIMATED BY BAYONETS.

FEZ, Aug. 17.—[By Cable and A. P. to The Times:] A severe fight occurred today at Mouley Bouchta between French troops under Gen. Gouaud and Moorish followers of the pretender of Sichtala, in which the French lost eight killed and forty wounded. Three thousand Moors were engaged, and their ranks were decimated by bayonet charges. The Moors were routed with great loss.

KNOX STARTS FOR JAPAN.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Secretary of State Knox left Washington for Seattle last night en route to Tokio to represent President Taft at the funeral of the late Emperor of Japan.

Canned Scenery.

PAIL O' PAINT TO HIDE THE EVERLASTING HILLS.

Birth of a Race of Amazing Ragtime Artists Who Buy Inspiration in Ten-Pound Buckets and Clothe Nature's Nakedness With Wonders of Cokodope Done in Nine Colors on 12 by 14 Billboards.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

CANNED scenery! That's what we have nowadays. No, I don't mean the "movies," I mean billboards. We have a race of rag-time artists. They paint for the Mammon Art Museum, their muse is a classic goddess on a gold-piece, they purchase their pigments by the bucket at a hardware store, and exhibit in the alleys!

The hurrah experts and come-on fussers give them big money. So they put a tailor-suit on their muse, and exalt chewing-gum above Cheops, the bean above the Bridge of Sighs, the collar-button above the Cornican.

Their work is an intellectual bump-the-bumps, an optical orgy. We know there are such things as sun-kissed hills and leafy lanes, because we read about them in Jawn McGroarty's poetry and see them on the post cards; yet, the other day as we bowled along in Rob Fike's classy Pratt-Forty, the signboards unwound like a bolt of dingy ribbon, and the skyline of the Eastlake hills (where evidently they irrigate 'em,) resembled the outworks of a pop baseball battlefield.

Why, we've got so we don't find our way around by the real scenery of the country, but by the signboards. If we took the billboards down, we couldn't find our way home! We remember that in order to go home, we pass—not the turnstile and the spring and the little clump of beeches—but the beer sign and the man leaping over the fence to show how strong he is because he drinks Never-Was Coffee.

DREAMS IN PAINT.

"Oh, look!" cried the artist, "at that bit of hill with the sunlight on it!" When, presto, between me and the lovely scene appeared an abortion in purple and pink—a signboard showing carved waves and cotton-waste foam, and a diving girl with two right legs!

Next you catch a brief glimpse of a pretty bit of country—and are impiered in three colors and letters two feet high to hang your young hopes on Razzle-Dazzle Beans, or a Painless Piano Player.

They are so inopportune, too. Who wants a reverie of his girl broken in upon by visual appeals to buy gatling guns and grape-nuts? What cares he for their touching supplications? He'd rather go without a gatling gun in the house from one year's end to another, than be interrupted at such a time.

And such bursts of genius, we viewed, especially on the Pasadena road—such rhapsodies of color, such spasms of artistry—merely to express the superlative quality of Pink Pills and Jewelbug's hats! Genius labors and brings forth a breakfast food; a giant intellect perspires, and produces a Chewing-Gum Girl!

There is a perfect "gum of art"—to use the office boy's expression—out at Oak Knoll. It's in thirteen colors and fifteen feet long, and depicts a lady in a Pompeiian bath and one intimate garment. You wonder what the riot's all about—and discover it's just an ad for a dinky little water-spigot.

FAMILIAR FRIENDS.

Then there is the girl twelve heads high, holding a dropsical camera, while she lists at an angle of 45 degree—"away off her center," as the artist expressed it—the point being, of course, the camera. And also there's the girl frying eggs in her gloves, while a vague man and a flat boy refuse to come out of their backgrounds, and the high lights are all on the fried eggs!

There's the rear elevation of a fat man in a bathing-suit, who falls for a certain hair restorer, and a trunk breaking rocks all by itself to show how strong it is. Also there is a girl under feather-duster trees, to advertise a summer resort, and the real names of perfect gentlemen who disdain the non-de-plume medium of Sunshine Jake or the Heavenly Twins.

I do not say they are not more exciting than real scenery—I do not say a picture of a dropsical female in a low-cut gown, and a gent in an alum scarf-pin, eating tacks from a soup tureen, is not more stimulating than a glimpse of sunlight under the trees; nor that a strong man in his galluses is not a more pleasing sight than a dinky brown hill, or that you wouldn't rather view one of those poster ladies with green hair and gasoline eyes, nearly as high as the pumpkin pie moon, than a measly arroyo without any water in it. But I do maintain that when you drive out in your auto,-you want real scenery with the Providence sterling mark on it.

"CANNED" SCENERY.

Art in Bucketfuls.

The virgin landscape as it is made over by the billboard man with a swipe and a swish and a pot o' paste, also with original conceptions worked out in eight or nine colors of hardware-store paint.

ART WITH CALLOUSES.

The manual-labor artists themselves should receive critical notice, because, of course, no art criticism is complete without slugging in some personal stuff.

First there's the man who does scenery like the inside of a man's stomach that's been destroyed by drink. And in contrast to him the man who paints army pictures for the United States recruiting stations, showing groups of soldiers smoking and chatting easily with their superior officers, in the cool shade of tropical palms.

Then there is the little fresh-every-hour, who draws anaemic ladies, draping themselves over furniture of a particular breed, and young men with mathematically square shoulders and a rush of neck-tie to the belt.

There is the artist who does silk stockings on idealized legs and perfect poems in curly neck ties.

There is one painter whose signs are really a rest to the eye and a delight to the fancy. I won't use his name, because he exhibits here every winter, for fun and fame. He loathes sign-board stuff, but the habit of eating goes right on. He paints children among the daisies and graceful mermaids on rocks, and lovely maidens beside amethyst seas—but alas, the trail of the serpent, the adder, the ad is over them all.

USING A HOSE.

In distinct contrast is the slap-stick artist who squirts his pictures on with a hose, apparently, giving us restaurant ads of lumpy-jawed ladies eating varnished pies and bulbous-nosed gentlemen drinking shaving-lather out of champagne bottles.

Also there is that cutey animal painter, who limns pups trying to tear up obviously indestructible boots, and portraits of the "Maudi" carrying heavy loads of lumber up impossible hills.

"But," said the advertising man whom we met bloody-handed in the fields, and with whom we remonstrated, "what's wrong with ut? I don't see nothing wrong. Take that there scene over there," pointing to a little girl whose violent pinkness would indicate that she was in the first stages of measles, sitting among oleomargarine poppies — "take that picture. Didn't them real poppies back there wilt right off as soon as the hot sun struck 'em? Now these here is substantial flowers, and will last right along, especially if you touch 'em up oncet in a while."

What's the use of arguing with an art-bruiser like that? I mean to take up the matter with the Cubists at once, and see if they cannot start a movement in art circles to make the Council classify the billboards. Would it not be beautiful—groups of beans and catsup and beer, and of mermaids and corsets and carved waves and scarlatina sunsets? This will be very lovely of the Cubists—and useful, too!

"BURKE'S Dry Gin—second to none, demanded everywhere by connoisseurs."

SEES SNAKES; FLEES INSANE.

Terror-stricken Deer Hunter Runs for His Life.

Wild Chase Through Canyons After Naked Fugitive.

Former Beach City Official's Harrowing Experience.

Snakes in the Santa Monica Mountains frightened to madness Frank Vogel of No. 1300 Newmark avenue, former City Treasurer of Santa Monica and prosperous stock broker in Los Angeles, while on a week-end deer hunt.

With the delusion that the world is animated by nothing but snakes, he fled from his hunting camp Friday morning, naked and desperate, wandered through the canyons for six hours, and was captured only after a terrible struggle on a ledge overhanging a deep cut by his three companions.

Vogel was brought to the Receiving Hospital last night, raving under the hallucination that snakes were surging about him.

On Wednesday the party, comprised of Vogel, George W. Griffey of No. 2816 East Third street, and Walter C. Anderson of No. 2323 London street, drove to C. C. Cheney's ranch in Topanga Canyon, fourteen miles from Santa Monica. They made the ranch the headquarters for their deer hunt and disappeared into the mountains. Two days and two nights they slept in the open, Vogel apparently sane and enjoying the excursion, save for his terror of snakes.

According to the hunters the snakes prevalent in the hills are indolent, peevish and bold at this season. It is "dog-day" time, and the snakes are shedding their skins.

Vogel found scores of snakes during the two days and became panic-stricken, as the reptiles are blind and refused to flee. Further than an ordinary alarm, he showed no indication of mental aberrations at first.

On Friday morning, the party awoke at 5 o'clock for the day's hunt. Although tracks of deer were seen no trophy had yet been secured and the party rose early. Vogel, however, was gone. They started to hunt for him.

After a search of five hours they sighted him down a deep draw, fleeing from them. He had cast off his covering like the snakes. Over jagged rocks, brush-defended hillsides and rough cuts in the canyons, the man-hunt lead along unbeaten and punishing trails. Vogel, without clothing protection, was terribly torn and bruised, but he cunningly out-footed his pursuers.

After a two-hour chase he was cornered on a ledge overhanging a deep draw in the Topanga Canyon. His friends seized him and he fought wildly, straining to throw his captors over the cliff, biting and kicking at them all in horrible peril of being overbalanced and falling into the dry creek-bed below.

At the end of an hour's struggle, Vogel was exhausted. When led back to camp he was apparently pacific. Soon he grabbed a rifle and threatened his friends. The gun was not loaded. He used it as a club after discovering its explosive futility, but again he was overpowered.

Four men had augmented the captors. They were Melvin Beaurer, Burk Baisley, P. M. Robinson and Henry Lupes, deer hunters from Santa Monica.

Vogel was taken to the Cheney ranch and at once brought to his home in Los Angeles. His wife was absent when he arrived. When she returned home yesterday she detected the insanity in her husband's demeanor. The police were notified and Vogel was brought to the Receiving Hospital. He will be examined by the Insanity Commissioners.

WAGES AN ODD CAMPAIGN.

Bakersfield Man Says He Is no Statesman but Merely Wants Job of Making Laws.

TULARE, Aug. 17.—Charles P. Fox, the Bakersfield candidate for Congress, who aspires to the nomination on the Republican ticket, has started an innovation in his campaigning which is bringing joy to the newspaper fraternity of the valley. Fox has purchased space in all the journals of his district, specifying editorial page, and is writing weekly editorials to the readers.

His introductory letter has just appeared, headed with his portrait, a brief review of his career as a politician in California and the chief reasons why he believes he is entitled to consideration.

He will follow this introductory with messages devoted to the issues for which he stands.

Fox frankly states that "no one has ever accused me of being a statesman. I want the office. I believe I can make good."

MYSTERIOUSLY INJURED.

Department-Store Buyer Found Dying in Bed With No Clew as to His Assailant.

Foul play is suspected as the cause for the death of Fred J. Gunther, buyer in the toy department of Hamburger's store, at the Good Samaritan Hospital last night. An autopsy performed at the Pierce Bros.' mortuary last night revealed a compound fracture of the skull.

Gunther was found lying unconscious in his bed by his wife Saturday morning. When taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital the surgeons diagnosed his coma as due to a blood clot on the brain producing paralysis. He rapidly lost strength and died without rallying.

The management of Hamburger's has demanded a thorough investigation of Gunther's actions on the night preceding the injury. Where he received the blow that caused his death is a complete mystery. Mrs. Gunther is prostrated at the family apartments, No. 318 West Fifth street, and can furnish no clew to the tragedy. City Detectives McCann and Williams have been assigned to the investigation.

Master Drink Habit Before It Masters You

The Neal Treatment Will Enable You to Stop Drinking Without an Effort of the Will.

Many men and women who drink alcoholic liquors to excess hesitate to take treatment and postpone going to an institution for that purpose because they dread the hard fight to be made against the irresistible, gnawing, craving desire for alcoholic stimulation experienced by those who attempt to stop drinking.

They realize the only way to stop drinking is to stop and never take another drink, yet they cannot do so, for they have become so badly poisoned with alcohol that the craving for temporary relief, derived from liquor, has become stronger than the will power to resist.

These drinking men and women need medical assistance and should take the Neal Drink Habit Treatment, which will, in three days, thoroughly eliminate all alcohol from the system and neutralize its functional effect upon the body tissues. When this is accomplished all craving and necessity for drink is removed and the former slave to drink has become a clean, healthy, sober man without an effort of the will, and without great nervous suffering.

The Neal Drink Habit Treatment is a harmless, vegetable internal remedy—painful, dangerous hypodermic injections are never used—and has been for years successfully administered at fifty-three Neal Institutes in the United States, Canada and Australia.

For further information and reference call at the Los Angeles Neal Institute, 945 South Olive street, or write or 'phone G. U. Neal, Manager, for Dr. Neal's free book. Phone Broadway 4602, A4072.

DINE MEXICO'S MAN OF HOUR.

MANY GUESTS MEET TO HONOR DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

Senator from Southern Republic Declares He Has Found Spirit of Friendship for His Country Throughout United States—Peace Dove Honored.

The good will between Mexico and the United States was expressed with fine enthusiasm yesterday afternoon at a luncheon given at the Hotel Mt. Washington to Senator Jose Castellot of Mexico City, by Col. Charles Sumner Young and Dr. J. Ziegner of this city. Forty guests were present representing many large American and Mexican interests and the keynote of every address was peace for Mexico and cordial friendship between the two great countries.

After a delightful menu Col. Young, as toastmaster, introduced Dr. Ziegner, who presented Senator Castellot. Both Young and Ziegner spoke of the distinguished visitor as the man of the hour in his republic, hailing him as the most powerful personage in Mexican affairs.

Senator Castellot was received with prolonged applause and when he was permitted to speak he said:

"Your great kindness takes away my natural embarrassment in speaking in a foreign language in which I have some difficulty in expressing myself. Wherever I have gone in the United States, working toward the ends of peace for my country, I have found this spirit of friendship among the people of America and this has only emphasized what I have always felt to be the truth about the relations of the two countries. In the past when I could render a service to any foreigner in Mexico I have done so as one who performs a simple duty, but when I have extended the protection of my government to an American I have felt that satisfaction which comes to a man who is serving a friend."

In this happy vein Senator Castellot spoke of the past, relationships of the two republics, predicting the speedy establishment of peace in his own country and a surer cementing of the bonds of sympathy with their brethren in the north. He spoke glowingly of the beauty and the richness of this city and his prophesy for its future greatness was spoken with convincing ardor.

Mayor Alexander responded for the city of Los Angeles with deep feeling, declaring his great pleasure in Senator Castellot's visit to California and expressing the belief that it will bring the two countries even more closely together. Los Angeles, he said, is interested in Mexico's welfare, and he begged that Senator Castellot carry to President Madero the utmost good will from the people of this city.

Thomas E. Hughes, the "father of Fresno," owner of many large mines in Mexico, told in a happy address how he had made and lost a great fortune at Fresno, and how at the age of 70 years, he had gone into Mexico twelve years ago and amassed another great fortune which will be doubly enhanced when the dove of peace shall have folded its wings above that country of tremendous potentialities.

Col. Young said The Times has served as a link between Mexico and the United States in that it had printed more news from Mexico during that country's distress than any other American newspaper, and more than all of the other papers in Southern California combined. Responding to Col. Young's introduction, Henry C. Warnack said that any man who has even been in Mexico knows that its people are delightful in peace and heroic in war. He had never known the man in Mexico who was not always ready to sing or fight as occasion required. Intervention, he said, has been misrepresented, for the American people have never thought of this possible step as a measure of conquest, politics or even business, but only as an act of friendship and of mercy.

Prominent among others present, many of whom responded to pleasant toasts, were Dr. J. J. Ball, Dr. Robelado of Guatemala, W. M. Ford, Capt. John Jasper, George Montgomery, former Governor J. J. Gosper of Arizona, George Bailey, C. D. Ford, Joseph Rittigstein and Bert Williams. Senator Castellot expressed to Col. Young and Dr. Ziegner his warmest appreciation for his handsome reception

WOMEN'S HERO UNDER ARREST.

Mayor of West Hammond Charged With Bribery.

Columbus (O.) Chief of Police Suspended.

Conditions Like Those in New York Unearthed.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WEST HAMMOND (Ill.) Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] Mayor Joseph Woyscinski was arrested at his home early today on a warrant charging him with bribery. He is a friend of Virginia Brooks, the noted woman reformer, and was elected last fall on a reform ticket backed by the women of this place.

The warrant on which the Mayor was arrested was sworn out by George Rosenbaum, proprietor of a hotel which was closed by the Mayor last Friday.

The closing of the place followed complaints from numerous citizens of the town. Rosenbaum says that the Mayor accepted $200 from him for the right to keep open his place after hours. The Mayor denies the charge.

VERDICT SURPRISES BURNS.

Detective in Interview Expresses Belief That Darrow Will Be Tried on Another Indictment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William J. Burns, detective, who was active in prosecuting Clarence Darrow at Los Angeles, being one of the witnesses for the State, predicts Darrow will have to go through another trial. He admitted he was surprised at the verdict. He received his first information from a reporter today on his arrival in Chicago from Detroit.

"I cannot conceive any grounds on which the jury could acquit," said Burns. "The evidence was overwhelming in my opinion. As long as we have our jury system, I believe in supporting it and consider it would be out of place to comment upon the verdict. Knowing Capt. Fredericks, the prosecuting attorney, and his characteristics, I will be greatly surprised if he does not put Darrow on trial again.

"There are, I believe, twenty indictments against Darrow, and the verdict of innocent in the present case will not prevent another trial with another indictment in charging a distinct offense. I have no authority to speak for Mr. Fredericks, though it is my opinion that he will not quit."

Often you've said: "Goodness me! If I only had TEN hands instead of two!"

You could do more work with ten hands than with two.

And you can have more profitable fun in The Times' $3500 free Booklovers' Contest with ten chances at each picture than with ONE chance.

That's why The Times invented the Answer Book. At a nominal cost it gives a contestant an opportunity to make as many as ten different answers to each picture, while requiring only one copy of each picture.

To wise contestants, too, the best thing about the Answer Book is the fact that the FIRST cost of the book—the price of the book when you buy it— is the last and only cost involved in the contest. If you do not have an Answer Book you are continually getting extra pictures on which to make extra answers. If you have an Answer Book you simply paste one copy of each picture in the book, and beneath where each picture is pasted you write from one to ten answers to each picture.

And the more answers you make—the more reasonable answers—the better your chance of getting the CORRECT answer. Of course, no contestant is advised to slap down in the Answer Book any sort of title he comes across. Make your answers TELL. Earthquake.

A NEW COUNT OF THE VICTIMS.

Two Thousand Dead, Six Thousand Injured.

Less Barbarous as the Bloodthirsty Turk.

United States to the Aid of Stricken Moslems.

(BY WIRELESS AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 17.—An appalling story of suffering and damage caused by the recent earthquake in the region about the Sea of Marmora was told by the members of the relief expedition dispatched on August 14 to the stricken district, on board the United States gunboat Scorpion. The vessel arrived at Constantinople, which sailed here today.

The number of killed in the various towns and villages is placed at 2000 and injured, 6000.

It was found impossible to approach many villages on account of the débris resulting from the bodies buried under the ruins. Other villages were mere heaps of charred debris.

THE FIRST OF SURVIVORS.

The plight of the survivors has been pitiful enough because of the difficulty of obtaining building material. Earthquakes continue almost daily and many places along the coast. Six shocks were felt yesterday and many houses collapsed.

At Brusa, the appearance of which was deceptive, because a part of the houses standing on the hills surrounded by gardens, were not damaged, immediately in the rear of which a stick or stone was left standing. Numerous fissures were observed in the ground, but none of them, although the villagers reported that a cleft nearly 200 feet long opened in a hillside eight miles away.

LATEST CATASTROPHE.

Reports throughout the district affected by the catastrophe show an attempt to help themselves, keeping over their misfortunes pending the arrival of relief.

The Red Cross Society and the Constantinople Societies are doing all that is in the disaster.

A Greek transport Resmi-y-Al-Bahr has been converted into a hospital and anchored off the coast.

HASTENING TO THE RELIEF.

The American medical mission after treating 100 patients and finding that the work was overlapping that of other bodies, handed over its supplies and medical stores to the Vali of Brusa, who is superintending the relief measures. The American Red Cross Society continued to distribute supplies to the sufferers through the consular agencies here pursuant to subscriptions under the auspices of their respective legations. The Ecumenical patriarch congratulates making an appeal to the Archbishop of Athens.

Goding, Consul at Montevideo, South American country, has reported to the department that Uruguay is filled with reports from various countries sent to these shores showing methods that the country has been made that of all agricultural competitors attend for experience and spend all their time in the fields.

GOVERNMENT OF TURKEY.

Turkey is formed with Austria's Province of Give Macedonia and Albania Autonomy.

(SPECIAL A. P. TO THE TIMES.)

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The German Emperor has signed itself completed a project of Count Leopold Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian minister, to grant autonomy for the Austro-Hungarian provinces of Turkey. The Porte here has informed the chancellories of its readiness to accept his proposals diplomatically.

MOST EXPENSIVE BABY IN WORLD.

HEIR OF JOHN JACOB ASTOR WELL TAKEN CARE OF.

New York Gossip Has It that Dr. Edwin Bradford Cragin's Fee for Medical Attendance for First Six Weeks Will Probably Total Almost Fifty Thousand Dollars.

(By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.)

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] If all reports are true, John Jacob Astor VI is the most expensive baby ever brought into the world.

Gossip in the medical world is that Dr. Edwin Bradford Cragin, who is responsible for the safe advent of this interesting baby, is receiving $1000 a day for each and every day he is in attendance on Mrs. Madeline Force Astor and her young son. Dr. Cragin left his country place, the Wayside, Colchester, Ct., and took up his residence at the Astor mansion on Sunday, August 4. John Jacob Astor VI made his appearance on Wednesday, August 14.

LOOKING AHEAD.

It is expected that Dr. Cragin will remain a member of the Astor household until early in September, for Mrs. Astor is most anxious that her son shall be correctly started on a healthy and hearty career and that she herself shall suffer no relapse and shall be healthy and strong and normal, that she may properly rear the child to whom she must be both mother and father and to whom she expects and wants to devote her life.

The chances are that Dr. Cragin will be in constant attendance for nearly six weeks. At the reported rate of $1000 a day, his fee in that case would total between $40,000 and $45,000.

No prince of royal blood, no heir to kingly throne, ever entered this world under such expensive conditions. But, then, kings do not have the money to spend that American millionaires do.

APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Frank McIntyre as chief of the bureau of insular affairs with rank of Brigadier-General; Col. The Eye and Its Disease

PROF. WILSON'S TREATISE ON EYE DISEASES SHOULD BE READ BY EVERY PERSON WITH IMPAIRED EYE-SIGHT. THE BOOK IS FREE.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

Every reader afflicted with any impairment of eyesight should not fail to send for this book. It contains sixty-four pages and cover and describes in language so plain and interesting the various forms of diseases of the eye and sure and safe methods of treatment that any reader of ordinary intelligence may fully comprehend every word.

The author of this book is the inventor of "Actina," an instrument that is attracting the attention of people in all parts of the world owing to the wonderful results obtained from its use.

In the treatment of Eye disease the author says: "Nine out of ten persons wearing glasses might better be without them. Eyeglasses do not cure. The defects that make them necessary can be removed in most cases by proper treatment. There is also no need for cutting or drugging the eye for most forms of diseas — for the cause can be removed by a newer and more humane method."

The book also goes into full detail of the causes and effects of disease in general. It advocates a method in the treatment of disease that is based upon a humane and common-sense principle. It contains the recommendations of hundreds of intelligent persons in every walk of life who have been cured. A free trial of the "Actina" is offered in every case.

If the reader is interested, write for a copy of this book. It is absolutely free; a postal will bring it. Address Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89 E, 811 Walnut street, Kansas City, Mo.

If you have an Answer Book you need only one copy of each picture, yet you can make one or three or six or ten answers to each picture. You don't have to get extra pictures and coupons to make extra answers.

The top pages of the Answer Book are numbered from 1 to 77 inclusive. On the top of page 1 for instance, you paste picture No. 1. On the bottom of page 1 are ten spaces marked off. Here you write the answer or answers you want to make to picture No. 1. And so for picture No. 2. It is pasted on the top page of page 2, and the answer or answers written on the bottom of page 2, and so for the 77 pictures.

You need have only one copy of each of the 77 pictures, but you can write down as many answers to each picture as you want to, just so you don't make more than ten answers to any one picture.

The Answer Book is of convenient size to carry in the pocket or satchel. In shape it resembles a stenographer's note book—open from the bottom, like a note book, not from the side like a story book.

And, printed in the Answer Book are six certificates, each one of which is good for six pictures, with the exception of the last or sixth certificate which is good for 5 pictures. To get these six certificates with the Answer Book all that it is necessary for you to do is to sign a three months subscription blank, agreeing to take this paper for that period. You will need the paper every day any way in order to get the daily picture, keep posted about the contest, and so you might just as well take the paper and get the 35 FREE pictures with the Answer Book.

Certificate No. 1 is good for pictures from No. 36 to 41 inclusive
Certificate No. 2 is good for pictures from No. 42 to 47 inclusive
Certificate No. 3 is good for pictures from No. 48 to 53 inclusive
Certificate No. 4 is good for pictures from No. 54 to 59 inclusive
Certificate No. 5 is good for pictures from No. 60 to 65 inclusive
Certificate No. 6 is good for pictures from No. 66 to 70 inclusive

Be sure you send in the proper certificates for the pictures you desire, and remember that no certificates are redeemable until the pictures for which they are good have appeared in the paper.

For instance, suppose you wish pictures No. 36 to 41. If these pictures have already appeared in the paper, you tear out certificate No. 1 and present it at the office of The Times, and the clerk will give you the pictures, or send in the certificate by mail with the proper postage and the pictures will be sent you. If you wish pictures No. 36 to 47, tear out certificates No. 1 and 2. If you wish pictures No. 36 to 59, tear out certificates No. 1, 2, 3 and 4. Of course you cannot use a certificate for pictures until the actual pictures you want have been published in the paper. For instance, if you wished pictures No. 60 to 65, you would have to wait until pictures No. 60, 61, 62, 63, 64 and 65 had actually appeared in the paper.

Get the Contest Catalogue. Printed in this Catalogue you will find SEVEN certificates. Each certificate is good for five pictures. Thus you get 35 pictures free with the Catalogue. For instance, Certificate No. 1 is good for pictures No. 1 to 5; Certificate No. 2 is good for pictures from No. 6 to 10; Certificate No. 3 is good for pictures from No. 11 to 15; Certificate No. 4 is good for pictures from No. 16 to 20; Certificate No. 5 is good for pictures from No. 21 to 25; Certificate No. 6 is good for pictures from No. 26 to 30; Certificate No. 7 is good for pictures from No. 31 to 35.

How to Use the Certificates

If you wish pictures No. 1 to 5, tear out Certificate No. 1 and present it at the office of The Times, and the clerk will give you the pictures, or send in the certificate by mail with the proper postage and the pictures will be mailed to you. If you wish pictures from No. 1 to 10, tear out certificates No. 1 and 2. If you wish pictures from No. 1 to 20, tear out certificates No. 1, 2, 3 and 4. For instance, if you wished pictures No. 31 to 35, you would have to wait until pictures No. 31, 32, 33, 34 and 35 have been actually printed in the paper.

What the Catalogue Is

The Contest Catalogue itself is well worth possessing. It is a list of 4500 book titles. From this collection of titles the 77 titles represented by the 77 pictures that appear in the contest are selected. Thus, ALL the 77 correct titles are in the catalogue. No more valuable aid could be given a contestant than the catalogue furnished. Suppose a picture represents a battlefield, in which a company of cavalry is riding down and routing an infantry command. Suppose that picture was drawn to represent the title "Overcome by the Cavalry." Well, if you have a catalogue you will not have to know, to begin with, that such a title exists. Use your ingenuity in figuring out what titles that picture might represent. Then look in your catalogue to see if any such titles are listed there. If you do not find one of your possible titles in the catalogue, then you can be sure that the title is not correct.

For All the Correct Titles Are in the Catalogue

If you use your ingenuity and your catalogue you will win. And with every catalogue remember, certificates redeemable for the first 5 pictures are given away FREE. This is a double opportunity for you—the catalogue and the first 35 pictures together.

SEVEN RUNS IN SECOND ROUND.

Such Is Short Story of Why Oaks Won Yesterday.

Raleigh Loses Game Through Hard Bunched Hits.

Belated Rally by Tigers in Ninth Is Useless.

BY GREY OLIVER.

"Don't know what happened to me or to them," smiled Raleigh, while walking away from the game yesterday. "Just hit everything I had. Why, I had everything in that second inning and they made seven hits and seven runs off me. The balance of the game I didn't seem to pitch much and yet only one man got as far as second base."

Gregory could have said the same thing and gotten away with it, for after making the Tigers look like deuce spots for seven innings and not allowing them even a single, Bayless cracked him for the first Tiger hit in the eighth and then a lot more of them lit on me in the ninth for two doubles, a single and a pass and "drive up" four runs.

The final score was 7 to 4 for Oakland.

This was a near rally, but it did not get quite near enough to get by the Oaks, whose seven runs in the second were too many.

No use trying to beat Gregory yesterday. He gave no less than five passes and soaked Martinke with the ball, but was so good other ways that nothing that looked like a hit was made off him in seven innings. Carlisle was the only Tiger to get to second base and he arrived in the sixth on a pass and his own steal, but got no further.

A big crowd of fans watched the play, but those seven Oakland runs in the second knocked the enthusiasm out of them. Who can yell when the OTHER team grabs off seven runs? Eleven men faced Raleigh in that inning and Coy had the distinction of making a double and a single in the inning.

The Tigers made two of their three errors in this spasm. It was like a visitation. Just imagine a double, three singles, a hit by pitcher and three errors coming "at once," with a triple to center following behind that cleaned the bases of runners.

Then in about ten minutes, when Raleigh began to pitch the third inning, he was himself again, and during the remaining seven but one man got to second. This is more striped baseball for you.

In that eventful second Coy led off with a Texas league double over third base, just out of the reach of the speedy Carlisle, and Hetling beat out an infield single to first. Raleigh then soaked Cook in the back with the ball, filling the bases, and Sharpe's scratch single to right scored Coy and Hetling. Gregory bounced the ball off Hosp's shins, scoring Cook and putting Sharpe on third and Rohrer on second.

The first out of the inning was made when Leard flied to Bayless in right and then Patterson hammered out a hard triple to right center that scored the three runners ahead of him. Zacher cracked a hot one to center that sent in Patterson. Coy singled to center. Zacher was out at third and Hetling popped out.

It was good night for all of them for the remainder of the game.

Hundreds of the fans thought that Gregory was going to get away with a no-hit game. There was not a sign of a blow until after two were out in the eighth, when Bayless slammed a fast single to center. Brashear ended the inning with a fly to left.

Many of the bugs started to leave the grounds in the last of the ninth, with Oakland seven runs ahead and but one single for Vernon, but they suddenly stopped when the Tigers began their desperate rally.

Hosp grounded to Leard who juggled, and Litschi's grounder to Cook was thrown to Leard to force Hosp, but the runner was called safe.

McDonnell popped to Sharpe, Agnew fanned and then Gray, batting for Raleigh, electrified the crowd with a double against the center fence that scored Hosp and Litschi. A moment later Carlisle knocked a two-horse swat to the left fence and sent Gray in while the fans screamed with joy. Martinke rapped a single to left that scored Carlisle, but this was all, for although Bayless was passed Brashear ended the joy with an out at first on a grounder to Leard.

Fine game this for classy pitching and spasmodic thrills. The fans got all they wanted of both and also witnessed how easy it is for a team to make seven runs in seven minutes.

DISPUTE ARISES IN POWER BOAT CONTEST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—A dispute between James A. Pugh, owner and driver of the power boat Disturber III, and the judges at the water carnival today, marked the eighth day of the show.

Disturber III was a contestant for the William Wrigley Jr. $22,000 trophy for power boats and yesterday took first honors in the event. Today only Disturber III appeared for the second heat of the race and the judges postponed the contest.

Pugh objected to this action and made five slow laps in his boat in order to be able to lay claim to the trophy.

Susan II won the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy in a field of Chicago boats, although she finished only second. Spray was first today but the race was decided on points, Spray winning second money.

Another Tight Fit.

BEAVERS TAKE CLOSE GAME.

Timely Swats Beat Bill Tozer Out of Victory.

Klawitter Holds Angels to Three Hits.

Double-Header Scheduled for Sunday Afternoon.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Portland and Los Angeles ball tossers witnessed a circus pageant today, found the spirit contagious, went out and staged a one-ring exhibition of their own in the mud, and as the barometer records the Beavers still in fourth place, it is only necessary to add that the score by which Portland won was 2 to 1.

It was a single-ringed entertainment because Klawitter, the big German pitcher, was about the whole show. His pitching was magnificent. He allowed but three hits in nine innings, and only one of the trio was a clean-cut, legitimate single.

Big Bill Tozer was on slab duty for Los Angeles and, while he was found for nine singles, he kept the bingling scattered, except in two innings, when timely wallops by Chadbourne and Doane scored the needed tallies.

Kibbie, the Portland colt recruit, who played his first game in AA company, is another who has his name posted on the bulletin of boosts. In addition to making lots of noise around the third sack, scooping in everything that came his way, Kibbie plunked out a Texas leaguer back of third base in the third inning that started the scoring. Klawitter sacrificed him along and both went safe on Tozer's error. Chadbourne filled the bases on a hit along the third base line and then Doane hit against the right wall, scoring Kibbie. He was caught off first and Rodgers and Krueger were easy outs.

Chadbourne's second hit in the fifth inning, a bunt down the third-base line by Doane that was scored as a single, sending Chadbourne to third base, and Rodgers's sacrifice fly to Core gave the Beavers their second and final tally.

Hits by Daley and Moore and an infield out gave the Dillonites their lone score in the seventh inning after they had previously threatened to tie up in the fifth. Up to that time Klawitter had pitched no-hit, no-run ball. Starting off the fifth Moore sent a grounder toward first that Hank Butcher balled up, Moore making second. A sacrifice placed him at the threshold, but Klawitter whiffed Lober and Butcher retired the side on a swell foul catch.

A double-header starting at 1:30 p.m. Sunday will conclude the series, with Harkness and Koestner opposed to Leverenz and Chech. The score:

SEALS SURPRISED.

BEAT SENATORS AGAIN.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] The Seals showed a flash of fighting spirit in the eighth inning of today's game, which made the fans forget about the past. They pulled off a belated batting rally, which turned defeat into a victory when it looked as if they were about to take their customary beating.

The Senators took the lead in the opening frame and held it until the sixth, when Mundorff came into the limelight again with an over-the-fence clout. It was the same trick he performed on Friday. His clout happened when the bases were empty.

Miller's ascension in the eighth helped to break down the spirits of the local rooters, when the Senators turned two walks into runs. The grand finish of the Seals made the fans forget about Miller's wildness and everything else.

The opening inning passed by without either team doing any damage. In the second frame Miller appeared in the role of a philanthropist by walking Lewis. H. Miller did the customary stunt of sacrificing, and on Irelan's out, Lewis moved along to the third bag, and then the Seals' heaver allowed his foot to slip by making a wild pitch, and Lewis crossed the rubber. It was a soft run.

Fitzgerald was serving a fancy variety of ball, and there were no indications of him breaking down. He was in a hole in the fifth with the bags crowded, but Frank Miller grounded to short, and the Senatorial infield executed a fast double.

In the seventh the Seals managed to get a man as far as third with one down, but again Frank Miller failed to deliver, going out on an easy grounder, and Williams, who was on third, was detained there.

MUNDY HITS HOMER.

Mundy's home-run swipe occurred in the sixth. He was the first up, and without any sparring tore into one of Fitzgerald's benders and transported it into another yard. This swatting act tied it up to the eighth frame, when the Senators took the lead again, which they held but a short time.

Kreitz and Fitzgerald were carefully laid away, when Miller treated Shinn and Madden kindly by issuing them free transportation to the initial sack. Ex-Captain O'Rourke, who was benched on two previous trips to the rubber by strikes, was asked to handle the big job. He fouled off a half-dozen balls, when Miller made a wild heave, and Shinn moved along to third, while Madden halted at second. This bullet served Patsy with a nice straight ball, which sailed over the plate. It was evidently the kind that Patsy relishes, as he swung his long bat and met the hide on the seam, it taking a line course to center field for a single, and Shinn and Madden ambled home.

It looked like curtains for the Seals, but they went about their task like a bunch of bulldogs. Wuffli grounded out to Orr, but Del Howard had better luck, as he drove a fast liner to the right-field boards. Corhan, who had been swatting hard all afternoon, drove the ball to deep left. Lewis allowed the ball to get by him, and Howard raced home, while Corhan pulled up at second. Gedeon proved a good waiter, and was given a pass.

The job was up to young Williams. He had not been able to tap Fitzgerald for a hit in the early rounds. He picked out one, which he smashed to the ground, and it went down in high bounds to short. Orr tried desperately to get the runner, as he realized that it would be a close fit. His toss went wild and Corhan scored and Gedeon went to third. Williams tried to go to second, but was trapped between the bags. While they were trying to run down Williams, Gedeon scored the winning run.

...IGHTY GIANTS DROP HOT GAME TO RICHIE.

...Record-Breaking Crowd of Crazy Fans Howl With Joy as Mathewson Wilts Before the Cubs in Fierce Nine-Inning Battle—Archer's Hits Tie Score and Win Game.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

...AGO, Aug. 17.—In a desperately fought eleven-inning battle that kept the spectators at the West Side park in a state of excitement for nearly four hours, Chicago defeated New York today, before the largest baseball crowd ever witnessed a week-day game in Chicago.

It is estimated that 30,000 persons were in the park, of which number only 18,000 could be admitted for the reason that there was not standing space.

The victory made it two out of three games played in Chicago and tonight the Cubs are only five games behind the Giants in the race for the National League pennant.

Mathewson, who returned to the game after a five-day suspension for indulging in a baseball and drove out a home run and two-base hits that figured prominently in the scoring, lit was the batsman's single into deep center field, which scored Saier with the run that gave the victory.

Richie pitched well until the tenth inning, holding Chicago to seven hits. Zimmerman made all the runs, driving out two doubles and a single.

Zimmerman also pushed Chicago to victory in the first game was hit freely.

GRAHAM TO RETIRE FROM SENATOR TEAM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] This will be Charley Graham's last season as manager of the Sacramento baseball team. Graham has found that his automobile business takes so much of his time that he cannot give the proper attention to the baseball team.

Jack Atkin, the majority owner of stock in the baseball club, is now on his way East in search of a man to take Graham's place. When Atkin left here he had two men in mind for the managership berth. His first choice was Doc White, the famous pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, and the second was Billy Sullivan, the Chicago catcher, who did so much to develop White and Ed Walsh as pitchers.

TWO MORE PUGS ARRIVE.

Middleweight Champion of England and a Bantam Hit Old New York. Looking for Matches.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Jack Harrison, middleweight champion of England and holder of the Lord Lonsdale belt, is the latest pugilistic arrival from London. He expects to box the winner of the McGoorty-Mohr bout to be held in Michigan on Labor Day.

Frankie Morgan, bantam champion of Wales, who won the British title from Digger Stanley recently by default, came over with Harrison and is anxious to meet Johnny Coulon.

RED MEN ELECT CHIEFS.

Appeal to Order to Observe Memorial Day When Grand Army Passes Away.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON (Cal.) Aug. 17.—The Improved Order of Red Men, now holding their annual sun session in this city, has elected H. C. Hibbard of Riverside, Great Prophet; C. R. Winfield of Petaluma, Great Sachem; W. R. Twambley of San Francisco, Great Senior Sagamore; Porter L. Bliss of San Francisco, Great Chief of Records; S. H. Wilcox of San Francisco, Great Keeper of Wampum. Great Trustees: Thomas Green of Stockton and Edward C. Levy of San Francisco. Great Representatives to the Great Council, which meets at Chi... S. C.; H. C. Gesford, G. H. H... H. C. Hibbard and Frank Bell.

One of the principal features was the address of Sachem Gardner of Watsonville. He declared that the Grand Army of the Republic would soon be mowed down by death and that there would be no organization to properly observe Memorial Day unless the Red Men took up the matter.

Silver cups were presented to Sacramento, Pinole and Vallejo for having the best-represented teams in the parade last night.

LEGG IT AT LAST.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 17.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Harry G. Legg, Minikahda Club, Minneapolis, this afternoon won for the fourth consecutive year the championship of the Trans-Mississippi Gold Association when he defeated W. D. Middleton, Davenport, O., playing from the Rock Island Arsenal Club, 4 up and 3 to go over the Minikahda course here.

For two years prior to this winning of the championship Legg was runner up.

FAMOUS TRAINING CAMP TO BE TORN DOWN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—The "Wigwam," famous in the annals of Fistiana, is to be torn down. For thirty-five years world's champions have trained there.

In the old wooden pavilion across the bay, in Alameda, Jack Dempsey had his quarters, when he was thought invincible. Peter Jackson trained there for his battle with Jim Corbett. Joe Gans worked there for his last fight with Battling Nelson.

"Lanky Bob" Fitzsimmons, "Pompadour Jim" Corbett, Jim Jeffries, "The Big Fellow;" "Terrible Teddy" McGovern, Joe Wolcott, the "Barbadoes Demon;" George Dixon, Jimmie Britt, Tommy Ryan, Eddie Hanlon, and a long list of others whose epitaphs sprinkle the book of records, made ready there for some of their best remembered bouts.

But on September 6 the walls of the Wigwam will echo for the last time to the thump of padded fists. On that night the Alameda Athletic Club will stage a farewell exhibition, and the next day the wreckers will be busy among the falling timbers.

JOHNSON MIGHTY MAN IN WASHINGTON.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Aug. 17.—[Special Dispatch.] If you ask any local baseball fan who is the best pitcher in the world he will answer wkithout hesitation that it is Walter Johnson, the local star.

The big Californian has already tied the American League record for consecutive victories made by Jack Chesbro of the Highlanders in 1904. The old mark is fourteen and Johnson is confident that he will beat it early next week.

Not content with equaling one record, Johnson has now made up his mind to go after every record on the books. He is of iron nerve and he has no fear of losing his head when he reaches nineteen straight like Rube Marquard of the Giants did recently.

Six Rounds to a Draw.

SAPULPA (Okla.) Aug. 16.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Tommy Dixon of Kansas City and Emmett West of Kiefer, Okla., fought six rounds to a draw here last night.

Stanley's Brother Wins.

WATERTOWN (N. Y.) Aug. 17.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Ed Ketchel, brother of the late Stanley Ketchel, knocked out Eddie Murphy of Buffalo in the fourth round of a bout here last night.

Freddie Welsh Wins.

WINNIPEG (Man.) Aug. 17.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Freddie Welsh had the better of every round of the twelve boxed last night in the Auditorium Rink, against Phil Knight of Kansas City, outpointing Knight from every angle.

WILL RECOVER FROM WOUND.

Man Shoots Himself in Left Breast on Frasier Pier, But Bullet Misses Vital Spot.

SANTA MONICA, Aug. 17.—Physicians at the St. Catherine Hospital state that John B. Brice, who attempted to end his life by the gunshot route last night, will live. Brice was found just outside the dance hall on the Frasier pier, a gun in his hand and blood streaming from his breast. He was removed to the hospital, and the bullet removed. The missile had not passed through a vital part. Brice, years ago, was with the Primrose & West minstrels, at that time commanding a large salary. He has recently been doing turns at the seaside theaters. He has been very despondent, and had informed friends that he would end his life. He is 55 years of age.

Sherman Page, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, which was appointed to look into the water situation, will file suit against the water company Monday, it is stated. Attorney F. H. Taft has drawn up the complaint against the company, alleging that they have failed to supply their patrons with water. F. O. Lee, auditor of the Santa Monica Water Company, states that the company has had a series of misfortunes, and these, coupled with the desire of every resident to use as much water as possible when it appears in the pipes, has prevented them from getting a reserve supply.

Henry Mundell has returned from the Malibu with two deer. He reports that there are more deer in the mountains this year than ever before. M. Steadman and son and Ivy Bray shot two deer each, and have brought them home. They, too, are pleased with the outlook for game. C. E. Rutledge, J. E. Cheney and J. L. Barber shot deer on the first day, the smallest weighing 150 pounds.

No news has been received of the missing Dr. Henry Esmond of Seattle, who dropped from sight ten days ago. He had apartments at the Windermere Hotel, on Ocean avenue, and his friends at the hotel have been uneasy regarding his absence. It is feared that he was drowned while taking one of his usual strolls out on the municipal pier.

Six pupils of the Santa Monica vacation school, F. T. Long, X. P. Bouris, Roudi Partridge, F. R. Doscher, H. H. Escheiman and Harold Rigney, were given certificates entitling them to admission into the High School at exercises held last evening, presided over by Superintendent of Schools H. M. Rebok.

CITY TO ENTER BUSINESS.

Venice Manufactures a Fine Concrete Post and Goes After a County Contract—News Briefs.

VENICE, Aug. 17.—The city of Venice is going into the ornamental light post business. Having made a success of manufacturing concrete posts for the property owners here, the city will make a low bid on furnishing posts for the county boulevards. At the city yards near Tokio there are hundreds of ornamental posts made by day workmen under the direction of the street superintendent. So efficient have the workmen become, and so cheaply can the city get the posts out, that the cost to the citizens of running the city government may be greatly lessened by furnishing the county and outside municipalities with the posts.

BEACH BRIEFS.

Little girls, whose ages range from 8 to 10 years, will act as pall bearers for little Vivian Rogers Greenfield, slain by her stepfather. The funeral will take place Monday, from the Kurzelle parlors, when Letha Menzies, Edwina Brown, Beth Cribb and Myrtle Kirkelie will carry the casket. Liberal citizens of Venice have subscribed to a fund of $200 to bury the child and furnish the penniless mother with a neat egg.

The Dippy-dip and the captive aeroplane, two amusement contrivances that have been rather late in arriving this summer, will make trial trips tomorrow. C. Y. Burns, secretary of the Abbott Kinney Company, will ride in the first car on the dippy-dip which goes swinging through the surf from the bathhouse to the breakwater tomorrow afternoon. There will be only one cable working, and regular trips will be begun Monday. The other two cables will be added immediately. The aeroplanes which swing from a cable over the Windward pier will be in running order tomorrow, it is expected.

Hotel del Coronado, ideal service.

STRONG ORGANIZATION.

Taft Men Will Wage a Campaign Vigorously in Orange County. Short News Stories.

SANTA ANA, Aug. 17.—A strong organization is being perfected in this county to boost for the Taft candidates, C. C. Chapman of Fullerton for State Senator and A. W. Rutan of Santa Ana for Assemblyman. A meeting of Republicans held Wednesday night selected T. B. Talbert of Huntington Beach, Fred Struck of Orange, F. C. Spencer of Anaheim, A. S. Bradford of Placentia, O. M. Robbins, L. A. West and M. R. Beninger of Santa Ana to take charge of the campaign. This committee held a meeting this morning at Attorney Rutan's office. A vigorous fight for Chapman and Rutan is to be put up.

The Orange County Rod and Reel Club is to hold its first tournament tomorrow at Serra. Prizes are offered for the best casting and for the most fish caught. A barbecue is to be served, John Forster of San Juan Capistrano having it in charge.

Miss Juanita Metzgar, aged 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Metzgar, died this morning. She was a beautiful girl. Two years in succession she was chosen as a page to the queen of the Orange County Carnival of Products.

The city board of equalization adjourned today after sitting for a week. Almost the only changes made in City Assessor Vegely's rolls were reductions under the old soldiers' exemption act for those who failed to claim the exemption when the assessment was made.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

LONE BANDIT ROBS THE CREW.

Pacific Electric Car Held Up on Pasadena Line.

New Name for Consolidated Telephone System.

Mexican Woman Pours Gasoline on Fire in Stove.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PASADENA, Aug. 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A lone bandit dressed in overalls, and wearing a bandana handkerchief with eye holes cut in it over his face, held up Conductor F. L. Lincoln and Motorman H. O. Blair of Pacific Electric East Washington street car No. 214 at the end of the line at 8:30 o'clock last night.

The place is a lonely spot three miles northeast of the city. The car men were awaiting time to start back to town and were sitting inside the car, when he quietly stole upon them. They observed him simultaneously and saw that he had a revolver leveled upon them.

He commanded them to throw up their hands and then began searching their pockets. From the motorman he took $4.65 and from the conductor, about $20. By a ruse, Blair, who was held up once before on a Short Line car, saved his own and Lincoln's watches.

"You don't want to take those," he said as the highwayman attempted to unfasten his watch chain. "They are too easy to trace. You will surely get caught if you take them."

"I guess that's right," the robber replied.

He then commanded them to go to the front of the car and made his escape in the darkness. The car man say that he wore a tight-fitting cap of black cloth.

Police Captain Odell, Police Detectives Bett and Constable Newell gave chase in an automobile. They and Chief Wood found the handkerchief that he had worn, in the road near the place of the hold-up. There was no dust, and the trail was lost.

Chief Wood, who with members of the Board of Education, was inspecting the school grounds, saw a police red light and met the incoming car at Lake avenue, establishing a record for quick response to a call.

MERGER COMPLETE.

J. D. Holmes, manager of the Home Telephone Company, last night announced some of the arrangements that have been made to govern the operation of the system when the consolidation of the Home and Pacific companies is effected, October 1, next.

The name of the new company, Holmes says, will be the Home Telephone and Telegraph Company. While this will not be official until the State Railroad Commission has approved it, and the permanent consolidation will not be consummated for a year, it is already in common use and new apparatus that arrived yesterday was so billed.

Subscribers will not be obliged to change their numbers. The calls for the coming year will be trunked from one plant to the other, and in the new directory those that are now Pacific numbers will be prefixed with "Main," and those that are now Home numbers, with some other term, which has not yet been determined upon. Holmes declares that, while for the telephone companies it will be an expensive method of operating to trunk the calls back and forth, no time will be lost, and that a call for a Home instrument for a number prefixed with "Main," or vice versa, will meet with as ready a response as where the prefix and instrument correspond.

Where a subscriber now has but one telephone he will retain its number, and where there are both instruments the one most desirably placed will be left and its number retained.

"The new arrangement will mean a reduction in rates for some for the coming year," said Holmes last night. "The State Railroad Commission will, of course, ultimately pass upon the rates to be charged, but for the coming year, where rentals of different rates now paid by subscribers who have both telephones, the minimum rate will be charged.

"There will be no automatic phones and we have determined to have the operators repeat all of the numerals separately, rather than to use the word 'double,' which, by experiment, has been found to be sometimes confusing, and to speak with a rising inflection so that the person making the call may check its correctness with either 'yes' or 'no.'

"Everything possible will be done for the convenience of subscribers; and in order that we may have the new system in operation by October 1, which we think we shall be able to do, we ordered the new switchboards sent from Chicago by express."

There are three of these switchboards. They are of an improved type and will, together register the calls of 7000 subscribers.

The commercial department of the Pacific company will probably be moved into the office of the Home company, No. 68 North Raymond avenue.

Holmes said last night that all new contracts will be drawn as dictated by the city, and that all existing contracts with either company will be respected, without change, after the merger of the systems next October.

Mrs. Apolonie Avilla, a Mexican woman, who lives at No. 182 Ritzman street, was taken to the Pasadena Hospital at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon seriously burned on the right arm and right side, as the result of her having poured gasoline into a coal stove while the fire was burning.

The woman was preparing supper, and when the fire would not burn well she attempted to pour some kerosene into the stove to help it along. By mistake she picked up a can of gasoline.

She had no more than lifted it over the fire than she was enveloped in flames from head to foot. She dropped the can and fled screaming out of the house. Acencion Gonzales, who was near by, smothered the flames with his coat.

The fire department was called, and a fire that resulted from the accident was extinguished with only a nominal loss. The house is situated near the gas works.

J. A. Phelps, president of the J. A. Phelps Company, yesterday was chosen president of the Pasadena Merchants' Association, to succeed T. D. Nestor, who resigned a short time ago, upon leaving the city. Phelps is a well-known business man and has long been an active member of the organization.

NEW TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.

The City Council next Tuesday probably will consider the subject of traffic regulation in the city and will likely adopt a proposed ordinance that has been drawn by Assistant City Attorney Munger.

The chief feature of the new ordinance, if adopted, will be that relating to public carriages, which will then have to be kept at the curbs surrounding the parks, instead of in the principal business streets. Another clause will regulate the leaving of vehicles of all kinds in front of stores and office buildings. Half an hour will probably be made the time limit.

COLORED CONVENTION.

Colored Baptists from many parts of the State will hold forth in Pasadena this week. They will come to attend the twenty-first annual session of the Western Baptist Association of Southern California, which convenes at the Friendship Baptist Church next Tuesday. Rev. P. E. Robinson of San Diego will make the opening address. Many delegates are expected.

Although there are not now known to be any cases of infantile paralysis in Pasadena, two sick children are under observation by City Health Officer Black.

ARIZONA BOY WINS OUT.

Secures Forty-eight Subscriptions and Travels Considerable Distance, Thoroughly Satisfied With Result.

AVALON, Aug. 17.—If anyone is in doubt whether or not the "Times Camp" is appreciated by the boys of Southern California and Arizona, the experiences of a belated visitor, Fidel Esparza of Morenci, Ariz., should convince all doubting Thomases.

Fidel lives in the wild and rugged country, twenty-five miles from the mining town of Morenci, and qualified for a free trip to The Times Camp at Catalina by securing forty-eight subscriptions to The Times. This energetic boy was obliged to cover all the camps within a radius of twenty-five miles from his home to find enough people who could speak English and were not already taking The Times.

He was finally successful and was notified to be at The Times office on the morning of August 15. He arrived two days late and expressed surprise that he should be expected to travel twenty-five miles for his mail, go home, and back again over the same route to catch his train, all in two days.

Fidel is now happily housed at The Times Camp, with the record for distance traveled to his credit. He says it is worth the struggle.

While interest in the Arizona boy's thrilling trip was still at fever heat, two other big surprises delighted the boys in the form of a large consignment of the Tropical Preserving Company's famous strawberry jam and mince meat. When the boys have bread and butter and Smith's strawberry jam and mince pies on the bill of fare they forego all other luxuries.

AFTER AN INVESTIGATION

Glendale Committee Recommends the Purchase of Water Plants by the City—Short News Stories.

GLENDALE, Aug. 17.—After investigating the water question of this city for several weeks Mayor Thomas W. Watson, who with Harry B. Lynch, manager of the Glendale electric lighting system, was authorized to look into the question and make suggestions to the people of Glendale as to where and how this city should acquire or establish a water system of its own, makes a public statement favoring the plan of the city buying out the existing companies and making the necessary improvements. Today Mr. Watson made the following report:

"The rapid growth of our city has rendered the present distributing system inadequate. However, it is now desirable that each company proceed independently to improve its system, which would result in the duplication of reservoirs, trunk lines, and in many instances mains and other equipments upon which their customers would have to pay interest. Neither is it desirable to duplicate the present system with an entirely new municipal plant as that would result in the people having to pay interest, together with the operation and upkeep expenses of both systems.

"The most desirable method of procedure to establish a municipal plant is the purchase of all present systems, consolidate them under one management and make the extension and improvements in accordance with one plan. In almost every instance cities find it desirable to proceed in this way."

City Assessor George B. Hoffman makes the following report as to the valuation of Glendale for assessment purposes for the present year: 2560 owners, valuation of $2,656,359. The above includes a valuation of $540,000 placed on the West Glendale section. The probability is that the tax rate will remain about as it was last year.

Fifteen freeholders, with John Robert White as chairman, have been elected to frame a freeholders' charter for this city, which is desirous of changing from the city of the sixth class to one of the freeholders' charter form of government. The freeholders as named are George U. Moyes, Ezra Parker, Frank L. Muhleman, Joseph Kirby, John Hunchberger, E. D. Goode, Frank Campbell, Hiram E. Colby, R. Gilhousen, Wilmot Parcher, George V. Williams, J. C. Sherer, C. E. Damerall, Charles E. Stanley and E. U. Emery. As the election for these freeholders has been called for September 27, the petitions bearing these names will be placed in the field at once. Each member of this committee is required to have been a resident of this city for five years.

MAY SUBMIT A NEW CHARTER.

Long Beach Revision Committee Has Troubles.

General Manager for City Seems Popular Solution.

Southern California Assembly Extends Its Sessions.

LONG BEACH, Aug. 17.—The revision committee members appointed by the City Council several weeks ago to recommend amendments to the existing charter are finding that their duties are going to be far more arduous than they expected. They are not yet decided whether it is best to go ahead with amendments to the present instrument or recommend to the Council the election of a Board of Freeholders to submit an entire new charter.

The latter plan is favored for it developed last night that in presenting a few form of government in the shape of amendments there existed the danger that as each amendment was voted on separately one might be adopted and another defeated which would be essential to the successful one and the result would be a mixup far worse than any occasioned by the present defects.

Another question discussed at length was the liquor section, whether it should be incorporated in the charter or left to an initiative vote. The City Attorney ruled that the question would have to be handled in the charter.

In discussing the form of commission government the Staunton and Lockport plans seemed to be most in favor, this plan providing for a Council for five or seven members, one of whom shall be Mayor and this Council to secure one man to act as general manager of the entire city, exercising actual control over every department of the government with the help of assistants chosen by civil service, providing intercommunication between departments without the red tape process.

It is also claimed this plan combines the greatest efficiency with least cost of maintenance, though giving one man considerable power.

Pending a final decision on the freeholders question the committee decided to continue its labors and will draft a rough outline of what they will favor, so that if it is decided to have an entire new charter the freeholders selected can have a good start on their new instrument which must be prepared and submitted to the people before the next Legislature meets and adjourns.

WEAK WALLS.

The officials of the Baker Iron Works today called off their workmen engaged in placing two 50,000 gallon water tanks on the top of the new three-story Mercantile building is found that the steel work in the southwest corner was not strong enough to hold the empty tanks. An engineer will be sent down to investigate and recommend the necessary reinforcing of the supports. The tanks are so large that they had to be hoisted to the roof and there riveted together and when the vibration caused by the riveting began to be felt by the building tiny streams began to appear in the walls, and the men through their foreman protested. It is though that an extra steel column concreted will afford the extra support needed. The big tanks are part of an automatic fire sprinkling system, the only one so far in the city.

ASSEMBLY EXTENDED.

Although the annual convention of the Southern California Assembly was scheduled to last only two weeks, so much extra work has developed that it has been found necessary to extend the session over next Tuesday although the Sunday-school training and Bible classes closed this morning. The business session of the association will take place next Tuesday afternoon when it is expected that the proposed amended by-laws making the association interdenominational with additional directors from other churches added.

New officers are also to be elected. Tomorrow the assembly sermons will be delivered by Dr. E. R. Dille of the Central Methodist Church, San Francisco, at the First Methodist Church, an overflow meeting being addressed at the auditorium by Dr. J. K. Kramer. The Sunday-school sessions this morning were largely occupied with examinations and large classes were graduated in specialization work, story telling, elementary methods.

M. W. Cowan, who was driving the auto containing his father, two sisters and Jack Whitney, which was struck and wrecked at the Florence crossing last night by a Pacific Electric train, says that the automatic wigwag signal, which halted him as a northbound train passed, failed to perform its function when the southbound train came along and only his quick swerving of the machine saved the entire party from death. Rev. W. C. Cowan is the most severely injured of the party, his shoulder, collarbone and left side being bruised and cut. A passing auto brought the party to Long Beach. Today the wrecked machine was towed home.

Mayor Hatch, who has had the budget prepared by Council under consideration for five days, today returned the document to the clerk with his signature approving the Council's appropriation of $563,239.10, which is $56,000 in excess of the auditor's estimates of probable revenues. The Mayor claims that other revenues not counted by the auditor will provide for the excess.

ALHAMBRA NOTES.

ALHAMBRA, Aug. 17.—City Assessor O. M. Caulk has completed his assessment work and his statement shows that $20,000 additional taxes will be collected this year without increasing the present rate. This result has been accomplished because of the fact that the present assessment was made in a much more thorough manner than heretofore and many pieces of property that have been overlooked in former years failed to escape this year. This has raised property valuations from $4,842,759 to $7,052,245, a gain of $2,209,486. In addition to this, taxes subject to operative tax have been increased from $166,950 to $423,000. This brings the taxes to be collected this year up to approximately $74,000 as against $54,000 last year. The increased valuation of property gives the city a much larger bonding possibility. Since this valuation is now $7,052,245, the city can carry bonds to the extent of $1,077,800. With bonds outstanding amounting to $51,000, and those of $173,000 voted last week, making a total of $224,000, the city will still have a bonding possibility of $853,800.

H. H. Blackledge, who has held the offices of City Engineer and Street Superintendent for the last two years, has been relieved of a portion of his duties by the appointment of T. B. Downer to the office of Street Superintendent. The great amount of street work now under way and the numerous municipal improvements which will shortly be started as the result of the recent bond issue necessitated a division of these offices.

TO PURCHASE CANYON WATER.

Glendale Chamber of Commerce Adopts Resolution Advising Council of Its Duties in Premises.

GLENDALE, Aug. 17. — Notwithstanding the fact that a number of the organizations of this city favor delaying the matter of calling an election to vote bonds for the establishment of a municipal water system here, and also disregarding the fact that this chamber previously passed a resolution to that effect, the Glendale Chamber of Commerce has just passed a resolution, which reads as follows:

"Resolved, That whereas a resolution was passed at a recent meeting held under the auspices of this chamber asking that the City Trustees do not call an election for the purpose of voting bonds to purchase Verdugo Canyon water until a further investigation by disinterested engineers, and

"Whereas, such a resolution was not indorsed by the members of this organization;

"Be it resolved, therefore, That the members of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce hereby recommend that the City Trustees should call an election immediately for the purpose of voting bonds in the amount of $225,000 to purchase a municipal water plant, but that no bonds shall be sold until a definite offer at a stated price has been made to the city of Verdugo Canyon water, and a definite oger and price has been submitted from Los Angeles for a supply of the Owens River water, providing such offer is made to the city within four months. Also, that no action be taken by the Board of Trustees to purchase a supply from either sounce, until an election has been called and voters have decided which shall be purchased and that the Trustees shall act only in accordance with said majority vote."

WILL CLOSE SUNDAY.

The thirteenth annual session of the Southern California conference of the Seventh Day Adventists Church will close with the evening service tomorrow, after having been in progress for the past ten days. During the past ten days there has been a good attendance at the services, the etimate being that more than 100,000 persons having been present at the various services during the session. The guests attending the session will begin to leave for their homes tomorrow morning, while many of the visitors will stay for several days longer. At this convention much progress in the work of the church during the past year was reported, and many eloquent speakers were heard. The delegates to the convention from the various parts of the conference numbered about 2500, while about 1000 other visitors were present.

WATTS BRIEFS.

WATTS, Aug. 17.—According to the report of the City Health Officer there are but two cases of infantile paralysis in this city, both of mild form. It is almost certain that the patients will recover so completely that there will be nothing to indicate they were ever afflicted with the disease.

City Engineer Fay has completed the new map of the city, bringing it down to date, and showing all lots numbered, as well as the new additions and the new streets. The map has been adopted by the Trustees as the official map of the city of Watts.

Sloan Pitzer of Alhambra was in the city today, in the interests of his candidacy for Congress. He is making his race as an out-and-out Taft man, and even goes so far as to say that the election of Roosevelt would bring about conditions similar to those that prevailed in the time of Coxey's army. Mr. Pitzer made a very favorable impression with the citizens of Watts, and will no doubt poll a large vote here.

If matters can be so arranged, there is to be a joint debate on the subject of city and county consolidation before the Progressive League at its next meeting on August 24. The president is now looking for men who will argue either side of the question. If he is successful, the debate will undoubtedly attract an immense crowd.

Inter-City Matters.

ONE HUNDRED MEN MEET AT A COVINA BANQUET.

COVINA, Aug. 17.—One hundred representative citizens from all the cities of the San Gabriel Valley, from Upland to Venice gathered at Covina last evening in the first regular meeting of the San Gabriel Valley Inter-City Commission.

The important action of the evening was a thorough discussion of the proceedings of the proposed county charter.

Senator N. W. Thompson, chairman of the Board of Freeholders, the first speaker on the subject, said that he was glad to be present to explain what had been done, since the first object of the board was that the citizens of the county should know just how their representatives were acting. All the proceedings of the board, he said, were public, and the members wished that everything could be above board and clear. The purpose of framing the charter for the county is to give home rule and local government to fit the special needs of the district instead of the long-distance government from Sacramento. Under the present system, the number and compensation of all county offices is fixed by the State Legislature, so that in the case of special needs arising in any one district there is no way to meet them before the next session of the legislature, which may be two years distant. Senator Thompson emphasized the fact that the charter had nothing to do with consolidation, as is generally believed.

An initiative petition has been filed bringing before the people at the November election, the question of allowing cities and towns of more than 350,000 people, to consolidate, providing the majority of all municipalities in the district vote in favor of it. Unincorporated communities in the county could be annexed with a city by simple majority vote of the city and the county together, so that they might be compelled to join against their will. Since few of the advocates of the consolidation favor taking in the whole of Los Angeles county, consolidation would mean county division and the loss of the trustees now held by Los Angeles as the first county of the State.

Prof. J. H. Strine of Downey, another member of the board, discussed the question of whether county officers should be elected or appointed and said that the majority of the charter framers believe that all the officers except the Supervisors, District Attorney, County Auditor and County Assessor should be appointive. The reasons for the decision was set forth at length, consisting principally of the point that with a few elective offices the voter would be able to know much more about each candidate, also that the Board of Supervisors would be able to appoint experts for such offices as the superintendent of schools and other offices where technical knowledge is required.

Frank R. Seaver of the board said that the charter, like all other public matters, would be in the form of a compromise of necessity, but that the members of the board were working with great harmony, and with the public good at heart. He added that he was personally in favor of seven Supervisors, instead of five, in order that the county districts might be more strongly represented. George F. Kerneghan, another member of the board, spoke in favor of electing Supervisors at large rather than by districts, and placing all matters concerning highways in the hands of special commissioners.

There followed questions by several of the delegates present, as to the details of the work of the board and these were clearly answered by Senator Thompson. Upon motion of Mr. Pence of Covina, the chairman was authorized to appoint a committee of five to confer with the Board of Freeholders from time to time, and to keep the commission informed as to their progress.

The meeting then turned its attention upon the "Lighted Way" and strong expressions of approval of the idea of expending the lights upon all county good roads were voiced by many different representatives. Mayor Dorland of Monrovia called the project magnificent. Mr. Smith of Azusa said "Azusa will come through." Mr. Wright of San Gabriel said that this was one of the grandest things that mind ever conceived, and similar thoughts were enunciated by Mr. Smith of Pomona, Mr. Ardis of Downey, Dr. Thorne of Lamanda Park, Capt. Davis and Mayor Maulsby of Whittier. The last-named gentleman wished the commission to recommend to the Board of Supervisors the opening up of Turnbull Canyon as a short-line highway from Covina to Whittier. This matter was referred to the Executive Committee. One of the most interesting, as well as amusing, thoughts of the evening came from Robert Jordan of Alhambra, who exorted all the valley cities to follow the good example of Alhambra in providing "lighted ways."

C. L. Smith of Azusa invited the commission to meet in that city at its next gathering on September 6, explaining that a large dining-room would be provided so that some of the speeches might be heard during the meal and so shorten the time required for the meeting. The invitation was accepted and at a late hour the commission adjourned, after voting thanks to the ladies of the Catholic Church at Covina, who had provided a delicious dinner, and to Mayor C. S. Beardsley for his careful management of the evening. The following delegates were present:

Alhambra—J. B. Sexton, Sloan Pitzer, Robert Jordan, G. W. Cameron, G. B. Waring, R. G. Field and H. J. Goudge.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The pulpit of Pilgrim Congregational Church will be occupied at both services tomorrow by Rev. Dr. Robert P. Meredith of Pasadena, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Albert F. Davis, who is away on his vacation. Rev. M. A. Wimberley will preach at Trinity Methodist Church in the absence of Dr. A. W. Leonard.

Indications point to a large crop of oranges this year in Pomona. Most all growers have begun to provide against the ravages of the insect pest which is in existence in their orchards and which in some localities in this county in the past few years has done considerable damage to the crop. This year, however, it is believed that the damage will be averted. The pest is appearing well on the trees, but only in little droppings of the insect, which is in a dormant state under favorable conditions will in a few hundred years be shipped from the packing-houses in boxes of oranges, have completed the work of pruning their trees for the season's work.

Rev. Charles H. Wetherbee of the First Congregational Church, has resigned his pastorate, has passed at his last sermon and will preach his farewell sermon at his church next Sunday.

San Bernardino Man Declares Fealty to President.

Bull Moose Leader Will Lose His Rights.

Angeleno Is Defendant in an Important Civil Suit.

SAN BERNARDINO, Aug. 17.—Joseph Dustin, pioneer, 80 years old, is so enthusiastic Taft booster. This morning he called on County Clerk Charles Post to make careful inquiry as to his registration. The Clerk looked the matter up, and found Dustin's name in the Republican col-

"I wanted to make sure of it," explained the aged pioneer, "for I want to get in and help roll up the biggest sort of a majority in this county for President Taft. They beat me out of the right to vote at the primaries, but I didn't want that to happen again. Taft shall be re-elected, if any power I can do for him counts," and the old bear-hunter left the office satisfied and determined.

Over at Redlands there's going to be a big surprise in the Big Moose camp when it is learned that Dr. J. J. Lombard, leader of the Moose movement in this county, is disqualified to vote at the coming primaries. Dr. Lombard registered, but refused to state his party affiliations. He was going to be so independent that when the Great Register would be out on which side of the fence he was going. His failure cost him his vote at the primary. Mrs. Lombard, the doctor's wife, put ons over the physician by stating her party affiliations. She's a Republican.

The situation of the leader of all county Big Moose followers under the new law, his wife qualified, and she a Taft Republican. If rumor be true, adds rich humor to a most unique political situation.

County Clerk Charles Post has just completed the registered voters in the county, the Great Register showing a total registration of 19,307. Of this number 11,829 are men; 7581 women. The men are divided as follows: Republicans, 11,604; 2642, Democrats; 2225, Socialists; 1234, Prohibitionists; 124 declined to state party preference.

The big fight here during the coming primaries will be over Bull Moose. The following table of voters enrolled by districts is interesting: First district, 1443, Republicans; 261, Socialist; 59. Second district, 2580, Republicans; 294, Democratic; 286, Socialist; 107 Prohibition. Third district, 2354, Republicans; 596, Democratic; 214, Socialist; 250, Prohibition. Fourth district, 2728, Republicans; 1187, Democratic; 274, Socialist; 250, Prohibition.

Citizens of Redlands is suing Ida Vranken and others of Los Angeles to secure the cancellation of an agreement by the latter with Cooper and Charles Stanton to make a stock and real estate deal. The deal was to be put through by Van Vranken & Webster, agents or principals, and was to receive a lot from Stanton on the Occidental street, for their trouble. The lot was to trade $50,000 worth of stock in the "Andrews Company," and land covered by mortgages for Cooper, in orange groves. The deal was executed June 20. Now Cooper has reasons to conclude the trade, and is suing for damages for clouding the title by recording the deeds. Attorney E. Hardesty of Redlands represents Cooper.

PERSONALS.

A party that traveled by automobile from Winnipeg to Los Angeles arrived at the Alexandria yesterday with the members in excellent spirits and all declaring Southern California roads the best encountered in their 4000 miles of travel. In the party are B. Willson, A. J. Adamson, A. E. Adamson, T. G. Turritt, and W. C. McAdock. The trip was made through southern Canada to British Columbia and down the coast. After a week in Southern California the five travelers will return home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ripley of San Francisco, are guests at the Hayward. Ripley is president of a grain company that bears his name. Among the other guests are R. R. Ritchie of the Northwestern Railway Company of San Francisco, Jack Lowrey, a cigar manufacturer of Tampa, and Miss G. Robinson of the Hotel Sutter, San Francisco.

The register at the Lankershim yesterday gave the false impression of a physicians' convention held here. It may have been merely a coincidence that five doctors, not one acquainted with the other came in at practically the same time from different parts of the country. Dr. John Gallagher was the first to register and came from San Francisco. Dr. Victoria Sutton and Dr. and Mrs. Alex. S. Keenan also registered from San Francisco. Dr. H. H. Brayton came from Phoenix, accompanied by his wife and Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Frantz registered from New Rochelle, N. Y. All of them are on vacation trips. Among other arrivals at the hotel are J. M. de Pourcare and Miss Enriqueta Pourcade of Guaymas, prominent residents of western Mexico who are here for the summer.

F. J. Burns and W. H. Marriott are Bakersfield oil operators who drove from there yesterday and registered at the Hollenbeck. Alvord J. Eliers, general superintendent of a large subdivision at Blythe, with headquarters at Needles is passing a few days at the same hotel. J. W. Rogers, a San Francisco real estate man and L. J. Munroe, a druggist of the same are city guests at the same hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Slemmons are guests at the Westminster. Slemmons is a retired Eastern jeweler who lives at Coronado. Mr. and Mrs. William A. Looy are guests at the same hotel and are registered from Evanston, Ill., where Looy is a bank director and real estate operator. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Holt are guests at the Westminster. Holt is a mining man of Globe.

T. T. Matimore and J. T. Turner are guests at the Van Nuys, registered from San Francisco. George D. Parker, inventor of a machine which has helped to revolutionize orange and other citrus packing in Southern California, arrived at the Van Nuys yesterday from the East on his way to his home in Riverside. Mr. and Mrs. Earl P. Howes of Providence, R. I., are staying at the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cordell and their two daughters are passing a few days at the Seminole while in Los Angeles on a pleasure trip. Cordell is a New York manufacturer and has been inspecting the West Coast with the object of establishing a Pacific Coast house.

J. C. Wilson is at the Alexandria while investigating the financial conditions of Southern California and is registered from New York. Don D. Miles, Jr. and B. Goodwin of San Francisco, are guests at the hotel. J. C. Adams, proprietor of the Hotel Adams of Phoenix, also is at the Alexandria.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Realty Men Already Making Preparations for Entertainment of Delegates to October Convention.

With nearly two months before them the members of the several committees of the Los Angeles Realty Board on the entertainment of the eighth annual convention of the California State Realty Federation, which will meet in Los Angeles October 10, 11 and 12, are already beginning work in shaping up the several features of the programme of instruction and entertainment. Indications are that this year's meeting of the State Realty Federation will be one of the most resultful, and most largely attended of any in the history of the organization.

There is a possibility that the board of directors of the California State Realty Federation may have a special meeting to map out the policies of the federation for presentation to the convention. All recognize that this session of the federation is to be a most important gathering. On it, and the results accomplished in convention will stand or fall the fabric of the organization, it is declared.

With the single exception of Los Angeles, and its strong realty board, there is no Southern California city or town whose real estate men, as a body, have stood behind the effort to obtain better laws affecting real estate interests, or taken part in the many successful exposes and investigations of dishonest dealers, or in the attempt to control any questionable real estate promotion. The result, it is said by the federation officials, has been that the State body has been constantly hampered.

Verdict.

DARROW CLEARED ON ONE OF TWO INDICTMENTS.

Bain Case, Considered the Stronger, to Come Up Tomorrow.

Jury's Decision on the Case Involving Lockwood Reached After Brief Deliberation, and Is Greeted by Demonstrations in the Courtroom—Dist.-Atty. Fredericks Prepared to Place Second Charge on Calendar.

ON ONE of the two indictments charging him with jury-bribery in connection with the trial of the McNamara dynamiters, whose chief counsel he was, Clarence S. Darrow was yesterday declared not guilty by a jury in Judge Hutton's court. The deliberations lasted about thirty minutes.

The second indictment, which charges Darrow with the bribery of Robert F. Bain, one of the seven permanent jurors chosen to try J. B. McNamara, will come up tomorrow before Judge Hutton, at which time Dist.-Atty. Fredericks will be prepared to have the case placed on the criminal calendar. Fredericks declares the Bain case to be far stronger than that charging the bribery of George N. Lockwood, which constituted the first indictment.

Capt. Fredericks for the past fourteen years has maintained his reputation as a strong upholder of law and order. He did not shrink from the tremendous responsibilities of the McNamara case, and it was his attitude that resulted in the plea of guilty on the part of J. J. McNamara, as brought out in the case just closed. He would not say positively yesterday that the Bain case would be pressed for trial, but such is the general belief at the Courthouse.

"It is a fact," said Capt. Fredericks, "that many civil judges do not understand the unequal contest between the prosecution standing for cold principles of right and government against the personal interests and human hope of a defendant as presented before a jury, and the necessity of preserving an atmosphere in which such principles can live and hold attention."

QUICK VERDICT.

The case went to the jury at 9:20 o'clock yesterday morning, following the charge of the court, which took slightly over an hour. The jury announced its readiness to return a verdict about thirty minutes later, but some time was consumed in getting the lawyers and court officials together, as it was generally supposed that the jury would deliberate for several hours. Varying reports came from those most closely interested in the result. Some said that three ballots were taken, the first being eight to four for acquittal, the second ten to two for the same verdict and the third was unanimous for acquittal. Other lawyers were of the opinion that upon the first poll the result was agreed upon. The jurors declined to make a statement as to this.

From the courtroom could be heard in the jury chamber faint cheers and clapping of hands just before Foreman Williams rapped on the door of the jury room and told Bailiff Van Vliet that a verdict had been reached. Judge Hutton took his seat on the bench, the clerk and lawyers were summoned and the defendant took his accustomed seat. Darrow seemed confident and his wife was smiling brightly though evidently at the highest tension.

When Foreman Williams said "We find the defendant not guilty," a suppressed cheer went up and the bailiff and his assistants had considerable difficulty in maintaining the decorum of the courtroom. Judge Hutton quickly adjourned court.

SCENE IN COURT.

Scores of men and women pressed forward to congratulate Darrow upon his acquittal. Judge Hutton was among the first to shake hands with the defendant—extraordinary act for the court. Darrow retained his poise, that had never deserted him during the trial. Fremont Older, Anton Johannsen, local labor leaders, Job Harriman and many Socialists and well-wishers of Darrow embraced him and many women in the excess of their emotions kissed him. Later Mrs. Darrow went to each juror and personally thanked them. Rogers and Appel came in for their share of congratulations, and the crowd remained in the room until noon talking about the outcome of the case.

In his instructions to the jury Judge Hutton declared that he had been under a severe nervous strain for the past three months and that his strength was almost exhausted, otherwise he would have tried to simplify the instructions for the benefit of the jury. As he gave his charge the twelve men in the box gave the closest attention to his words.

He said that the evidence of a witness that he has known the character of the defendant to be good prior to the charge on trial should be weighed in his favor.

"You are charged," said the court, "that the only offense for which the defendant is on trial is the charge in the indictment and not any collateral crimes. You must not suffer yourselves to convict this defendant for

"BAIN CASE IS FAR STRONGER."

Following the return of the verdict by the jury in the Darrow trial yesterday Dist.-Atty. Fredericks made the following statement:

"I have nothing to say except we gave the jury evidence which in our judgment was full, complete and convincing. I think the jury has taken into account what has been said by the defendant's counsel more than they have the evidence. However, we do not quarrel with verdicts of juries and decisions of judges. It is our business to present evidence and theirs to consider it. I imagine we will try the Bain case. I do not know of any reason why we should not. It is a far stronger case than this."

Christmas Toys for Ten Thousand Kids.

This Is the Santa Claus Ship.

The Politician, the biggest vessel of the Harrison Line, which will arrive off the breakwater at San Pedro this afternoon laden with millions of toys for the Christmas trade of Los Angeles. This is her first visit to Pacific waters, but is one of a fleet which will ply between Los Angeles and European ports with the opening of the canal.

Beat to Quarters.

SOUND ALARMS; HALT INVASION.

Twenty Regiments of Foreign Troops to Land Today.

Ten Thousand Cannon Coming to the Harbor.

Great Santa Claus Ship Due With Monster Pack.

Carrying 20,000 fully-armed foreign soldiers, 10,000 horses, 10,600 cannon and an enormous amount of smaller pieces of ordnance, the mighty Politician, biggest ship of the Harrison Direct Line, is bearing down upon Los Angeles and will arrive off the harbor breakwater this afternoon.

It is true that the alien troops are made of tin and their gaudy uniforms and side arms are mostly painted on, the horses are wood, the cannon are lead and the smaller pieces of ordnance are chiefly of the popgun and toy rifle description, but why cavil? To tens of thousands of Los Angeles boys and girls who will find parts of the mighty army of invasion in their stockings next Christmas the advent of the Politician is the most important item in the record of the harbor shipping for the fiscal year ending something-or-other, 1912.

Direct from Antwerp comes the great Santa Claus ship, laden to the gunwales with a staggering array of dolls, toys and trinkets which will be arrayed temptingly before the eyes of Los Angeles youth during the coming holiday season. Her cargo weighs 14,000 tons. It is the first visit of this queen of the company's fleet to San Pedro.

Within its mighty holds are millions of toys consigned to all the large department stores and similar establishments of Los Angeles. They have been collected from all parts of Germany and Holland and represent a year's labor of a great number of people.

This is the first time that the Christmas toys for Los Angeles have come all the way by water. Heretofore they have come either by water to New York and then transshipped across the continent by rail or have come to Panama, across the Isthmus and thence by water again to Los Angeles. It has been the custom in past years to receive thousands of the toys broken or damaged, owing to the double handling, and this year it was planned to avoid this extra loss.

The Harrison line had been operating monthly vessels from Antwerp, Liverpool, Glasgow and other European ports via the Magellan Straits to Los Angeles, San Francisco and northern ports. The company decided to place their largest vessel, the Politician, which has never been to Pacific waters, at the disposal of the Los Angeles department stores and as a result the great ship was turned into a Santa Claus vessel of gigantic proportions.

The Politician is not only the Santa Claus ship for Los Angeles, but also carries a consignment of toys from good Kris Kringle to San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Vancouver children. In addition to the toys the Politician carries an enormous consignment of of linen from the looms of Europe to the Pacific Coast. Several of the larger department stores of the city will receive a six months' supply of linen from her vast hold.

The same company has several other ships which ply back and forth between the coast and Europe and one gigantic new liner just launched at Glasgow. She is even larger than the Politician and will be immediately placed in the [illegible] between the coast and Europe

PRAYER OF DEAD ANGELENO'S MOTHER IS HEARD.

Alleged Murderers of Her Son May Be Made to Pay Heavy Indemnity. Letter From Secretary of State Informs Attorney that Investigation Is on Foot.

Secretary of State Knox has begun an official investigation to ascertain the facts in connection with wanton killing of Ralph W. Davis, a Los Angeles youth who was slain in Panama on the Fourth of July by Panamanian soldiers.

The fact that the Secretary of State intended to call the government of Panama to account for the slaughter of young Davis and that he had already begun an inquiry into the facts through the American Minister at Ancon, became known yesterday when Attorney Mason F. Noble, counsel for Mrs. Davis, was placed in possession of a letter to Senator Works, forwarded to him by the latter.

The letter stated that so far as the government investigation has proceeded it had been found that the facts in the case coincided with the version of the killing given by Frederick C. Davis, who is in Panama and was there at the time his brother met death.

With the receipt of the letter papers were forwarded immediately to the State department asking for an indemnity of $30,000 for Mrs. Davis for the loss of her son, who supported her. Not only was this done but steps were taken to get possession of the body which has lain in an embalmed state in the Marine Hospital at Ancon since the tragedy. After the killing the Panama authorities refused to surrender the body, but it is believed now that they will have to give it up and allow Mrs. Davis to bring it to Los Angeles for burial.

Paradise Found.

MERE MAN? THEN THIS EDEN'S BARRED TO YOU.

Al Fresco Haven of Beauty Discovered Under Pines of the Arroyo Seco, Where Forty Pretty Maidens in —Sh!—Bloomers Hunt and Fish, Chop Wood, Sleep Out of Doors, Cook, Loaf and Lounge, All Manless.

BY SYDNEY FORD.

THERE'S a modern Eve's Paradise up among the Losadena pines in the Arroyo Seco, thirteen miles from Pasadena and 3800 feet above the world and the worries thereof. Not a man in the camp—and forty-two bloomered and bloused pretty girls who gather their own wood, make their own fires, catch and cook their own trout, loaf and lounge about the cheerful camp fire at night, climb the mountain trails by day and sleep on cots right out under the trees from 9 at night to 6 in the morning.

"We eat, sleep and live out of doors," writes one of these camp girls, who are of the Y.W.C.A.; "tents only mean dressing-room space—no one has use for indoors. After supper every night there is a rush for mountain sticks and sweaters and we are ready for a climb up Mt. Washburn, which means four miles of straight-up climbing. When we get there we cheer for the lights of Los Angeles and the surrounding cities and beach towns, which blink at us from miles below. We have a concert of song up there—can you hear us in the city?"

Last month the junior Y.W.C.A. girls were in possession of the camp, in relays of twenty-five each week. This month the seniors are having their turn. Miss Ella Stevens, who is at the head of the physical training department in the association, is in charge. She is just back from a month at the Battle Creek Sanatorium in Michigan, where she was one of the faculty of a summer normal school of physical training. "It is an interesting comparison," she says, "to rush back from such an experience where, when the dinner bell rang it was a question of diet and no meats, to this mountain camp of forty girls who, after a ten-mile climb, are ready to eat anything and everything in sight."

These camp girls take their early morning dip in the natural plunge where the water is cold and invigorating, and every afternoon there is a swimming party.

TROUSERS TABOO.

This delectable spot in the mountains is, as intimated, accessible only to women. No men need apply. You leave Los Angeles in conventional clothes—a tailored suit, prim hat and proper foot covering. You can go by stage from Pasadena to Burro Camp—and there civilization, in the conventional sense, ends. At this point you shed your city clothes and don your mountain suit—and throw dignity to the winds. The bloomer and the middy blouse take the place of the street suit, and stout mountain boots succeed the erstwhile patent leather oxfords or tan shoes. If you are good for a hike of several miles that zig-zags straight up for most of the way, just seize a stick to support you and start along. If not, climb the quarter deck of a burro and use the stick on him. He'll land you in camp in his own time—which may be some hours behind the pedestrians—but anyhow, you'll get there—and you'll be met a mile this side by a committee of escort from the camp who will conduct you safely within the confines of the enchanted haven.

FISHERMEN IN LEGAL BATTLE.

Concession Worth Millions Is Involved.

Americans Poaching, Asserts Mexican Company.

Question of Three-Mile Limit Chief Contention.

The exclusive right to fish in Lower California waters and the status of an industry that represents millions are involved in an equity action which will be heard in the United States District Court tomorrow. The action was instituted by La Pescadora Sociedad Anonima, which holds a concession from the Mexican government and seeks to restrain a number of American fish companies and fishermen from fishing in the waters off the Mexican coast for a distance of over 2000 miles. An order has been issued to the men named as defendants to show cause why they shall not be permanently enjoined from fishing in the waters of which La Pescadora Sociedad claims to have exclusive fishing privileges.

The chief point of contest in the litigation is likely to hinge on the question of whether or not the defendant fishermen have been catching fish within the three-mile limit, although it is possible that the validity of the exclusive privilege will be questioned.

The defendants named are the American Union Fish Company, Charles Holquist, trading under the name of the San Diego Fish Company; John Madruga, trading under the name of the National Fish Company; Joe Lawrence, trading under the name of the Panama Fish Company, and a number of fishermen classified as John Doe.

La Pescadora Sociedad Anonima is an alien corporation with its principal offices in Ensenada and organized under the laws of Mexico. Its officers claim that by virtue of an agreement entered into between the company and the Mexican government, through Assistant Secretary of State Andres Aldagro, it was given an exclusive right or concession for a period of fifteen years to fish for whales, shrimps, lobsters, crabs, cuttlefish, mother-of-pearl, all kinds of scale fish, oysters, green turtles, abalones and other fish in all the waters on the West Coast of Mexico and lying within its jurisdiction from the boundary line as far south as Cape San Lucas.

TONS OF LOBSTERS.

It is alleged by the company that its concession from the Mexican government is a binding business contract for which it has paid adequately and that fishermen from San Diego are marketing as high as $400 worth of scale fish a day that belongs to them. In addition to paying a heavy royalty to the government for the exclusive privileges the company is held responsible for the preservation of the spawning grounds and is also under contract to prevent poaching. The concession contains clauses which restrict the company from depleting the fishing grounds and they are compelled under its provisions to leave the entire fishing privilege as valuable at the expiration of the fifteen years as when it was begun.

The company's officials say they have $1,000,000 invested in equipment and that they have only begun to receive returns as the concession has been in effect only about three years. They have three factories for the canning of shellfish in Magdalena Bay and a large number of fishing boats, including two power boats. The principal source of supply for the Pacific Coast lobster trade is Mexico, they say. From 7000 to 10,000 pounds of lobsters are shipped from Mexico three times a week in addition to heavy shipments of canned lobster, crabs and shrimps.

In the litigation scheduled to begin tomorrow the company will seek to show that the fishermen named have fished inside the three-mile limit without permission from the company and that its business is being materially injured. In addition to the present extensive fishing and canning equipment of the company, it was asserted yesterday, extensive additions both to the fishing fleet and the canning factories will be made as soon as the validity of its concession is determined. The company plans in the near future to provide sufficient lobsters for the entire Pacific Coast trade in addition to an elaborate system of marketing scale fish by way of San Diego.

CONFLICTING CONTENTIONS.

La Pescadora Sociedad is represented by Flint, Gray and Barker, with Frank Rabe, of counsel, appearing in the case.

Among the defendants are some of the leading wholesale fish dealers in Southern California. They have banded together for the purpose of fighting this case and all are represented by I. R. Rubin, one of the youngest practicing attorneys in this city. Rubin, who is barely 25 years old, is a University of Michigan graduate. He was married only a few days ago and is spending his honeymoon in preparing his biggest case.

The American Fish Company has branches in San Francisco, San Pedro, San Diego and this city and, according to Rubin, markets more fish than La Pescadora Sociedad. All the defendant fishermen deny that they have fished inside the three-mile limit except when they bought permits from Alfredo Sandoval, manager of La Pescadora Sociedad.

John Madruga of the National Fish Company was in this city yesterday in the interest of the defendant fishermen. He stated last night that it is the custom of the fishermen to fish at least eight or nine miles from shore during most seasons and that when the fish are running closer in they have bought licenses or permits to fish from Sandoval. For these they pay, Madruga says, about $15 a month and in some cases as high as $25 a month.

WHERE FISH ARE CAUGHT.

"All fishing boats of over five tons," he said, "are compelled to get a clearance manifest from the Collector of Customs at San Diego and nearly every one of our fishermen nominally clears for Mexican waters. This does not necessarily mean that they propose to fish inside the Mexican jurisdiction. As a matter of fact, they go several miles beyond it. I understand that Sandoval says our boats clear from San Diego in the night and bring back several hundred dollars' worth of fish every day caught in their preserves. None of our boats go out at night. It is a fixed custom for them to get away from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"The concession to La Pescadora Sociedad is not generally approved by the people living along the Mexican coast. Within three months I saw a petition which was being circulated in Ensenada asking the government to withdraw its concession."

Both parties to the litigation express the opinion that it will be a long, hard-fought legal battle and that the three-mile limit question will be the crucial point. The Mexican company says that the fish frequent the shore line at from one-fourth to one-half a mile from the land. They will present many affidavits and much testimony in support of this contention. The fishermen, on the other hand, insist that the best fishing is in twenty fathoms and that nowhere along the coast can that depth be found within the three-mile limit.

They say also that they are prepared to show that many of them have paid the company for the privilege of fishing on its preserves and that the company has had as many as twenty or thirty fishermen paying tribute to it at one time.

AGRICULTURE TO BE IMPORTANT COURSE IN SCHOOLS.

Newly-Appointed Department Supervisor to Be Provided With Liberal Staff of Assistants and Reduce Curriculum to Systematic Basis of Operation.

The appointment of Clayton L. Palmer by the Board of Education as supervisor of agriculture for the Los Angeles public schools, raises anew the question of whether the pretty High School girl will take to growing cabbages any better than she takes to cooking them, and if the High School boy will give up Rugby for carrots.

Palmer is an agricultural enthusiast who graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1897 and whose work has been in the natural sciences as a teacher in the grades, in two High Schools and in two normal schools. From 1907 to 1910 he had charge of the agricultural work of the Los Angeles Normal and was then elected head of the agricultural work at Gardena, where he resides. Along with his school work of the past two years he has carried on extensive and practical experiments on his own ranch at Gardena and has made them pay. Keeping his feet on the ground is more than a metaphor with him.

He will have several assistants who are well trained for their duties and while they have not yet been announced, it is practically decided that Mrs. G. E. Larkey, who has been acting supervisor of school gardens during the last year, and Miss Smith will continue their work. Of three other assistants to be added to the department two will be men who have graduated from prominent agricultural colleges and the other will be a woman of wide experience as a teacher and of special training in botany and horticulture.

The five will do considerable actual teaching in the upper grades, in addition to co-operating with the grade teachers of their schools so that nature study and phases of agriculture may be emphasized as far as it is possible. Each of these assistants will be assigned a definite portion of the city as a field for such operations.

One of the most important duties of the new department will be the ornamentation of the grounds of the various schools. In this, as well as in other phases of the work, each school has hitherto been a law unto itself.

Where it is possible, shade trees will be planted on school grounds and vacant lots convenient to the school buildings will be obtained for gardening. The materials at hand will be first used and, as the work is established, some of the more difficult problems of teaching agriculture will be broached. Palmer said yesterday, in speaking of the work:

"All true agriculture is cultural, using that word in the best sense, but we are called upon to distinguish between that which is vocational in nature and that which may be so, but is of more universal use. The former is sooner or later to be taught in the upper grades; the latter is more general and forms a good foundation for it in the case of those who wish to specialize in agriculture later.

"Considerable nature study is to be worked in, especially that which has relation to the garden work. I believe that most of such work should, by reason of its greater value, be related to the environment of the child. Then, too, we want the garden work to serve the purpose of revitalizing some of the subjects which are more likely to need toning up. Thus we would try to correlate the different subjects taught in a given grade, so far as is feasible.

"We are at work now on an outline which will assist in organizing the work in the grades from the first to the High School. The Board of Education has been farsighted in recognizing the importance of this work, and has liberally supported it. It is up to us now to make good."

WALNUT CROP WILL BE LARGE.

Present Estimates Are for an Output Nearly Equal to that of Last Year.—Europe's Production Short.

Although it is almost too early for estimates on the walnut crop it is figured that the output this year will be nearly as large as that of last season, or 12,500 tons. The value of this output, although prices for this year have not yet been announced, will probably be in the neighborhood of $3,000,000, as that is the usual revenue from the production yearly.

The crop will be short in Europe this year, that of France, one of the principal producing sections, being only about fifty per cent of what it usually is. Under these conditions it is likely that the returns for California walnuts will be excellent this year, as a large quantity of the nuts are generally imported from foreign countries, and this to a great extent regulates the prices of the home-grown output.

The 1911 crop of walnuts from California has been cleaned up, and a profitable season is anticipated, because it is said that the Walnut Growers' association is in better condition to handle the output than before.

ART AND CRAFT FOR LOS ANGELES.

NEW SOCIETY APPEALS TO ARTISTIC TEMPERAMENT.

Shops for Workers Proposed With Training School for Teachers in Handicraft Work—Boston Must Look to Laurels—May Become a Second Athens.

The newly-reorganized Arts and Crafts Society of Los Angeles is receiving its full meed of appreciation, and the work of the pupils of the summer school just displayed in two large rooms at the Manual Arts High School has been inspected by a large number of discriminating guests.

Especially noticeable were the embroidered robes and other specimens of needlework done under the instruction of Miss Waldvogel and the designs of the jewelry made under the supervision of Mr. Donaldson. Much enthusiasm was created by the announcement that the new society already has 100 members and $1000 subscribed for its support.

The object of this society is to interest art lovers with art workers and to stimulate and guide a practical expression of the artistic sense. It is

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

The Berkeley Cleanup and Swatted the Fly.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—[To the Editor of the Times:] It is gratifying to read from day to day in the columns of The Times of various forces at work looking to a clean city. Our citizens, although somewhat fearful, have apparently been afraid of the force of the good old proverb, "Never too late to mend." But indeed Los Angeles have needed periodic movements of this kind? By the reflection every one personally answers, No. Like the home of the good housekeeper, Los Angeles should always be ready for inspection. Our city is the favorite resort the year round, for tens of thousands of people, as discriminating and appreciative as any dwelling in this round ball. Somehow we have all overlooked this important matter. Is any nothing of dirt and filth as a menace to comfort, health and life.

The writer recently spent several days in Berkeley, the seat of the State University. What I saw, heard and read while there regarding the clean-up of a city may be of interest at this particular juncture. It is very helpful to know how the other fellow did a work we may have on hand. A stranger in Berkeley noted at once the great width of its streets and their spotless cleanliness. A look into the backyards reveals them to be as clean as lice, rake and broom can make them. On each is a large garbage can, with no flies hovering over it, for the lid is on tight. The grocery stores have no screen doors to shoo away flies for there are no flies to shoo. These, and many happy conditions well known to us, no less than Los Angeles and all other cities, Berkeley was once insanitary and tormented by flies. How the city washed itself and got on its pretty "bib and tucker" is set forth in Bulletin No. 6, issued by the Agricultural Department of the State University. Citizens looking in the present cleanup movement would do well to possess themselves of a copy of this Bulletin. From it the particulars here recorded are gathered. Let me first state that Prof. W. B. Herms, head of the Entomology (Insect) section of the Agricultural Department. He is the author of the bulletin referred to. Prof. Herms states that Berkeley was in April, 1909, a letter to the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce being the initiative step. This letter made an earnest appeal not only to this branch of the united city, but in his letter he stated that there was located between two creeks that bred myriads of flies. He pleaded for help to clean up the whole city. The university is interested in a clean city, and has made certain suggestions, which were readily assented to by the Secretary of Commerce, the Board of Health and the City Council. An ordinance was adopted and comprehensive by-laws, was passed. The Chief of Police was, and is, required to enforce the law. The university found twenty students to assist in the regulations apply to stables, and places housing animals. These are declared to be the breeding grounds for the filthy fly, horse stables. Berkeley pleased to their credit 95 per cent of the fly production, hence

THE REAL CONFLICT.

The red and the blue armies of the militia maneuvers have closed their engagement without fatality. That is much better than may be hoped from the deer hunters who are now in the hills.

FOR THE BETTER.

The change from the blanket sheet to the pamphlet in presenting the arguments which inform voters on constitutional amendments is heartily welcomed. If anything would put a wet blanket upon the voter's enthusiasm it is the nightmare medley of an encyclopedia printed upon one sheet.

NOT DANGEROUS.

A clever newspaper correspondent announces that any man who runs for office in Riverside county must tell just what he will do politically for the fair sex before he can be elected. The men are not to be alarmed merely because they do not fully understand all that woman's politics may seem. Nowhere in California have the women been guilty of unseemly political conduct through their enfranchisement, nor have they imposed a single unreasonable condition.

DIFFICULT TO SETTLE.

Business men on Los Angeles street will petition the City Council to grant a railway franchise to relieve traffic congestion. They also want the railroad to have freight-carrying privileges for some definite tenure. Some suggest twenty-one, some thirty, and some forty years. The railroad company hesitates about establishing expensive freight terminals unless it can be reasonably sure about rates, taxes and time. The industrial district will never be smaller than it is now, and the chances are that it will be widely and speedily extended in its present vicinity. It will always need freight delivery, and it is a paralyzing economic waste not to let one freight car do the work of at least ten trucks. The people cannot be otherwise than reasonable because in reality it is always the people who pay the freight.

ROOSEVELT'S CHANCES.

In Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia and Maryland, and in Delaware, Tennessee and Virginia, Roosevelt will probably draw many more votes from Wilson than he will from President Taft. His candidacy in those States will be a distinct benefit to the regular Republican ticket and will transfer seventy-three electoral votes from the doubtful to the Republican column.

The electoral votes of the Carolinas, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, eighty-seven in number, always have gone and probably always will go Democratic so long as there shall be a Democratic party in existence.

The effect of Roosevelt's candidacy in some northern States where parties are evenly balanced will be to turn their electoral votes over to Wilson.

On the whole there does not appear to be any chance of Roosevelt's election. The contest will be between Taft and Wilson, between protection and free trade, between old-time Republicanism and old-time Democracy, and, except as a disturber and malcontent, Roosevelt is not a factor in the contest.

RIGHTS OF EMPLOYERS.

Amid all the turmoil raised in Great Britain over strikes of one kind and another the voice of the church has been heard with a reminder that employers as well as employees have rights which must be recognized. Cardinal Bourne, the famous archbishop of Westminster, speaking at the Catholic Congress held recently in England, laid particular stress on the fact, the all-important fact, that employees must recognize the rights of their employers. The relation of the church toward labor was the cardinal's subject, and he dealt in a clear and convincing way with the rights and wrongs of some of the labor disputes which have caused so much misery and trouble in Great Britain the last few months. While pointing out that the Catholic church never has hesitated to encourage trade-unionism, the cardinal declared that in no labor struggle could the men afford to ignore the decalogue. "The men always will have to recognize the rights of their employers," he said. The words of this prince of a great church should sink in in this country where the decalogue is invariably ignored on the occasion of every great labor fight.

DARROW NOT YET OUT OF THE WOODS.

As fully reported in this issue, the jury in the Darrow case, in which juror-bribing was alleged, returned a verdict of "not guilty" yesterday forenoon.

Our readers will bear witness that The Times has scrupulously refrained from attempting to prejudice this case or to influence its result in any way, although under the well-understood circumstances it might have been excused for not being impartial in its publications. The Times has given fair and full reports of the long and exciting hearing, without bias, favor or fright.

A great deal might be said of the manner in which the hearing proceeded, the brawling of counsel, the conduct of labor-ite bosses present, the misconduct at times apparent, and which was not always confined to opposing attorneys, and how an important and solemn trial at law seemed at times to descend to the level of a rough-house.

But the case of Darrow is not over yet. He is not out of the woods by any means. Another indictment, charging that he was concerned in the attempted bribery of juror Bain, stands against the McNamaras' attorney. It is not clear how he can escape being tried on that charge, and that case is said to be the more difficult of the two for Darrow.

A proper subject of comment at this time is furnished by the attitude of Judge Hutton during this just-concluded trial and his charge to the jury. The Times prints today a faithful summary of the charge. It speaks for itself. It is not too much to say that portions of the charge impressed many auditors as leaning towards the defendant. "I don't see how the jury could do otherwise than acquit after listening to that charge," was a frequent comment. The Times does not constitute itself a court of appeal; but it will carefully review all these phases of the case with fairness and fearlessness at a later date. Let us see what is done about the Bain indictment and what the demands of the situation may be. As God lives, the persons responsible for the flagrant outrage on justice sought to be perpetrated in the McNamara case must not go unscourged.

The Times will quote here the following extraordinary utterance of Judge Hutton after the verdict:

> "Now that the case is ended I consider it entirely proper for me to congratulate Mr. Darrow upon his acquittal. I know that millions of hallelujahs will go up through the length and breadth of this land."

We think this plainly shows the bent of the judge's mind.

As The Times has often said, its only wish is that justice be done under the forms of law. Let no innocent man be punished and let no guilty man avoid the consequences of his villainy.

Inasmuch as twenty murders were involved in the case of which the jury-bribing became a part, this prosecution of Darrow is of supreme moment, aside from the vital principle touching the integrity of our judicial institutions.

THE GENTLEMAN AND HIS VOCABULARY.

It is not in the drawing-room and parlor where cultivated people associate that one is accustomed to hear the argot of the city slums. It is not in gatherings where the affairs of the churches are discussed that one hears the word liar bandied about as freely as the ordinary greetings of the day. If there is anything that characterizes the civilized man, the moral man, the gentleman from the degraded, the unregenerate and the "undesirable" it is the vocabulary used by the two classes.

It has been a disgrace to American citizenship to hear a distinguished citizen of the country talking the common vocabulary of the prize ring and the gaming table. It has disgusted the first families of America, those of colonial times, to hear one of their own indulging freely in the vocables that fly from mouth to ear and are bandied about in the Bowery of New York or around the cattle pens in Chicago every hour of the day.

For years we have had our ears assailed by Theodore Roosevelt with set teeth, flashing eyes and threatening countenance, shouting "liar" at every person, high or low, who happened to differ with him in their views of affairs or in statement of facts.

Years ago the New York World openly published a statement that in 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt was the nominee of the Republican party for the Presidency of the United States, he of his own initiative sought an interview with the late E. H. Harriman, had that interview, asked Mr. Harriman's aid in a definite financial way in order to make sure of electing the Republican national ticket in the State of New York, that Mr. Harriman heard the appeal, raised the money, handed it to those who were working for Mr. Roosevelt's election, and that the money was spent for Mr. Roosevelt's political benefit.

We are not so much finding fault with Mr. Harriman or the Republican committee or with Mr. Roosevelt for raising and spending the money. It takes money to conduct a Presidential election, and this money may have been spent without a single impropriety.

The point we wish to make is that Theodore Roosevelt, the creator of the Ananias Club in America, is the best qualified man in the country for membership therein and for its headship. And the proof of the allegation is in the fact that he has recently deliberately and categorically denied the truth of the statement made so long ago by the New York World and permitted to go uncontradicted until Mr. Roosevelt is in a position to make something out of the denial.

We now have former Gov. Odell's statement which nails the Roosevelt falsehood so firmly down in American history that it will never be removed. Roosevelt twisted and prevaricated in his statement, attempting to make out that the money was not used for himself or in the furtherance of his political ambition, but was raised and used altogether in behalf of the State ticket in New York, that the Harriman fund was never in the hands of the Republican National Committee and never was used by that committee. Gov. Odell, who was a go-between for Roosevelt and Harriman, is specific and categorical and under oath in his statement that the money was raised at Roosevelt's solicitation, passed over to the National Committee and used for Roosevelt's benefit in the election.

Odell's sworn statement convicts Roosevelt of more than this dickering with the railroad millionaires, and with more than prevarication as to the use of the money. He made a further trade with Harriman that, if it should be necessary, Roosevelt would appoint Chauncey M. Depew to a foreign Ambassadorship in order to leave the road clear for Mr. Harriman's candidate to the United States Senate from the State of New York.

The world has long known enough to nab the fellow that cries "stop thief" loudest, and to concede that the man who calls others liars is most likely to be a violator of the Ninth Commandment.

AN EMBARRASSING POSITION FOR HIRAM.

No ethical mistake was made at Chicago when our own great Hiram Johnson was made the yoke-fellow of Theodore Roosevelt in the progressive campaign toward political suicide. He certainly is the typical Bull Moose and worthy in all respects (especially as to his mouth) to run with the colonel.

But no matter how much like the colonel any one may be, only the colonel can be himself. It must be very embarrassing for one with the natural disposition to be a domineering despot to play second fiddle, without strings even, to Theodore's leadership. At home Johnson is the whole machine, and the engineer, fireman and all the rest of the attendants. When the Governor of California opens his capacious jaws, the cue of all the rest of the Bull Moose following is to observe a profound silence. But when Hiram crosses the continent and lines up anywhere within earshot of Oyster Bay or the Outlook office, he hears the loud call of the real and only Bull Moose, and then the Governor has to keep silence.

This is not the only embarrassment for Hiram. In an unfortunate day for the people of California, they elected this brawler to misrepresent them in the office of Governor. He is under contract on a salary of $10,000 a year, a mansion for a home, sumptuously furnished at the expense of the people and a lot of added perquisites, to perform the duties of the Governorship, and he is not keeping his part of the contract. The Governor of California today is drawing a salary unfairly because he is not earning it, and has not been doing so for many months past. It is his shamelessly-declared purpose to go on drawing this salary without earning it until it is made clear that he is not to be elected to the Vice-Presidency of the United States. He has not informed the taxpayers of the State whether after his defeat he will attempt honestly to earn his salary or go on dishonestly drawing it while out doing wild politics somewhere in the country for 1916 or some other date nearer or more remote.

How long will this sort of thing be tolerated by the people of California? Already there are rumblings. Has the Governor heard them?

AN ASSAULT BY HARPIES.

Industrial freedom is assailed on both land and sea. The tigers of the jungle and the sharks of the ocean have combined. The walking delegates who mislead and plunder the sailors and the grafters who misadvise and rob the workers at the forges and in the factories have procured the introduction in Congress of a bill entitled "An act to abolish the involuntary servitude imposed upon seamen in the merchant marine of the United States, to encourage the training of boys in the American merchant marine, etc., etc."

The title of the bill is a misnomer. It ought to be called "An act to repeal the maritime laws of England, France, and Germany; to prevent the training of Americans as sailors, to cripple the American merchant marine and discourage its growth, and to deliver sailors in American ports into the claws of the harpies of the sailors' unions."

The proposed bill abrogates a number of treaties with foreign nations. It makes it a misdemeanor for a foreign owner to ship his crew in a foreign port and insist upon their return to the point of shipment—a contract which would be entirely legal in the country in which it was entered into. It assumes to dictate to the foreigner how he shall run his ship and what contract he shall make with his fellow-subjects.

Foreign nations have increased their overseas trade by their wise and sagacious laws, while the United States by its laws and its failure to enact laws has caused its foreign commerce to disappear from the seas. We have now only nine ships engaged in the foreign trade, while England has over 11,000 in this service.

The bill provides that every merchant ship hereafter constructed shall have a washing place properly heated and lighted, with one washing outfit for every two men with a hot and cold water supply and a sufficient number of sinks, bath tubs and shower baths. For failure to comply with this section the owners of the ship to be subject to a penalty of $500. No mention is made of the allotment of clean towels, or of the quality of the toilet soap, or whether cologne water or Lubin's extracts shall be furnished each sailor. Nor is any penalty provided to be inflicted upon any captain or mate who shall call upon the sailor to come on deck to reef topsails just as he is about to step into a hot bath.

Section 12 of the bill provides that no seagoing vessel shall be permitted to depart from port unless from 40 to 65 per cent. of her deck crew, exclusive of licensed officers, are of a rating not less than able seamen. It provides that no person shall be rated as an able seaman unless he is 19 years of age, has had at least three years service on deck at sea or on the Great Lakes. In order to qualify as an able seaman a certificate must be obtained from a board of local inspectors.

There are very few American-born or naturalized able seamen to be found. Foreign vessels are manned with foreign seamen, and they form a large portion of the crew of our vessels engaged in the coastwise trade.

The requirement of three years deck service in order to achieve the rating of an able seaman is absurd. Any intelligent, active, able-bodied man or youth of 16 or over, who can read, write and cipher, can learn to "hand reef and steer" in sixty days, and that is all that is needed of an able seaman. He is not required to understand trigonometry, or double-entry bookkeeping or to know the difference between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse.

Under the three-years clause our vessels, in order to obtain able seamen, would have to go to foreign nations that are educating the sailor. The proposed law affords no protection to the American seaman. It operates to prevent any American from learning to be a seaman and to deprive American boys from any chance of learning to be seamen except as apprentices. Every American vessel of less than 1500 tons register is required to carry one boy, and of more than 1500 tons register two boys, under 14 years of age.

It requires about 50,000 sailors to man our ships in the coasting trade. Under the law about 1700 sailors per annum would be qualified—a number utterly inadequate to supply the demands of commerce.

The supply of able seamen would not be increased from any other source than apprentices. No grown man who was worth his salt would consent to serve for three years on a ship as an apprentice, to be scorned and imposed upon by the able seamen.

The bill was framed in the interest of the harpies who control and represent the seamen's union. It is designed to give them control of the shipping business and force ship owners to submit to their exactions, and pay them tribute, on penalty of being unable to put to sea for want of a crew.

The bill will probably not be reported from the Committee on Commerce, to which it was referred, until the December session of Congress. All who are interested will be given a chance to appear before the committee. The Chambers of Commerce of San Francisco, Seattle and Portland will have representatives at the hearings. These should be reinforced by a representative from Los Angeles, for, with the completion of the Panama Canal, we will speedily become a great maritime city.

An enterprising eastern correspondent for The Times burns up good money to tell us that a childhood romance has been shattered. We will grant that they always are without paying half a cent a word to have it emphasized.

The Unholy Alliance.

MILLIONAIRES AND PROTECTION.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

It is not true that the crop of American millionaires has been produced by the protective tariff. Those who have investigated tell us that a very small percentage of our wealthy men became so by profits in manufacturing; most of the millionaires of this country have come from transportation, land speculation, banking and mining. There has been no concentration of the ownership of our cotton and woolen mills, or iron and steel mills, under the protective tariff.

As an illustration, says F. G. R. Gordon, let me point to a fact that only a dozen years ago the total owners of all the iron and steel mills of this country numbered less than 55,000; today the number of owners in the iron and steel mills is very near 300,000, or an increase in owners of 500 per cent., against an increase in population of 25 per cent.

During the past sixteen years of the operation of the protective tariff system, with hardly a break in any part of the line, our middle-class population have increased five times as rapidly as our population as a whole.

The number of owners of stocks in the railway and manufacturing industries of the nation has increased eight times as fast, proportionately, as has our population generally during the past twenty years.

Recent investigations show that the number of owners of wealth in this country is rapidly increasing. To illustrate:

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad had just 3256 stockholders in 1901; in 1911 they numbered 10,869, a gain of 7613 in only ten years. The American Sugar Refining Company had 10,783 owners in 1901 and 20,050 in 1911. The 262,490 corporations in this country having an annual income (net) of $5000 or more are owned by 2,500,000 stockholders, an increase in ten years of more than 400 per cent. The Democrats may try to win next November by calamity-howling methods; they will not win if the people know and heed the facts.

If we want to continue along these lines we shall vote to maintain our protective tariff; if, on the other hand, we want to create poverty and misery; if we wish to add millions to our unemployed (3,000,000 adult male idle workers in '93-'96;) if we prefer foreign-made goods produced under pauper wage standards; if we again want free soup houses in every industrial center (as in '93-'96,) we will vote to change our protective tariff system to that of the Democratic low-tariff policy.

A NOVEL WRITER'S WORDS OF WISDOM.

[From Will Levington Comfort:] The way to heaven is always against the crowd.

I believe in the natural greatness of women.

The more a man knows the more he will believe.

If something hits you from the inside that a thing isn't good to do, don't hurry about doing it. If you wouldn't do it when the person you like best in the world is watching, it isn't a good thing to do alone.

Physical heroism is cheap—the cheapest utility of the nations—but it is not without inspiration to watch.

Women whom men avoid for being strong-minded are apt to be the strongest in their affections. You can prove this by the sons of clinging vines.

A man's courage may be just his cowardice running forward under the fear of scorn from his fellows.

A passionate woman, happily married, is of all earth's creatures the most natural monogamist.

Beware of the man who discusses often and broods much upon his spiritual growth when he fails to make his wife happy.

A woman had three caskets to give to a man. One day she read in his eyes that he could take but the nearest and lowest and that moment arose in her heart the wailing cry, "The King is dead!"

The worker in the arts is apt to drive himself and his work, forgetting that the fuller artist is driven.

Even the purest young women have the capacity to lock their minds against the ugliest generalities of a man's past, and to reckon only with specific instances. It is here that the mother looks out through the eyes of the maid.

When a man pampers the body, following its fitful and imperious appetites, he surely stiffens the seal of the casket that incloses his spirit.

The world needs souls that can thrive on dreams and denials.

It is stimulating to hear a man say, flat and unqualified, "I don't know."

A people glutted with what it wants is a stagnant people.

STREAKS OF WIT.

A Successful Orator.

[Boston Transcript:] Ethel: Jack Huggard told me a long story last night.

Kitty: Is he an interesting story teller?

Ethel: I should say so, he held his audience from start to finish.

Successful Reformers.

[Washington Star:] "I understand you have been cleaning up the city."

"Yes," replied the crooked official; "we cleaned up something over two millions in one year."

What Did She Mean?

[Everybody's Magazine:] Mrs. Jenkins: Mrs. Smith, we shall be neighbors now. I have bought a house next you, with a water frontage.

Mrs. Smith: So glad. I hope you will drop in sometime.

A Reminiscence.

[Tit-Bits:] Mrs. Peck: We have been married twenty years today, John.

John (with a sigh:) Yes, for twenty years we've fought——

Mrs. Peck (scowling) What?

John (quickly:) Life's battles together, Maria.

But He Pays the Bills.

[Detroit Free Press:] "How many children have you?"

"Three. Two grown-up daughters and a son in college."

"How proud you must be of them!"

"I am, but somehow or other I don't seem to be able to act so that they can bring themselves to feel proud of me."

One Went Wrong.

[London Opinion:] Manager: But what have you got to grumble at now? 'Aven't you just got two lovely bouquets?

The Star: Yes, but I paid for three!

Has a Rival.

[Washington Herald:] "Do you love me, Charles?" inquired the beautiful girl.

"Of course I do."

"Do you think only of me, by day and night?"

"Well, I'll be frank with you. Now and then I think of baseball."

Pen Points: By the Staff

It is dangerous to want things; we might get them.

If a woman's "no" does mean "yes," who in heaven's name, can't she say so!

The folks who would turn Rex Beach into a prohibition town will not find it easy to make a water front dry.

Santa Monica has a "dry trust." Well, it's only a short step to Venice where there's always something on tap.

Masculine humanity is divided into two classes—those who can play poker and those who think they can play.

A profound philosopher rises to ask, "Why is a man?" We don't know the answer, but we know a woman who does.

Dr. Wilson has been talking to farmers in the East. We don't see how he is going to take credit for this year's good crops.

The great white way has never been so white any more since Stanford White and Harry Thaw traveled that route together.

Our friend Pat Sullivan says it is funny how fond we are of what we like. Yes, and it's funny how fond we "ain't" of what we are not.

When a man accepts an invitation to a card party at the home of a friend, it is a toss-up whether he will leave with a full heart or a light purse.

Now that the Darrow trial promises to recede into history, perhaps some of the women attendants will have a chance to get acquainted with their own families.

The position of a Governor running for national office is like that of a husband away from home in that he may read frequent reminders that he is a married man.

A Pasadena pepper has just had a tooth filled. A tree doctor stuffed metal in a cavity of one of those famous Monterey pine trees which President Taft was so much admired.

A Los Angeles cloak model has been arrested at Portland. That's just the time with those people up there. They never meet a good thing from Los Angeles but they try to detain it.

Wayland Smith has become secretary of the association responsible for the new court. It is exquisitely appropriate to have a philosopher at the head of the work after the night before.

Vincent Astor sent his new bride and brother in New York a bunch of American Beauty roses. Answering in the same spirit of flowers a bouquet of yellow asters would have been nearer the time.

The women themselves have a plan which will eliminate the woman lobbyist from the floors of the General Assembly at Sacramento. This is nothing short of a plan to take the oil of joy out of politics.

INFORMATION

Socialists, as has already been stated in the Watchtower, believe that the five men they have named will certainly be on the ballot. One of the strongest candidates before the people for one of the ten places and a man who will unquestionably be elected if nominated, is William A. Alderson. Alderson is one of the leaders of the bar of Los Angeles as he was, too, during his residence in Kansas City and at St. Louis. He is the author of a valuable treatise on "Judicial Writs and Process," a treatise on the "Law of Receivers," and "Alderson's Beach on Receivers," all of which are standard legal works. From 1885 to 1890 he was first assistant counselor of Kansas City, Mo., and as such alone tried all that city's extensive litigation in the courts, both trial and appellate. His candidacy is indorsed by leading members of the bar of Los Angeles without regard to political party. Personally, he is dictator of the local lodge of Moose, the strongest and largest lodge of any fraternity in the world, with over 4000 members, besides being a Free and Accepted Mason and a Knight of Pythias. Alderson is now in attendance at the national convention of the Loyal Order of Moose, but his canvass is being looked after by energetic friends. Among the prominent attorneys who have indorsed his candidacy are: George H. Smith, ex-judge California Court of Appeals; W. H. Anderson, John D. Pope, Leslie R. Hewitt, K. A. Miller, John G. Mott, Norman J. Sterry, Benjamin E. Page, Charles L. Chandler, W. W. Phelps, Thomas Fitch, Orra E. Monette, Webster Davis, D. K. Trask, ex-judge Superior Court; William L. Jarrott, ex-judge Circuit Court Missouri; Joseph H. Call, Mendel B. Silberberg, W. R. Hervey, ex-judge Superior Court; John W. Kemp, R. M. Lusk, Herbert J. Goudge, Clara Shortridge Foltz, George L. Keefer, Ward Chapman, Oscar A. Trippett, L. M. Chapman, Burrel D. Neighbors, W. H. Dehm, Henry T. Sale, Thomas C. Job, R. F. Del Valle, Frank D. McClure, Walter S. Moore, Daniel M. Potter, Lew W. Collins and Gilbert W. Wyvell.

THE WATCHMAN.

POLITICAL TIPS.

Gov. Wilson is having to consume considerable political crow. His political utterances of past years come back as antitheses of the things he is saying and doing today, and the silence at Seagirt, N. J., is almost oppressive. Just now he is welcoming Mr. Bryan with open hands and assigning him campaign work as though he had not said on April 29, 1907: "Would that we could do something at once, dignified and effective, to knock Mr. Bryan once and for all into a cocked hat." Again in March, 1908, he said: "I have even wished at times that every fool could be also a knave instead of being, as they often are, people who possess attractive manners and excellent intentions. Take Mr. Bryan, for example. He is the most charming and lovable of men personally, but foolish and dangerous in his theoretical beliefs."

Gov. Wilson has even accepted Mr. Bryan's $1000 check to help along his political campaign.

Former Representative James W. Wadsworth of Genesee, N. Y., compares the present campaign to that of 1872 and 1896. "In the former, in the middle of August," he says, "Mr. Greeley would have been elected President of the United States, but in November Gen. Grant received the greatest number of electoral votes. In 1896, if there had been an election in the middle of August Mr. Bryan would have swept the country, but by November the thinking element among the voters had changed all this, and Mr. Bryan failed to secure the necessary number of electoral votes." He believes there will be a similar condition of things in November this year, and Mr. Taft will be elected without any question.

Bishop L. J. Coppin of the African Methodist Church, has come out in defense of the Republican party as a result of the letter of Col. Roosevelt to Julian Harris of Atlanta, in which the third-term aspirant practically advocated the disfranchisement of the negroes of the South. Bishop Coppin says:

"I had thought that Roosevelt would be man enough to declare for the equality and justice for the colored man in the South when this occasion came up. I have always been a stanch supporter of his until I read this letter. I see now he is not the man I thought he was, and even though I supported him through the 'Brownsville affair,' I will no longer support him. He has virtually read us out of the party, and any colored man who votes for him after that letter, is voting himself a free passage to Hades."

Congressman McCall of Massachusetts, who is a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator Crane, indorses the movement in the Legislature to secure a popular election of United States Senators, and says the change from the old method of electing Senators by the Legislatures is required by the astounding industrial and commercial development of the country and the resulting increased pressure for legislation.

"Do you think that if Edwin M. Lee had been appointed United States Marshal he would now be out organizing a Bull Moose party? Do you think that if Albert J. Beveridge had been re-elected to the United States Senate he would now be leading the third party? Do you think that if Fred Landis had been returned to Congress, he would now be a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Bull Moose ticket?" asked James A. Bingham, former Republican State Attorney-General, addressing the Republican county convention at Logansport, Ind.

The reply was a chorus of "No," that resounded throughout the convention hall.

"The party was good enough for them while they were in office, but now that they are out it is not. The party was all right when they could run the party, but now that they can no longer run it, why, they go out and organize a party that they can run," exclaimed Mr. Bingham.

James Graham Phelps Stokes, the millionaire Socialist, says he does not intend to distribute his holdings among the poor in any effort to emancipate people. "Socialists have not the least objection to people going hungry," he says, "if they are too indolent to earn a living by useful labor."

The political needs of New York at the present time are described as follows by William Barnes, Jr., chairman of the Republican State Committee:

"The State of New York needs a Governor who is his own master. The spectacle of a Governor who is merely the agent of a party organization or the choice of an individual citizen is not desired by the people of New York, but a Governor of broad mind work but not controlled by the organization of the political party from which he takes the nomination, is the orderly and proper solution of the problem which is presented in the so-called issue of 'bossism.'"

Some severe criticism of Col. Roosevelt is expressed in a letter written by the Rev. John F. Carson, a prominent Brooklyn minister.

"I have given careful thought to the moral issues involved in this crisis," said Dr. Carson in his letter. "Some things that were done at Chicago cannot be approved or condoned, but the wrong things were not on one side. The evasion and self-confessed insincerity of the Roosevelt party in framing up contests for 'psychological effect' are as damnable in morals as anything done by the National Committee, and for my part I will take my stand with the Taft forces on the morality of the contest.

"The exaggeration, the overemphasized ego, the self-assumed leadership of the people, the billingsgate and the holier-than-thou attitude of the leader and many of the followers of the third-term party are nauseating."

The question of prohibition enters largely into the campaign in Tennessee. The Republican platform is strong in favor of prohibition and Gov. Hooper is advocating Statewide prohibition while the Democratic nominee is supporting local option in the larger cities, and is making a point of the fact that his views are in accord with those of the Democratic nominee for President.

The entire people of the country will have to help the dissemination of political literature in the present national campaign whether they want to or not. By the action of the Senate the Taft, Wilson and Roosevelt speeches, including Roosevelt's "confession of faith," will be distributed as public documents which will prove a considerable saving of money to the campaign managers.

There appears to be a clear field for the election to the Senate of former Senator Davis Elkins of West Virginia upon whom the mantle of his father, Senator Stephen B. Elkins, fell at his death, as Col. Isaac T. Mann, the millionaire coal operator, has declined to be a candidate for election.

The tentative plan of the Bull Moose party is for Hiram W. Johnson to swing through the East and Theodore Roosevelt through the West. Every State is to be visited, some by both candidates. For the first time in years an actual contest over the Presidential election is to be waged below the Mason and Dixon line in an endeavor to break the "solid South."

Theodore Roosevelt, in his desire to become President, is violating the Federal statutes, declare legal experts in Congress, when he announced that all Republican candidates for Congress must swear allegiance to him and his policies, or have opposition next November. Col. Roosevelt announced in Chicago that he proposes to force every Republican candidate for Congress to agree to help him, should the election for President be thrown into the House of Representatives, a contingency that may possibly occur.

Here is where members of Congress say Co. Roosevelt is running counter to the law; for any candidate making such a pledge would subject himself to fine or imprisonment, or both, according to the corrupt practices act passed by Congress, August 19, 1911, which says:

"No candidate for Representative in Congress or for Senator of the United States, shall promise any office or position to any person, or use his influence or give his support to any person for any office or position for the purpose of securing the support of such person, or of any person in his candidacy."

A fine not to exceed $1000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, is prescribed for viola-

SEEKS REMOVAL OF FRUIT DUTY.

EXPRESS MANAGER ADVOCATES RECIPROCITY ACT.

Shipments of Citrus Fruits to Mexico and Importation of Limes Non-Competitive and Should Be Free, He Asserts—Big Trade Being Developed in New Fields.

If the duty on a carload of California fruit expressed to the City of Mexico is $174.84, and the duty on a carload of Mexico limes to points in the United States is practically the same if the products are non-competitive in the respective countries to which they are shipped, and if in each instance the consumer is called upon to pay the tariff, why should not old General Reciprocity take a hand in restoring the equilibrium?

This is a question which occurred to Elmer R. Jones, superintendent of Wells, Fargo & Co., when he began a few months ago to develop an entirely new idea in the exporting and importing of fruit between California and the Mexican capital.

The plan was perfected too late to do much with it last year, but with the opening of the fruit season this summer Wells, Fargo & Co. placed in commission between California and Mexico City a semi-weekely fast express service of new, large and modern Wells Fargo refrigerator cars. In three weeks ten of these cars have gone forward, and before the season ends the movement is expected to reach large proportions.

"The best part of the service," said Jones, yesterday, "is that we are developing an entirely new field, and creating a market hitherto disregarded, but which is full of possibilities. We can reach Mexico in four days with our fruit in perfect condition, as against fifteen days or more by freight, with its attendant uncertainty.

"Coming this way, we are developing a trade of considerable proportion in limes. By the way, did you know that these limes grow in great profusion in the mountainous regions of the republic? Well, they do, and we have agents at regularly-established stations who have organized the Indians into lime-sides and they gather alone for these limes already reaches $40,000 annually and fully 95 per cent. of the limes so shipped are growing wild. Only recently has their culture been scientifically undertaken."

"Of the two cars of fruit which we expect to ship south each week the growers probably receive on an average $1000 a car, but when they run up against a duty of $244.69 (Mexican) it is discouraging.

"Shipments of fruit by express on a big scale was made possible by co-operation with the Mexican company and securing a through rate that would get the business. We have this rate now and it seems too bad that a reciprocity arrangement cannot be entered into with the Mexican government for the removal of the duty on California fruit sent to Mexico and which just about offsets the American duty on Mexican limes brought into the Statese.

"Naturally, we feel proud of the development of this business, which is only another step in the establishment of closer commercial relations between the two countries."

Superintendent Jones lived for several years in Mexico and is still vice-president of the Mexican company. He is confident that the expansion of the non-competitive markets will be to the great advantage of both countries, and can see no object in exchanging tariffs at the expense of the consumer.

NOT FOR FADS.

Mr. Chapman Says He Is a Real Republican and a Real "Progressive."

In an interview with the Orange County Tribune, C. C. Chapman, candidate for the State Senate on the Taft ticket made the following statement:

"I am a Republican and have been since a boy. I marched in the Junior Brigade of Tanners in 1865, when Gen. Grant ran the first time for President. Though not a politician, I have all these years been deeply interested in the political affairs, not only of my State, but of the nation. I shall vote, if nominated, for Taft electors, and shall oppose any attempt to select electors who will vote for Col. Roosevelt or any other man other than the regular nominee of the Republican party.

"I shall work and vote for everything which makes for the material, social and industrial betterment of the people of our district and State. I think I need not go into details for my friends know that I am enterprising, and also have an interest in the people in their welfare and happiness. I believe in progress along all lines.

"While I am progressive, and agree with much that is being done and said today seems to fill the minds of so many of our people. True progress, political, material, industrial and moral, to be permanent, must be made by methods that are rational and along lines that are sane and safe.

"I am for clean politics. My only interest is in the welfare of the people. I am not subject to any 'boss' or the dictation of any committee. I will take my orders only from the people. If anyone would go to the Legislature as free as I will go, in I go at all, there would be no legislation enacted that would not be in the interest of the people, and not for any ique, class or interest, great or small.

"I believe in a tariff that will protect. It is evident to all citrus, nut and sugar beet growers and producers of dried fruits in Southern California, as well as producers in many other lines, that the prosperity which we have enjoyed has depended solely upon the protection which our products have received. This has been given to us by the Republican party and over the protests of the Democratic party.

"If the Democrats have their innings, with the aid of some of the Progressives, we may expect our products to be more completely 'steam rollered' than the Progressives claim the national committee 'steam rollered' some of the Roosevelt delegates in Chicago, or even worse than the work proposed to be done by the latest improved model, high-powered six Cylinder steam roller which the Progressives are preparing to put in operation in our own State, and with which they propose to mangle and crush the very life out of the Republican Party. The great prosperous section which we now have cannot stand that kind of treatment.

"The products of Southern California are in jeopardy. The situation is more serious than most people suppose. When our farming interests are crippled all other interests will suffer. Therefore I stand first, last and all the time for adequate protection for all our products which meet with foreign competition."

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

City Auditor Myers yesterday made public the fact that he is holding up more than $22,000 worth of Southern Pacific freight bills pending an opinion from the City Attorney as to whether a lower freight rate can be enforced that would save the city nearly $40,000 on the price of hauling the steel for the Los Angeles aqueduct.

A conference was held in the Mayor's office yesterday on the subject of restricting street speaking, and the proposition is being considered of confining the street oratory to Los Angeles street, from First street to the Plaza.

Col. McKinstry has approved the plans and specifications for the municipal wharves at Mormon Island and the Board of Public Works will take action on them during the ensuing week.

Announcement was made yesterday that 50 per cent. of the Wilmington-San Pedro highway is finished and that work is being rushed on the balance of the work.

When a woman seeking a divorce asserted that her husband's home was not fit for her to live in, the Superior Court judge yesterday took a look at the place to see for himself.

At the City Hall.

ESPEE FREIGHT BILLS HELD UP.

CITY AUDITOR BELIEVES LOWER RATE SHOULD PREVAIL.

No Freight Paid to Railroad Since July 29, as City Officials Allege Carrier Should Meet Figures Made by Santa Fe—City Attorney Now Investigating.

Can the city of Los Angeles effect a saving of $38,737 on freight charges for carrying aqueduct steel from Leetsdale, Pa., to Mojave, Keeler, or other points adjacent to the big municipal work, by insisting upon the application of the lowest rate received from transportation companies, or can the Southern Pacific complete the carrying of the entire amount of steel pipe and charge the rate of 80 cents per 100 pounds for unriveted pipe and $1 per 100 pounds for riveted pipe?

This is a question that has been put forth by City Auditor Myers, after an investigation of several weeks in regard to freight-carrying for the aqueduct, and which has been referred to the City Attorney.

Meanwhile, all freight bills of the Southern Pacific against the city are being held up. Not one has been paid since the 29th day of last July, nor will any be paid until the questions involved are settled. Freight bills now held up amount to more than $38,000.

M. L. Ryder, local freight agent for the Southern Pacific, yesterday presented to the Board of Public Works a statement showing that freight bills of the company were held up by the City Auditor, upon the advice of the City Attorney, and declaring that all bills were properly audited and approved, he demanded to know why they were not paid.

City Auditor Myers yesterday made public the facts which have been placed in the hands of the City Attorney, and on which he bases the claim that a 65-cent rate per 100 pounds, made by the Santa Fe Railroad, should be the rate at which the steel should be carried, thus effecting to the city a saving of nearly $40,000 over the rate charged by the Southern Pacific.

City Auditor Myers bases his contention on the grounds that in a contract between the city and the Southern Pacific in connection with the building of the Southern Pacific line into Owens Valley, a routing clause in the contract provides that the Southern Pacific shall at least equal the facilities and not exceed the rates of other railroads, and that when the Aqueduct Bureau asked the railroads for rates on carrying the aqueduct steel from the Pennsylvania town the Southern Pacific made the rate of 80 cents and $1 on the unriveted and riveted pipes, respectively, while later the Santa Fe offered a rate of 65 cents per 100 pounds less than the Southern Pacific.

After correspondence with the railroad companies, the Santa Fe withdrew its bid and the Southern Pacific began the hauling of the freight; but after 500 tons had been moved, the Santa Fe again submitted a bid of 65 cents per 100 pounds, for the remaining 9055 tons yet to be moved, submitting that this would effect a saving to the city of more than $38,000. The Santa Fe demanded an immediate acceptance of this offer.

The offer was before the Aqueduct Advisory Board for three days, but the Southern Pacific learned of this, and the result was that for the second time the Santa Fe withdrew its offer.

Since then the Southern Pacific has insisted upon its privilege of routing the freight as it saw fit, and it has routed 1500 tons of the steel pipe over the Santa Fe at regular schedule rates.

Auditor Myers stated yesterday: "I am strongly impressed that section six of the specifications was intended to cover the matter of competition and indicated that competition would be had.

"In my judgment there exists both a legal and moral obligation on the part of the Southern Pacific to meet the conditions of the specifications, which, I believe, can only be interpreted in favor of the city."

The data of City Auditor Myers is now in the hands of the City Attorney, and it is expected that he will give an opinion to the Auditor during the fore part of this week as to whether the city has a legal right to the 65-cent rate and whether it should recover for the alleged over-charges in excess of the 65-cent rate, also as to the proper mode of procedure in endeavoring to recover the alleged excess charges.

STREET SPEAKING.

SHALL IT BE CONFINED?

Shall street speaking be allowed in various sections of the city, to the constant annoyance of the property owners where such gatherings occur, or shall the city set aside a district within which street speakers must confine themselves?

This was the subject of a conference reached, but it is probable the consideration of the subject will be resumed tomorrow.

It has been suggested that Los Angeles street, from First street to the old Plaza, be set aside for a free-speech district, as this is a wide thoroughfare, devoted almost exclusively to wholesaling business, which is not in operation in the evenings, and which is also within easy reach of the down-town district, so that any persons who so desires may easily reach it and hear the various creeds and isms that are now expounded on various street corners.

Chief of Police Sebastian stated yesterday that he was in favor of such a district, and he was supported in this by Councilmen McKenzie and Topham. Besides Councilmen, the Mayor and the Chief of Police, there were present at the conference citizens who feel that they are being subjected to undue annoyance by the street-speaking as it now exists.

F. O. Johnson, of the Westminster Hotel, appeared before the Mayor and asked for immediate relief from the continued nightly gatherings at the corner of Fourth and Main streets, declaring that they have become a nuisance.

McKinstry Approves.

Col. McKinstry has given his approval to the plans and specifications for the municipal wharves for Mormon Island, and yesterday they were sent by the Harbor Commission to the Board of Public Works, and referred by that body to its special counsel for approval as to form. During the ensuing week it is probable that the Board of Public Works will give its formal approval to the plans and specifications and issue the advertisement for bids.

Fifty Per Cent. Finished.

The Board of Public Works was informed yesterday that 50 per cent. of the Wilmington-San Pedro highway has been completed and that the contractor is using every means to hasten the completion of the balance. It was stated that when his work is finished, there will yet remain two gaps in the roadway that cannot be finished until the land litigation now in the courts is settled, as it involves these stretches.

Revision of Names.

Laura C. Whitlock yesterday sent to City Clerk Handley a communication in which she urges that the City Council adopt a plan for the annual revision of street names, so as to do away with the constant changes in names that now occur, and the consequent confusion to merchants in their delivery of goods, and to the mail carriers.

Miss Whitlock states that after nine years' experience as a map-maker she is convinced that the plan proposed is eminently a fair and practical one.

She advises that long and well-known streets be continued through annexed territories, thus eliminating small and obscure streets; that makers of subdivisions be required to avoid the duplication of names of streets in other sections of the city; and that revision be completed by the first of April each year, and that property owners on streets affected have a month's time to appear before an advisory board to make their complaint, and after the board has passed upon these, the decisions shall become permanent.

Arroyo Unsanitary.

Health Commissioner Powers yesterday sent to the City Council a complaint against the unsanitary condition of the Arroyo de la Sacatella from Old Temple road to Irola and Tenth streets. He complains of the pools of stagnant water and decaying tulles, where mosquitoes breed and frogs thrive, and asks the Council to instruct the Board of Public Works to abate the nuisance.

Mayor Makes Appointment.

Mayor Alexander yesterday named Frank C. Bundy as assistant Sealer of Weights and Measures. The appointment will go before the City Council next Tuesday.

At the Courthouse.

JUDGE INSPECTS HOUSE HIMSELF.

WANTS TO SEE IF IT IS FIT FOR WOMAN'S HOME.

Versatile Spouse Waits Nineteen Months for His Better Half to Share His Fortunes, but Instead She Asks Court for Divorce. Hubby Still Lives in Solitude.

"It humiliated me to eat grub at a house where every mouthful was watched and where I could see I was not wanted," Oscar A. Thacker told Judge Monroe yesterday.

He was contesting his wife's suit for divorce and alleged that while she induced him to leave Oregon, where he was employed in a logging camp on Coos Bay and come to Los Angeles, she now refuses to live with him in the house he has rented, No. 1803 East Thirty-seventh street.

Mrs. Thacker asserts the house is not fit to live in. With the view of determining the question for himself, Judge Monroe went to the house yesterday afternoon. He said it looked like an effort to get rid of Thacker, as he had been arrested for failure to provide. Thacker has been occupying the house alone for nineteen months, waiting for his family to join him.

Thacker appeared the most versatile man who has appeared recently in the divorce court. He was a logger and fisherman in the North and turned his hand to any occupation he could get on his arrival in this city. He took up carpentry and made good, and at odd times began the construction of a $3500 boat.

The money for the boat as well as the furniture for his home was supplied by his brother.

HE LANDS THE JOB.

COMPLIMENTS ARCHITECT.

Mrs. Lillie G. Webb unconsciously paid a compliment to the business enterprise of Robert H. Walker, architect, by stating in Judge Rector's court yesterday afternoon:

"I was looking for another firm of architects and got in this man's office. I couldn't get away from him. He followed me around—"

The attorneys became involved in an argument at this point and the sentence was unfinished. It appears that Walker was employed by Mrs. Webb to draw the plans for the Albemarle Apartments. He began construction he was notified by Mrs. Webb that she refused to be bound by the terms of the agreement. He filed suit for $1310 damages. Mrs. Webb filed an answer and cross-complaint.

CHARGES DECEIT.

DEEDS PROPERTY FOR BONDS.

A complaint in deceit asking $25,000 damages was filed by I. W. and Fannie M. Gleason against A. W. McPherson, W. F. Nordholt and H. A. Landwehr yesterday. It is alleged that the Gleasons transferred a lot in the Bonnie Brae tract for $30,000 bonds of the Bisbee Light and Power Company on the representation that the bonds were gilt-edged and were guaranteed by Edward M. Dean & Co., bankers, of Grand Rapids.

These representations and others alleged to have been made are declared to be false. The bonds were purchased through the agency of J. C. Proud, the complaint states. Landwehr is alleged to be a broker with offices at 307 Douglas Building and was employed by McPherson and Nordholt to dispose of the bonds of the company.

EXPERT ON VALUES.

LAND HIGH AT HARBOR.

Axel Longquist, a real estate operator of San Pedro, was examined as to values in the city's condemnation suit in Judge Bordwell's court yesterday. His figures were $5 a square foot for lot 14, block 93, and $4 for the rest of the lots in the block. For lot 11 in block 92, the value was $4, and $3.50 for the others in the same block.

These values compare with the figures given by other experts called by the defendant property owners. The city has not put on its experts as to values. The area it is seeking to condemn for warehouse, dock and slip purposes is about 207,000 square feet.

IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Phoney Jewelry Didn't Deceive Court Who Fines Peddler Heavily for Selling It.

Valentine Curry received little consideration at the hands of Police Judge Rose yesterday morning after he had been convicted of peddling "phoney" jewelry, for the court quickly fined him $25 or twenty-five days in the city jail.

For about a week the police have been receiving complaints from various sections of the city, more particularly the East Side, that a gang of men, roughly dressed, have been reaping a harvest by selling cheap rings, watches and other articles of jewelry. Efforts to catch the men resulted in the arrest of Curry. A quantity of the cheapest kind of jewelry was found on his person.

Yielded Not to Temptation.

"While I appreciate the fact that negroes have a penchant for watermelons, and are accused of swiping them whenever they get a chance, I am convinced from the testimony that this colored man is honest and did not attempt to steal the melon in question."

Justice Rose divested himself of that declaration in the Police Court yesterday when he discharged L. B. Davidson, a negro, accused by Special Officer Harrington and others at a public market of stealing a 20-cent melon belonging to N. Noble. Davidson is a teamster. He said he selected a melon and while he was holding it his team leaders tried to get up on the sidewalk. When he rushed towards them, melon in hand, he was arrested. His employer testified as to his honesty.

WHERE DOES HE LIVE?

Court Asked to Decide Official Residence of Assembly Candidate On Lissner Ticket.

That J. Henry Baetz, Lissner candidate for the Assembly from the Sixty-fifth District, is not a resident of the district and therefore is not eligible as a candidate, is the charge made in an injunction suit filed yesterday in the Superior Court against County Clerk Lelande. Several other actions of a similar character are to be filed this week involving the right of other candidates on the Lissner slate to have their names on the primary ballot.

The law is, that to be eligible for the Assembly, a person must have resided within the district for at least one year. In Baetz's case, Lissner and the Earl newspaper organs have declared that he has been a resident ever since he was eight years of age. As a matter of fact, according to the affidavit filed by L. F. Roister with the application for an injunction yesterday, Baetz does not reside in the district and has not resided there for one year. He is said to live in Precinct No. 25, which is in the Sixty-sixth Assembly District.

Attorneys Morgan and Bartlett who began the action yesterday, represent the Republican Campaign Committee and are working in the interest of President Taft. Morgan is chairman of the committee. The injunction is served upon County Clerk Lelande because Lelande has the making up of the ballots and under the law is the sole judge as to what names shall go on the ballot and what shall not. The alternate writ was issued from Department No. 5 of the court and was made returnable tomorrow morning.

CHEAP LIGHT FOR GLENDALE.

Public Service Commission Makes Proposition to Deliver for Less Than Corporation Offers.

The Public Service Commission of this city has submitted to representatives of the Glendale city government its proposition on the furnishing of electric energy to Glendale, commencing April 1 of next year. It proposes to enter into a five-year contract with Glendale to deliver in Garvanza 32,000 volts of electricity for 1.08 cents per kilowatt hour, which price, after allowing for the extra cost of six miles of transmission line, would deliver the energy to Glendale at a cost of approximately 10 per cent. less than the proposal of a private corporation.

This agreement was reached at a conference during the past week, participated in by City Trustee C. A. Lane Kotner, manager of the Pasadena municipal lighting plant; Frank G. Henderson, president of the Public Service Commission, and E. F. Scattergood, electrical engineer for this commission.

The city of Glendale has a contract with the Pacific Light and Power Corporation that will be terminated November 1. This company has offered Glendale a new five-year contract at rates averaging 1.52 cents per kilowatt hour.

ADMISSION DAY PLANS.

Arrangements are being perfected by the local parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West for the excursion to Stockton next month to celebrate the admission of this State into the Union. Riverside Parlor will attend in a body. Arrangements for transportation may be made with Cal Grayson and Clarence Hunt.

The report of the Board of Health for the week ending yesterday showed a decided falling off in the number of cases of infantile paralysis over the previous week. The number of cases reported for the week was nineteen. The week previous showed thirty-one

Colonial Furniture is the American Classic. Created in the stormy days of our Nation's Birth,—it breathes the noblest sentiments associated with our national life. Colonial reproductions are, therefore, from the historic point of view, the ideal furniture for the Living-room, Dining-room, Hall or Bedroom of the modern American home.

But not alone to its historic and sentimental character does Colonial Furniture owe its supremacy today. The very fact that it has lived and grown in popularity through the centuries, demonstrates how thoroughly it conforms to the practical requirements of the home.
Its rare beauty—exquisite grace—and artistic simplicity are on eternal principles of art and can never die, and most important of all,—it is real comfort furniture and there is practically no wear out to it.

The "California" showing of these Colonial reproductions is one of the most notable exhibits in America. Every piece is built of selected Cuban Mahogany, and represents the very highest type of present day American Cabinet making. Considering that this furniture is constructed with such integrity that it will last a life time—it is exceedingly economical to buy.
We cordially invite you to visit our store and see our splendid and interesting exhibit.

A study of our windows this week which shows some interesting Colonial reproductions for the Living Room, will give you an idea of the masterful character of this furniture.

POLITICAL DRAW POKER.

It Seems Favorite Game of Russian Diplomacy.

Remarkable Longevity of Kutusov's Veterans.

Mutiny of Sappers Causes Apprehension.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from New York to The Times.]

BY GEORGE FRASER.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—So far from having reached a definite understanding as to the future of both empires in the regulation of the affairs of China—as is gravely set forth by various St. Petersburg and Tokyo correspondents—Japan and Russia are watching each other's movements on the Oriental mainland with the alertness of the panther and catlike cunning. Neither nation is anxious to pick a quarrel, but both are equally determined to rule the roost in China. Russia's latest move in the game of political draw poker is the sending of M. Koksoffseff on a mission to Peking and Tokyo to reason with President Yuan-Shi-Kai and to bring the Japanese government to a sense of the necessity of deference to Muscovite views in any arrangement regarding internal or external affairs which the Peking Cabinet may undertake to make.

JOURNALIST IN DISFAVOR.

Russia is accused of conspiring to oust Yuon's English adviser, Dr. Morrison, a former British newspaper correspondent who is now acting in an official capacity at a very substantial salary. Morrison is not in favor at St. Petersburg, owing to the tenor of his dispatches during the Russo-Japanese war. Russia fears that she will make little headway in her plans as to China so long as Morrison remains at the elbow of the Chinese President. Openly, however, she is not showing her disfavor, out of courtesy to Great Britain, a much needed friend at the present juncture of her own affairs. Russia is determined to recover in some manner or form an ice-free outlet on the Oriental seaboard; and Japan is just as determined to prevent her doing so. Both nations are held back by unpreparedness for war; Japan, because her financial resources are strained to the limit; Russia, through the disorganization of her army and the loss of her navy. And they are both equally anxious to prevent any foreign loan in which American bankers will gain prestige and influence and which might afford the State Department at Washington a reason for intervening in the future squabbles which are anticipated by the other nations intriguing in China.

RUSSIAN LONGEVITY.

The centenary of the campaign of 1812 is now being celebrated throughout Russia. Places of honor are being given to the living veterans of Kutusov's army which hung on the flanks of Napoleon's legions from Malo-Jaroslavets until the specters of what had been the mighty "grand army" trudged their weary way across the frozen Beresina. Twenty-five of these soldiers of a century ago still live to cheer for "Holy Russia" and the "White Father." The oldest is 134; the youngest 117. There are some Russian records of longevity—the fruits of a hard climate and rugged, plain living. The veterans were discovered after Russia was searched from the Arctic Circle to the foot of the mountains at the Black Sea for survivors of the war which marked the beginning of the end of the Master of Europe, to insult whose vaulting ambition Moscow was put to the torch and whole provinces laid barren. The greatest fervor prevails, and for once party bitterness are submerged in the honoring of the men of 1812.

MUTINY OF SAPPERS.

The causes leading up to the mutiny of Sappers in Turkestan have been kept secret. As this service is recruited from skilled artisans, it is surmised that the movement is due to a revolutionary agency, but possibly it originated from purely local causes. Cases have been known where the men have been dissatisfied with being employed for private purposes without proper remuneration. The insubordination of the troops in Turkestan, although confined to one particular branch, causes all the more anxiety in view of the recent reports of disaffection among the sailors in the Black Sea.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY.

Department Store Buyer Passes Away Soon After Arriving at His Home—Hemorrhage the Cause.

Fred T. Gunther, foreign buyer for Hamburger's for thirteen years, died suddenly Thursday night at his home, No. 218 West Fifty-fifth street, after an attack of cerebral trouble. The cause of death is believed to have been a hemorrhage of the brain.

Gunther left the store Thursday night at the usual time, saying he was going home to dinner. He did not arrive until 9:30 and he was apparently taken sick on the way. He said his head felt badly as soon as he came into the house. He lay down, lost consciousness almost immediately, and died soon after. He leaves a wife and stepson. The funeral services will be held at Pierce Bros'. tomorrow.

Gunther had traveled extensively in France, Germany, Switzerland and Austria buying toys, trunks, etc., for Hamburger's. He was 54 years old.

Founds a School for Working Girls.

LADY DECIES GIVES PRIZE FOR BEST SET OF TEETH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—Like Miss Helen Gould, Lady Decies is a great believer in helping others to help themselves. She has established a school for young working girls near the castle at Lutrellstown, which she superintends herself. It is already a great success.

The object of the school is twofold: (1) to prepare the daughters of peasants and laborers to become self-supporting through the knowledge of the useful arts; and (2) to teach young women the duties and responsibilities of matronhood, so that when they marry their homes will be attractive to their husbands. The lady of the castle and the parish priest of Lutrellstown are fast and firm friends. The priest is a real "progressive" and in a recent sermon, without mentioning names, he instanced how much Lutrellstown owes to the gifted American lady who has brought sunshine to this picturesque part of Ireland from the New World.

Among the numerous useful improvements which Lady Decies has inaugurated is the interest of pupils and teachers in the schools in the preservation of good teeth. Her ladyship brought a dentist to Lutrellstown at her own expense, paying him an excellent salary to look after the teeth of the school children, and to get the boys and girls interested, she gives weekly prizes for the best set of teeth in school.

"SISTERHOOD OF SUSAN" SCARES BRITISH CABINET.

Sinister Offshoot of Militant Suffrage Movement Keeps Scotland Yard Detectives on the Move—Will that Went Down With Titanic Is Admitted to Probate by English Court.

BY PAUL DAMBETH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—British Cabinet ministers are in hourly fear of death at the hands of emissaries of the "Sisterhood of Susan." This is a secret suffrage organization—the latest and most sinister offshoot of the militant suffrage movement. Special inspectors of Scotland Yard, experienced detectives and "strong-arm" police deadshots, have been told to watch every movement of Premier Asquith, David Lloyd George, Winston Churchill and Reginald McKenna, the government leaders known to be in the greatest danger. When each of these Cabinet members leaves home in the morning he is "shadowed" by his special protector. If the minister walks, the police guard walks; if he takes a motor-car, his "shadow" follows in a fast taxi. Not for one moment, during day or night, is the threatened statesman left unguarded.

These measures were not taken by order of the ministers whose lives are deemed in grave danger. Premier Asquith, when he learned that he was the subject of special solicitude on the part of Scotland Yard, smilingly suggested the withdrawal of the guard. The head of the criminal investigation department demurred and cited an authority given by Parliament to his office to "take all needful steps for the protection of ministers of the Crown" following the assassination of Perceval in the early part of the previous century. The objection of ministers was not pressed further, as it is the conviction of men of all parties that the threats of the "Suffrage Nihilists," as they are called, are made in the seriousness of deadly enmity and no light vaporings of sensation-seeking cranks. The "Sisterhood of Susan" is said to have gained considerable strength since the pronouncement of terms of penal servitude in the cases of suffragettes found guilty of outrages committed in various parts of the three kingdoms during the spring and summer months.

The town residences of the Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer in Downing street, that of McKenna in Old Queen street, and that of Mr. Churchill in Eccleston Square, are guarded day and night by relays of uniformed policemen. In Downing street four officers are always on duty, being stationed near the front doors, at the rear of the gardens, and in the passage alongside Mr. Asquith's house leading to Horse Guards Parade. Mr. Churchill and Mr. McKenna have each an officer always on duty outside the front door. For the protection of other ministers placed on short beats, so that an officer is never far away.

GERMAN WAR BOGY AGAIN.

Despite statements to the contrary, fear of war between England and Germany is increasing rather than diminishing. Arrests made of persons accused of espionage by the military officers of both nations have inflamed public opinion. That Germany is watching every movement made by the British War Office is proved conclusively by revelations made during the trial of Armgaard Karl Graves, who has just been sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment by the justices of the Scottish High Court sitting at Edinburgh. Graves laughed in the faces of his judges and when sentence was pronounced remarked, "Well, it has been a fair trial."

Secret cypher codes, cryptogram cabines, note-books with pages gummed together to conceal records made by the spy, were unearthed by the detectives who trailed Graves. Scientists, including several famous college professors, studied these documents without fee moved by a patriotic desire to aid the government and protect the shores of Britain from invasion. A few of many incriminating notes and messages deciphered after patient investigation were the following:

"Current rumors. Present. Incoming. Outgoing. Clearing for action. Have lowered defending nets. Land fortifications are ready for action. Protective maneuvers are being carried out at sea. Coal being carried by rail. Coal steamer arrived at ——— town. Preparations are being made. Remarkable influx of reservists. Mine fields being laid. All is quiet; nothing important to report. Liners are appearing."

There were also the names, with code equivalents, or various classes of battleships, cruisers and destroyers, such as the Orion class, the Dreadnought class, the Lord Nelson class, the Lion class and the Invincible class. "It is an extensive code, dealing practically with the whole of the British navy, including torpedoes, destroyers and submarines, mine layers, and mine searchers," declared the Solicitor-General for Scotland, who prosecuted. "There are also code words for Scapa Flow, Moray Firth and Cromarty."

WILL AT BOTTOM OF THE OCEAN PROBATED.

The British courts have given probate to a will which went down with the Titanic in a trunk containing jewels and other belongings of a young American woman who was making a honeymoon trip to the United States with her husband, Sidney Samuel Jacobsohn, a wealthy London merchant. Jacobsohn was drowned, staying aboard the last liner when his wife was taken off by one of the first lifeboats. Mrs. Jacobsohn's body was not found, but the will was admitted to probate on the testimony of the young widow, and her lawyer, through Mr. Barnard, K. C., proved the terms of the will by producing a draft made in England before the couple sailed for the United State. A caveat was entered by English relatives of Jacobsohn, but the court ordered that probate should be allowed "pending the recovery of the will." Sir Samuel Evans, the presiding judge, referred to the act that a will which went down with the Oceana was recovered lately after much hardship had been caused the beneficiaries through the courts' non-acceptance of the draft. "Unless a charge of fraud can be made out," ruled Sir Samuel, "the draft stands and is to be recorded as the executed will in question."

FORGOT HIS NAME.

A remarkable case of loss of memory and accidental recovery was disclosed following the arrival of the White Star liner Majestic at Plymouth from New York. On board was a well-dressed middle-aged gentleman who had no idea who he was. His name could not be traced on the passenger list. Neither officers of the steamer nor fellow-travellers could offer any clew to his identity. He had plenty of money on him, but not a scrap of paper or anything else to help ascertain his name or part in life. Doctors and officials worried over his case; the man himself was visibly distressed. Just as the experts had abandoned all hope of solving the mystery and as the subject was arriving the dock to seek a hospital to rest his troubled brain, a him, took him by the hand and said: "Oh, papa! I was so afraid I had missed you. Mother was too sick to come down to the big steamer and sent me to meet you." Intelligence came to the man's eyes as they rested on the fair head of the child. He gave his name as George Elders of Chichester, who had gone to the United States to visit relatives a few weeks ago. He could not explain how he had lost his memory. Elders is a man of considerable wealth and prominence in the flourishing manufacturing city where his home is, noted for the possession of many art treasures.

LEGALITY OF MIXED MARRIAGE

The legality of mixed marriages in Quebec, Can., is being considered by the court of the Privy Council on an appeal made against a decision of the Canadian Supreme Court declaring unconstitutional the recently-passed (Dominion) Marriage Laws Amendment Act, legalizing the marriages of Catholics where celebrated by qualified parties not priests of the Catholic Church.

It is sought to establish whether the Canadian Parliament has authority to make the proposed amendments of the marriage act. Another point for decision is whether the law of the province of Quebec renders null and void—unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest—a marriage between two Roman Catholics or between persons one only of whom is a Roman Catholic. If the answer is in the affirmative, the committee is Parliament has authority to enact that all such marriages shall be legal and binding. The Canadian Supreme Court has held that the proposed legislation is ultra vires; and against this there is an appeal. The judges also held that the law of Quebec did not invalidate, unless contracted by a Roman Catholic priest, marriage in which one of the contracting parties was a Roman Catholic and this decision is also challenged. The Canadian government instructed counsel to support both affirmative and negative contentions.

SOCIALISM ON ANOTHER TACK.

Party in France Recognizes Some of Its Errors.

Zoological Expert Develops Musical Rat in Paris.

Woman in Lyons Gets Award Against Beauty Doctor.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, Aug. 17.—French Socialism is undergoing a complete transition. The demand for "union" and "organization" has superseded the cry of "revolution." The Socialists of France, at last, recognize that the Republic is founded upon a foundation destined to withstand the assaults of visionary fanatics and desperate self-seekers.

La Guerre Sociale, which, during M. Caillaux's ministry, came out with open battlecry in gigantic capitals, "down with the Republic," urging that any regime was better than the existing order, now exclaims:

"All of us have used and abused the critical spirit, which is a terrible instrument of revolutionary faith. It began with the systematic crabbing of the Radical Party in politics and in its works. Then we went on to [illegible] the Socialistic Party likewise, [illegible] by a pleasant process of generation called it a hotbed of [illegible] and humbugs on the make. [illegible] did our best to wreck the faith [illegible] of the working class in the Parliamentary system. Unfortunately, we have overshot the mark. We succeeded only too well. "In conclusion, after having [illegible] steady revolt, we shall now wait until circumstances alter, [illegible] organization and union."

THE QUEEN OF SPAIN IS POPULAR TELEPHONE GIRL.

BY LADY MANWARING.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The Queen of Spain, with her daughter, the Infanta Beatrice of Spain, is here on a visit, renewing girlhood acquaintances. Her Majesty looks exceedingly well and has been seen by and is seing most of the notables left in England after the general exodus to the continent and the New World. The Queen paid a visit the other day to the principal London telephone exchanges and chatted to the "Hello Girls" just like a sister. Although it is not generally known, Alfonso's capable consort is the only royal "Hello Girl." In the royal palace at Madrid she possesses what is probably the most elaborate telephone receiver and transmitter in the world. It is made of solid silver, and was presented to her by the employees of the Spanish telephone company. The base is of Louis XV. design, and is surmounted by four Hercules columns, at the foot of which sits a small boy supporting the Spanish arms. He is in telephonic communication with a daintily-modelled English girl, beside whom crouches the British lion. On the top of the columns a Renaissance arch supports two cupids, who hold aloft the microphone. The whole is crowned by the Arms of Spain and England artistically interlaced. Queen Ena values this very highly indeed. She manages her own telephone exchange and is said to be exemplary in answering calls promptly when on duty.

tions to dine out, because he cannot return hospitality of this kind. He is literally starving to death.

GLACIERS SHRINKING.

The latest official report on the shrinkage of the Swiss glaciers shows that there was a marked diminution in their dimensions last year. Observations were made of sixty-seven glaciers, only three of which showed an increase. The longest glacier, the Aletsch, lost eighteen yards and the Tschingel glacier sixty yards.

The lower Grindelwald glacier, which in the first half of the nineteenth century stretched right down into the valley, has retreated for an immense distance, and nothing is to be seen from the valley but masses of debris left in vast heaps by the melting of the ice.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The most intimate friend of Mrs. John Astor, who is now being urged to go more into British society which she has practically shunned for months past, is Mrs. Benjamin Guinness. Both women have much in common, and both are ideal hostesses.

Mrs. Guinness gave one of the prettiest fetes which marked the concluding round of gaiety before our notables took wings to seek amusement elsewhere. All the guests had to wear dominos and masks and it was a genuine old-fashioned masque with several amusing contretemps as the sequel.

Mrs. Guinness is usually regarded as an American, as she spends most of her time with her husband in the United States. Benjamin Guinness, who is a cousin of Lord Ardilaun and Lord Iveagh, whose family amassed a fortune in the celebrated Dublin breweries, is a financier, interested in numerous American investments.

YOUNG HEIRESS SPIRITED AWAY.

"COONEYITE" PREACHERS ARE CHARGED WITH CRIME.

Pressure Brought Upon Viceroy of Ireland to Exercise Strict Censorship that Would Prevent Presentation of Such Productions as "Playboy of the Western World."

BY THOMAS EMMETT.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.—A special officer on the staff of Chief Inspector of the Royal Irish Constabulary has left for Salt Lake City, Utah, to investigate an alleged case of Mormon kidnaping reported by the police commissioner at Belfast. It was charged that a young heiress was spirited away by the "Cooneyites," as the Irish Mormons are called, kept in confinment in this country for over six months and then secretly conveyed to the United States.

ACCUSES COONEYITES.

The father of the young girl—she is only in her seventeenth year—is a wealthy farmer, owner of extensive estates in County Antrim. He has made a deposition accusing "Cooneyite" preachers of having used improper influence to get the girl under their sway. She is entitled to an annuity of $7500 in her own right when she comes of age. The police say that this was the main motive for the abduction, which is the most sensational case of the kind ever reported in Ireland. Detectives working on the case have ascertained that following a service in a Mormon mission-hall the girl was drugged, bound and removed on a jaunting car to a house in Belfast, where she was secreted and compelled to perform the most menial service. After this confinement, her spirit was broken, arguments were used to deter her from trying to escape. Then she was put aboard a steamer at Moville by Mormon agents, it is alleged, and taken to Utah to be married to the son of an influential "Latter Day Saint." The officer sent to rescue her will commence proceedings for the recovery of the stolen heiress as soon as he succeeds in getting into communication with her.

CENSORSHIP FOR PLAYS.

To put a stop to productions such as Synge's "Playboy of the Western World," pressure is being brought upon the authorities at Dublin Castle to issue an executive order bringing all such pieces under strict censorship. County councils and city authorities in all parts of the country—except Belfast, Armagh, Lurgan and Portadown—have passed resolutions favoring the suppression of plays likely to cause political unpleasantness. The order is likely to be issued.

ROME, Aug. 17.—The corporation of the city of Rome is considering the building of an immense motordrome for the purpose of encouraging visitors to the Eternal City through a modern revival of the glories of the chariot races brought up to date. A site has been chosen just outside of the city limits. The Mayor and other public-spirited citizens are offering subscriptions to help the project.

The revival of the ancient rivalry of the wheel is largely due to interest in the Olympian games at Stockholm. It is deplored that Italian athletes did not have an opportunity to prove their prowess in the sports of their hereditary rivals. It is hoped that through a great auto tournament many Americans will be encouraged to spend a large part of their vacation in and around Rome. This year, there have been comparatively few tourists from the United States and most of the hotels and resorts have enjoyed but a lean season.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Italy is likely to reintroduce capital punishment as a result of an epidemic of murders in the large cities. In Naples, alone, statistics show that murders have increased by 87 per cent. since capital punishment was abolished.

Not less than fifteen murders were reported in Rome within the past ten days, a grim record while his without a parallel in modern times. A bill to restore the death sentence is being prepared by the Minister of Justice.

A SIMPLE CURE.

A simple cure for rabies has been discovered by the Florentine professor, Dr. Mabtni. It is the introduction into the food of dogs essence of hyacinth and senna. "Rabies," says Dr. Mabtni, "is due solely to the congestion of vapors in the head of the animal. These can be easily removed without destroying the life of the subject." The killing of mad dogs he holds to be a reckless destruction of the lives of friends of mankind.

THE POPE'S EXERCISE.

Pope Pius is using an exerciser to improve his circulation. Every morning before breakfast the pontiff spends half an hour employing this American device with apparent satisfaction. After he has gone through a series of movements prepared by his physicians he rests and reads and then goes to a light meal of fruit, eggs and milk, of which he is particularly fond.

The Pope's health seems to be much better than it has been for the last seven or eight months, although he is still far from robust. He spends an hour or two usually in the Vatican gardens every afternoon, but he is unable to enjoy walking owing to a chronic attack of gout.

JUDGE HUTTON'S CHARGE AS GIVEN TO THE JURY.

THIS is the charge given by Judge Hutton to the jury in the Darrow case yesterday:

"Gentlemen of the Jury:

"The law under which we live and by which we are governed requires that citizens of the State shall, when called upon, act as jurors to determine issues in a proper case. It is a duty which every right-minded citizen, physically competent, performs without hesitation. His selection is regarded as an honor.

"The performance of the duties imposed upon you in the case now here on trial has been unusually arduous and protracted. It is a source of satisfaction to all that your service is so nearly completed, and that you shall soon be relieved of the burden imposed.

"The evidence is all in, the arguments have been presented and there remains only for you the duty of listening to the court's instructions determining what your verdict shall be.

"For the guidance and aid of juries in reaching a verdict, it is required that the law applicable to the case shall be declared to the jury by the judge who presides over the trial. It is in the performance of this requirement that I now give you these instructions.

"Exception has been taken by counsel for the defendant to argument used by the District Attorney during the course of his remarks, and I want to charge you at this time that the personal views and opinions of counsel on either side unless supported by the evidence should have no place in your deliberations and you must not be swayed or guided in any way by such statements. It is your duty simply to consider the evidence as given and admitted by the court; to listen to proper argument, and I mean by this, argument based solely upon the evidence; to consider the law as given you by the court as having application to the evidence which has been admitted. The defendant at the bar, Clarence Darrow, is accused by the grand jury of this county and State of a felony, in manner and form as charged and set forth in the indictment which has been read to you."

STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

Judge Hutton here gave the statutory provisions under which the indictment was drawn as affecting a person who corruptly attempts to influence any person drawn as a juror by means of any promise, or assurance or any pecuniary or other advantage.

"This, therefore, is a statutory crime, and before you can convict the defendant, every one of the several elements of the crime must be proved beyond all reasonable doubt; if any one of such material element has not been so proved, by legal and sufficient evidence, you must render a verdict of not guilty.

"I charge you, gentlemen, that in every crime or public offense there must exist a union or joint operation of act and intent or criminal negligence. Reasonable doubt is that state of the case which after an entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence leaves your mind in that condition that you cannot say you feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge. The law, however, does not require demonstration—that is, such a degree of proof as excluding possibility of error, produces absolute certainty, because such proof is rarely possible. Moral certainty only is required, or, in other words, that degree of proof which produces conviction in an unprejudiced mind. The rule is not that there must be acquittal in all cases of mere possible doubt, because everything relating to human affairs depending upon moral evidence may be open to some possible or imaginary doubt. The court instructs you that if you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the crime as charged in the information, was committed, and that the defendant was unlawfully and with criminal intent concerned in its commission, then I instruct you that it is all that the law requires to make the defendant guilty of the crime charged.

"The defendant on his arraignment pleaded not guilty, thus putting in issue every material allegation contained in said indictment.

CONCERNING ACCOMPLICES.

"You are instructed that a conviction cannot be had on the testimony of an accomplice unless he is corroborated by other evidence which in itself, and without the aid of the testimony of the accomplice, tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense; and the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of the offense, or the circumstances thereof.

"You are instructed that a person who gives, or offers to give a bribe to a juror with intent to influence his vote, opinion or decision, upon any matter or question which is, or may be brought before him for decision, is guilty of bribery of a juror as charged in the first count of the indictment herein. You are instructed that the evidence does not justify a verdict of guilty against the defendant upon the first count set forth in the indictment. As to the second count of the indictment it is for you to determine under the instructions here given, whether the evidence does justify such verdict on said count.

"The law absolutely prohibits a conviction, in a criminal case, upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice or accomplices, although the jury may believe the testimony of such accomplice or accomplices to be entirely true, and that such testimony establishes the defendant's guilt to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt. Therefore, if you find in this case that witnesses who have been presented and have testified who are accomplices, even though you may believe their testimony to be entirely true, and even though you may believe that the defendant's guilt of the particular crime here charged is established by such evidence to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt, if you should find that there is no evidence, independent of the testimony of such accomplices, which tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime, it is your imperative duty, under the law, to find defendant not guilty.

And in this connection you are instructed that if you have a reasonable doubt upon the question as to whether a witness is, or is not, was or was not, an accomplice, you must resolve that doubt in favor of the defendant and acquit him.

WEIGHT OF CIRCUMSTANCES.

"You are instructed, as a matter of law, that, where a conviction of a criminal offense is sought upon circumstantial evidence alone, the State must not only show by a preponderance of evidence that the alleged facts are true, but they must be such facts and circumstances as are absolutely incompatible upon any reasonable hypothesis with the innocence of the accused, and incapable of explanation upon any reasonable hypothesis other than that of the guilt of the accused.

"Corroborating evidence required by law may be slight; nevertheless the requirements of the statute are fulfilled if there be any corroborative evidence, which, of itself, tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense charged in the indictment, independent of the testimony of an accomplice. While corroborative testimony must create more than a mere suspicion, it is not required to be absolutely convincing. Nor need it extend to every fact and detail covered by the statements of the accomplice.

"The court instructs the jury that seldom, if at all, any offense or crime is committed without an express motive to commit it, and that when the evidence fails to show any motive to commit the crime charged, on the part of the accused, that this is a substantial circumstance in favor of his innocence.

"The court further instructs the jury that the corroboration of an accomplice may be established by circumstantial evidence, and if such circumstances tend strongly to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime charged, for which he is on trial, it may be a sufficient corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice in such a case.

"The fact that Juror Bain was bribed (if the evidence shows to you beyond a reasonable doubt that he was bribed) or that Kruger, or Yonkin, or Smith, or Underwood were offered bribes, is entirely immaterial, and constitutes no corroboration of the witness Franklin, unless it also is proven by the evidence to your satisfaction, that the defendant aided and abetted such bribing or offering of bribes.

INNOCENCE PRESUMED.

"If any facts or circumstances in this case can by any reasonable construction be explained or construed consistently with the innocence of the defendant, it is your duty so to construe it and if the facts and circumstances and evidence in this case can reasonably be construed as establishing the innocence of this defendant, it is your duty to so construe them and acquit the defendant.

"The defendant has in this case placed his previous character and reputation as to being a man of truth, honesty and integrity in evidence. If you find that previous to this difficulty he sustained a good reputation for truth, honesty and integrity, you will weigh it in his favor for what, in your judgment, you may think it is worth.

"The court instructs the jury that evidence of good character of the defendant is to be regarded as a substantive fact like any other fact, tending to establish the defendant's innocence, and if therefrom a reasonable doubt is generated in the minds of the jury as to the guilt of the accused, it is their duty to acquit him.

"If the jury believes from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant committed the crime as charged in the indictment, it will be your sworn duty, as jurors, to find the defendant guilty, notwithstanding proof of his good general reputation for truth, honesty and integrity.

"A witness may be impeached by evidence that he has made at other times, statements inconsistent with his present testimony, and if you believe that any witness has been successfully impeached in this manner, then the jury is at liberty to disregard his testimony in all such matters.

"You are instructed that the defendant, Clarence Darrow, is not on trial here for having bribed Juror Robert Bain, nor for kidnaping Mrs. Flora Caplan, nor for the removal of Deikelman from Albuquerque, New Mexico, nor for the payment of money to Guy Bittinger, nor for the attempted bribery of any other prospective juror. The only offense for which he is on trial is the one charged in the indictment, and unless you find beyond all reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the crime so charged you must return a verdict of not guilty.

FRANKLIN'S TESTIMONY.

"The court instructs the jury that, if you find from the evidence that the witness Franklin made any statements out of court to any other person or persons, after November 28, 1911, in which he accused the defendant of the commission of the offense charged in the indictment, or of the commission of any unlawful or wrongful act testified to in this case, that you are to entirely disregard such accusations or statements on the part of Franklin, and must not take them into consideration as establishing any fact against the defendant.

"You must not suffer yourself to be prejudiced against the defendant because of the fact that he is charged with this offense, and you must not suffer yourself to be led to convict this defendant for the fear that a crime may go unavenged or for the purpose of deterring others from the commission of like offenses. No such argument or reason can be weighty enough to justify you in laying aside or ignoring that just and most humane rule of the law which says that you must acquit the defendant unless every fact necessary to establish his guilt has been proven to you beyond a reasonable doubt.

"The court instructs the jury that if you find from the evidence that the witness Franklin, or any other witness implicated in the commission of the offense charged in the indictment, if such offense was committed, after the time of the alleged commission of the offense on November 28, 1911, concealed the fact that the commission of said offense, or any fact tending to show that he was guilty thereof, or when charged with the commission of said offense became silent, that such facts or circumstances cannot be considered by you, or weighed by you against the defendant in this case, or as any evidence of the existence of any conspiracy between the said Franklin and the defendant to commit the crime alleged in the indictment.

"The defendant in a criminal action has a right to testify in his own behalf. The jury will not disregard his testimony just because he is the defendant, but consider it and give thereto such weight as appears to the jury just and proper.

"The court instructs the jury that if you find from the evidence that after November 28, 1911, the witness Franklin made any admissions or confessions concerning his guilt of having bribed the Jurors Lockwood, Bain and Kruger, or having attempted to bribe any other persons, that such confessions, admissions or declarations on his part are not evidence against the defendant, and establish no fact against him, and must be disregarded by the jury and not be considered by you in determining the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

BURDEN ON PROSECUTION.

"The burden rests on the prosecution to establish every element of the crime with which the defendant is charged, and every element of the crime must be established to a moral certainty and beyond all reasonable doubt.

"The jury should be so fully convinced of the correctness of their conclusion that the defendant is guilty, so clear and strong as to exclude from their minds all reasonable doubt as to the correctness of their conclusion.

"If, after consideration of the whole case, any juror should entertain a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendant, it is the duty of such juror not to vote for a verdict of guilty, nor to be influenced in so voting for the single reason that a majority of the jury should be in favor of a verdict of guilty.

"All testimony given under immunity, promises or hopes held out should be received by the party with caution and scrutinized with great care.

"I instruct you gentlemen, you can only act on the evidence introduced

Mrs. Clarence Darrow,

As she appeared immediately after the jury brought in its verdict yesterday.

Clarence Darrow,

Whom a jury yesterday declared not guilty on the bribery charge involving George N. Lockwood, a talesman in the McNamara trial. He may have to stand trial on the remaining indictment alleging the bribery of Robert Bain, a juror.

To Come.

NOT AFFECTED BY VERDICT.

FACTS IN THE BRIBERY CASE INVOLVING BAIN.

Indicated that Alleged Higher-up Behind Franklin's Dealings With One of the Seven Permanent Jurors in the McNamara Case Will Stand Trial in the Fall.

An indictment is still pending against Clarence Darrow which charges him with bribing Robert F. Bain, one of the permanent jurors in the McNamara case. This indictment is not affected by the verdict of "not guilty" rendered yesterday of the charges resting upon the bribery of Juror Lockwood.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks has indicated that he will try the Bain case. In the regular course of procedure it would be tried in one of the two criminal departments. Until the fall elections are over it cannot be determined who will be the Superior Court judges to sit in Departments 11 and 12.

According to the evidence introduced in the preliminary examination of Bert H. Franklin, Darrow's trusted employee, he went to see Mrs. Bain on October 6, 1911, and there proposed to her that if her husband got on the McNamara jury and voted for an acquittal he would receive $500 in advance and $3500 at the close of the case, provided it ended either in an acquittal or "hung jury."

It is already in evidence that Franklin returned that evening and gave Bain $400, promising to give him the other $100 later on. This was never done, possibly owing to Franklin's arrest.

Bain was examined by both sides in the McNamara case and was one of the first to be sworn in as a permanent juror. When Lockwood went to Capt. Fredericks with his story of Franklin's attempt to bribe him he told of the other juror, a G.A.R. veteran, and the District Attorney at once believed Bain was the one who had been "reached."

The evidence that has thus far been produced shows that Bain, Mrs. Bain, Franklin, Lockwood, Mrs. Franklin, detectives and possibly witnesses as yet kept in the background can testify as to the occurrences.

Whether there will be any evidence to connect Darrow with the offense is of course only a matter of conjecture, on the part of the public. The District Attorney has upon several occasions stated that the Bain case is stronger than the one just tried.

"BURKE'S Dry Gin—conspicuous for cleanliness, delicacy and bouquet of flavor."

DARROW CLEARED.

fear that a crime go unpunished and to deter others from crime, for such an argument is not ground for finding the defendant guilty."

AS TO ACCOMPLICES.

Judge Hutton told the jury that statements of an alleged accomplice of the defendant made out of court and not in the presence of the defendant were not to be considered against him. He said that if the jury believed that the District Attorney had induced Franklin to commit this crime, the defendant should not be convicted.

The court declared that if the evidence showed to the satisfaction of the jurors that there were other accomplices in the commission of the offense charged and that if they testified in the case on trial, their evidence should be viewed with distrust. He said every one of the several elements of the crime must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt and if they had not been so proved, that it was the duty of the jury to render a verdict of "not guilty."

The court spoke at length upon the doctrine of reasonable doubt which clothes the defendant with the presumption of innocence at the outset of every criminal case. He said one charged with the commission of an offense is presumed innocent until the verdict is reached.

"Upon the State of California," remarked the court, "is placed the duty of proving to you beyond all reasonable doubt and to a moral certainty the charge that is made against the defendant and to prove all facts essential to establish his guilt. The performance of this duty by the State or plaintiff requires that it should prove that the defendant committed the precise offense with which he is charged. It would not suffice to prove the defendant guilty of other offenses.

"This duty requires the plaintiff to show beyond all reasonable doubt that the crime charged in the indictment was committed but also that the defendant committed it and that all the elements of a crime be proven as I have declared them to you. The defendant is under no obligation to prove himself innocent nor to prove any fact establishing his innocence."

The Darrow case began May 15 in the regular Department Two courtroom in the Hall of Justice. After the first few days it was found expedient to transfer the trial to Judge Bordwell's room in the Hall of Records where the seating space was doubled and there was better light and ventilation.

From the very outset it was evident that it would be a bitter lawsuit. On the one side were Capt. Fredericks, Assistant District Attorney Ford and Deputy Keetch. Towards the close Deputy Hammon aided in briefing the testimony and he was present during the arguments.

BASIS OF CHARGE.

The case rested on the charge that Darrow furnished the $4000 that Franklin said he was prepared to give George N. Lockwood, one of the prospective jurors. The evidence appeared overwhelming as to the actual bribery. Lockwood said he got $500 on account and that White received $3500 to be given Lockwood after a mistrial or acquittal in the McNamara case. White gave similar testimony. Franklin said the defendant gave him the money. There were many witnesses as to so-called collateral issues, such as the alleged bribery of Detective Biddinger, the spiriting away of Mrs. Caplan and other State's witnesses. But under the court's instructions, it was apparent that the jury paid little heed to these matters.

Darrow was indicted January 29 of the present year, after the grand jury had been in session at intervals for several weeks. Ford and Keetch handled the case, as Capt. Fredericks was in the East after the successful termination of the McNamara case.

Darrow retained Earl Rogers on or before the day he was indicted on two separate indictments. Bonds of $20,000 were at once furnished. There was comparatively little preliminary legal skirmishing, the defense announcing that it wanted a speedy trial. The main effort in the preliminary hearings was to secure a copy of the testimony of Franklin, Harrington and other witnesses. The court finally ruled that the prosecution must furnish the defense with a transcript of all the testimony of witnesses appearing before the grand jury.

Judge Hutton, who was presiding judge at the time, heard the preliminary motions and finally announced that he would preside over the trial.

He declared yesterday in an informal talk with the newspaper men that he believed he had shown that a criminal trial could be conducted without "holding a club over the attorneys" and that he believed the case had been conducted to the satisfaction of both sides. He said he was mentally and physically worn by the strain of the trial, which has lasted for three months and three days. He would not discuss the aspects of the lawsuit until the verdict was reached, when he congratulated the defendant upon the successful outcome and told the members of the press that the news would please millions of persons throughout the country.

STEPS ON HIS HEAD.

Horse Knocks a Man Down and Places Hoof on His Cranium, But With No Ill Effects.

A horse hitched to a wagon did an acrobatic stunt on A. E. Cook's head yesterday by stepping on it. Much to the surprise of the horrified spectators of the unusual incident, Cook got upon his feet unassisted, after the horse removed his hoof, and would have walked away but was detained by several persons who insisted upon sending him to the Receiving Hospital. They feared he was seriously injured.

Cook escaped with a slight scalp wound and a lacerated left wrist. He is 34 years old and lives at No. 1350 Long Beach avenue. The accident occurred on San Pedro street when Cook collided with the horse and rig while riding a bicycle.

B. W. Jones, No. 2205 Loots street, fell twelve feet off a scaffolding at the Park Memorial Hall on Loma drive yesterday, and dislocated his right shoulder. The man had to be carried a block on a stretcher to the police patrol sent to take him to the hospital.

G. Wilson, 35 years old, No. 234 East Third street, tried to handle too many empty dump cars on a slight incline at Tenth and Norton streets. One of the cars got away, knocked him down and ran over his right leg. Wilson was not seriously injured.

JUDGE HUTTON'S CHARGE.

upon this trial, and from that evidence and that alone, under the instructions of the court, you must form your verdict, unaided, unassisted and uninfluenced by any opinion or presumption (except the presumption of innocence,) or belief you may have, not formed upon that testimony. The court instructs you that the defendant in this case has a right to adopt any theory, or theories, no matter how inconsistent they may be with each other in his defense. The defendant has a right to claim that the whole case concerning the charge against him is a conspiracy, or the outgrowth of a conspiracy; in other words, that it is a trumped-up charge, and that there is no truth in it whatever, and you are instructed that in the absence of any evidence in the case tending to show, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant actually committed the offense you have a right to take into consideration whether or not the circumstances and evidence establish the fact that there was any conspiracy on the part of Bert Franklin, White, Lockwood and others, to act so that it might appear that a crime had been committed, for the purpose of charging the defendant with the commission of said crime, or connecting him with the commission thereof."

GROUND FOR ACQUITTAL.

Judge Hutton here instructed the jurors to acquit Darrow if they believed that a conspiracy had been entered into between Lockwood, Franklin and White to fasten the alleged crime on the defendant.

"You are instructed that the District Attorney or any one working under his direction or by his consent may not induce, solicit or cause a person to commit an offense for the purpose of apprehending and punishing such person. And if the jury believe or entertain a reasonable doubt if such is not the fact, that Lockwood, acting in pursuance of an understanding with the District Attorney or his agents, or by his direction, or with his consent, induced Franklin to commit the offense charged, then the defendant cannot be convicted and you must acquit him.

"I charge you gentlemen, that if you are satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt that the prosecution has made out a case against the defendant, it is your duty to return a verdict finding him guilty. If you are not satisfied as to his guilt beyond all reasonable doubt, you should return a verdict finding him not guilty.

"The court instructs the jury that an accomplice cannot corroborate himself, and that he cannot be corroborated by the evidence of any other accomplice. The court instructs you that it is not the duty of the defendant to prove himself innocent, or to prove who, if anyone, furnished any money to Bert Franklin for the purpose of bribing the juror.

"This trial has exhausted my strength and sapped my vitality. These voluminous requests thus handed to me at this late date and the shortness of time, coupled with the seriously impaired condition of my health, must account for the fact that these instructions have not been simplified for your better understanding and assistance. And having great confidence in your judgment, I have no misgivings but that you will understand and fully comprehend all of the law that is necessary to enable you to reach a just verdict. The rights of the people are to be considered at the same time, equally with the rights of the defendant. May God give you wisdom to see the right and courage to do the right."

CHILD-SLAYER DAZED.

When Asked on Arraignment If He Has an Attorney He Answers Questions Unintelligibly.

Charles Eugene Greenfield was arraigned before Justice Forbes yesterday morning and formally accused of having murdered his 6-year-old step-daughter, Vivian, at Venice last Tuesday. The accused man sat with bowed head and appeared dazed while the court was reading the complaint.

"Have you an attorney," asked the Justice.

Greenfield stood leaning against a chair with his eyes cast downward, but he made no reply. The court repeated the question and the accused mumbled to himself. Constable Hayes then took him by the arm and asked him if he had an attorney.

"She didn't tell me anything," mumbled Greenfield as he sank into his chair.

Justice Forbes then set the hearing of the case for August 22, and Constable Hayes and three deputy sheriffs took the child-slayer to the County Jail. Officers in the jail say that he is unusually morose and declines to answer even the salutations of the guards.

Greenfield, when arrested, said that he and Vivian had entered into a suicide pact, and that he did not have enough courage to kill himself after he cut her throat.

UNCLE SAM BUSY.

Panama. Davis was going home from his place of business when he encountered a small group of Americans who were celebrating their nation's holiday in one of the public squares. The celebration is said to have angered the soldier-police and a command was given for them to open fire on the Americans.

"Kill all of the Americans you can," was part of the order given, it is alleged. The soldiers opened fire and it is asserted only their poor marksmanship prevented a greater loss of life.

Davis had not been in the celebration but when he saw the soldiers shooting he ran to a small shop, entered it, and locked the door. The soldiers saw him enter the place and battered down the door. As Davis started to run out the back door a soldier plunged his bayonet through his body.

START THE CAMPAIGN.

The regular Republican campaign in the Seventy-fourth Assembly District has been started with a hurrah. On Friday night a Taft Club was organized at a meeting held in the Santee schoolhouse, at which the following were elected officers: A. Lindeken, president; J. A. McCahil, first vice-president; Matt Myers, second vice-president; Carl Rapp, secretary. Francis J. Haley for the Assembly from the district and H. D. McCabe for Supervisor were indorsed. Rousing speeches were received with enthusiasm.

EDEN'S BARBED TO YOU.

train trails up the winding mountainside with supplies—for the way the girls eat is something astounding. No less that 100 pounds of marshmallows have been rent up just to supply material for the marshmallow roasts which are a feature of the evening camp fire. Report has it that "Emmy," the colored cook who was induced to act as chef, was completely worn out at the end of July trying to keep up with the ravenous appetites and her place has been filled by relay since. Including some of the campers themselves, who have not hesitated to cover the coat of tan on their faces with lampblack to complete the illusion that the colored chef still reigned.

One poor, patient burro, Jack by name, is deputed to meet every relay of campers who arrive and his business is to tote the suit cases, bags and boxes which constitute the personal baggage of the girls into camp. Jack is a patient brute and is quite capable of carrying a load of 100 pounds. A single gunny sack which constitutes a part of his burden on one trip when unpacked was found to contain eight pairs of shoes, four civilized suits, a dozen roller towels, six blankets, 1200 paper plates, a meat grinder, seventeen sweaters and four dozen cakes of soap.

Practically all the grocery firms in town are anxiously bidding on supplies for the camp, whose inhabitants consume hundreds of pounds of food daily.

THE BON MOTS OF GILBERT.

Some Stories of the Famous Librettist.

His Brilliant and Rapid-Fire Repartee.

A Contributor to the National Fun Fund.

Nestling side by side on the shelf of any real book lover, stand, if he has a sense of the real fitness of things, two books that by every right belong together. One is "Alice in Wonderland;" the other, "Bab Ballads."

The reader learns to know "Alice" first, when he is a youngster. Later on, when knee breeches have lengthened into long trousers, he meets the very real actors which have stirred the laughter of two generations. It is not his "Bab Ballads" alone, however, which helped to build the enduring reputation of Sir William Schwenck Gilbert, who wrote them, a genius whose wit and wisdom, humor and pathos have furnished entertainment for millions of English-speaking people, as no little share of the wonderful immortality won by the sharp-tempered and caustic librettist was earned by the many stories and anecdotes which surround his whole career, wherein his shaft of satire was so well directed that these stories have long since reached the classic stage and have become so famous that many of them are now being told—with the necessary alterations, of course—on various men in various countries.

One such story concerns his retort to a neighbor of his, either Mr. Crosse or Mr. Blackwell, who had made a fortune by the manufacture of jams. This gentleman had occasion to complain of a servant of Sir William's trespassing upon his land on poaching bent. Gilbert replied with the following note:

"Dear Sir: I am sorry you have been put to any inconvenience by the presence of my servant on your preserves. With apologies for the use of the word preserves, I am, yours faithfully, W. S. Gilbert."

At a supper party shortly before the production at the Duke of York's Theater of Henry Arthur Jones's play, "The Princess's Nose," some one said to Gilbert across the table: "What do you think of Jones's new title, Gilbert?"

"Don't know what it is," growled Sir William.

"It is quaint, to say the least," was the reply. "He calls his piece 'The Princess's Nose.'"

"H—m," grunted Gilbert meditatively, "hope it will run."

"It must be twelve years ago," says one writer, "when I first met Gilbert. The first impression of a public man is always more or less of a shock. It was in Sir Arthur Sullivan's flat in Victoria street, London. The blinds were drawn, the faint scent of lilies filled the air and in the music-room under a lyre of forget-me-nots Sullivan lay dead.

"A mighty tall man, apple-cheeked, fiercely whiskered and with ferocious eyes glinting under even more ferocious eyebrows, strode in. He looked for all the world like a Devonshire farmer in somber Sunday clothes. He seemed to be very angry about something. He was storming under his breath. He stamped through several rooms, and then out into the vestibule, where he seized a servant and cried more angrily than ever:

"'George, have you seen my —— umbrella?'

"And tears were trickling down his rosy cheeks all the time. He may have been a poet and a philosopher, but at dissembling he was an amateur."

The same writer tells the following story, long well-known in Fleet street:

"He was absolutely fearless; he could cross the strand or punch a head with any man. He once collared a burglar in his own house and trussed him splendidly for the subsequent policeman. Next day a reporter from Fleet street called to interview him. The butler came to the door and carried the journalist's message in to Sir William, who roared out across the hall:

"'Tell the Daily —— man to go to hell!'

"The butler came back with a grave face, unconscious that Sir William's outburst had been overheard, and said:

"'Sir William is extremely sorry, but he wishes me to state that extreme pressure of work precludes him from the pleasure of seeing you this morning.'"

Gilbert's wit and humor were always ready. He was a fine raconteur and a good after-dinner speaker. Rutland Barrington, the old Savoyard, said recently: "Staying in Gilbert's house was like living in a literary fireworks factory."

Barrington played the captain in "Pinafore." At rehearsal one day Gilbert, who was an autocratic and magnificent stage manager, told him to cross the stage, which represented the deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, and sit on a skylight "in a pensive attitude." Barrington obeyed orders, but unfortunately the skylight had only been rigged up temporarily, and the portly Barrington crashed through it.

"That's an ex-pensive attitude," said Gilbert in a flash.

Sitting at dinner next to a former editor of Punch, Gilbert remarked to him:

"I suppose you often have funny things sent in from outsiders?"

"Heaps," said the editor.

"Then why don't you put them in?" asked Gilbert.

This sounds rather like a prepared trap for the Punch man. As a rule Gilbert was quick and impromptu. He was once standing outside his club, when a stranger approached him and said: "I beg your pardon, sir, but do you happen to know a gentleman, a member of this club, with one eye called Matthews?"

Sir William paused for a moment. "I can't say I do," he replied. "What is his other eye called?"

One afternoon, while drilling the ballet with extreme strictness, he observed that one of the girls was crying bitterly and making strenuous but ineffectual efforts to restrain her emotion.

"What's the matter, my dear?" he asked, smiling compassionately.

"Oh, Mr. Gilbert," sobbed the woebegone figurante, "the ballet mistress says I'm no better than I ought to be!"

"Well, you're not, my dear; are you?" rejoined Gilbert, interrogatively.

On another occasion, when the stage was full, a messenger came on with a parcel for one of the actresses and displayed considerable activity in dodging the principals and supers while crossing from one wing to the other. Jessie Bond, who was standing close to the stage manager, exclaimed: "Look at that agile creature, Mr. Gilbert! One would think he was dancing a pas seul!"

"Yes," was the instantaneous reply, "a brown pas seul, obviously."

A neat impromptu of Gilbert's was uttered on the occasion of a discussion regarding the moral tone of the lower as compared with that of the upper classes. Gilbert, in his customary paradoxical fashion, was upholding the theory that "Hearts just as pure and fair may beat in Belgrave Square as in the lowly air of Seven Dials."

"Very possibly," retorted his opponent, "but, after all, you are obliged to pay our bishops £5000 a year to be good."

"Yes," rejoined Gilbert, "while we poor devils have to be good for nothing—and mostly are."

One of the best things he said was about Richard Temple, a well-known English comedian, whose gift of uncouth humor was such an inimitable addition to the old D'Oyly Carte Company. During the premiere of one of his operas Gilbert was in a box with a party of friends, one of whom turned to him, excitedly, and said:

"Oh, Mr. Gilbert, Temple is singing in tune!"

"Oh, don't worry about that," said Gilbert; "it's only first-night nervousness—he'll get over it."

One of his best-known bon-mots had to do with Hamlet. After a couple of days' absence from London he walked into the Savage Club, and somebody shouted a greeting:

"Hello, Gilbert! Where have you been?"

"I've been up to Birmingham to see Wilson Barrett as Hamlet," Gilbert replied.

"The deuce, you say! How was it?" asked his friend.

"Oh, very funny—and not at all vulgar," was the answer.

Gilbert's facile repartee came in useful at rehearsals. One afternoon a well-known actor had been made to repeat one scene over and over again. When he was told for the forty-seventh time that it was all wrong, he stepped down to the footlights and said, "Mr. Gilbert, I must tell you that I'm not a very good-tempered man." "No," said Gilbert, "neither am I." "Furthermore," the actor went on, "I'd like to have you know, Mr. Gilbert, that I'm a very strong man." "Well," said Gilbert, "I'm 6 feet 4 in my socks, but if you really want to know the difference between us—I am an extremely clever man."

There was another actor who objected to being continually corrected, and snapped out, "Look here, Mr. Gilbert, I know my lines." "I know you do," answered Gilbert, "but the trouble is, dear boy, that you don't know mine."

Gilbert was always blunt in speech and said exactly what he thought. At one time he went to see Beerbohm Tree play "Othello." The actor was blacked up, of course, and he worked with all his might. After the final scene, Gilbert called on him in his dressing-room, and found him shiny with perspiration. Naturally, Mr. Tree asked how he had liked the performance.

"Splendidly," said Gilbert. "Your skin acts magnificently."

Throughout all his work Gilbert maintained a standard of purity of thought and expression, which was largely instrumental in improving the tone and manners of the English stage in relation to comic opera. Although he would allow a pair of stockings on the stage in "Trial by Jury," he rebelled against "a pair of stays." "Some people seem to consider it so indecent," remarked Gilbert one day at rehearsal when an actress disdained to produce a pair of stockings as required by the stage directions, "that they would object to that pair of stockings unless there was a pair of legs to go into them."

The following story concerns the stays: An actress taking the part of a character in "Brantinghame Hall" was supposed to hurry upon the stage and exclaim, "Stay, let me speak!" During rehearsals she persisted in saying, in spite of Gilbert's remonstrances, "Stay, stay, let me speak!" At last he effectively rebuked her by saying, "No, you're wrong again; it isn't 'stay, stay,' it's stay,—one stay, not a pair of stays!"

The author of "The Mikado" is credited with having said that "a husband can hope to be a hero in his wife's eyes only two months—the month before he is married, and the month after his death."

It certainly has the satiric smack of Gilbert, who is reported to have replied to Mrs. Marie Bancroft, the well-known English actress, when she playfully asked, "What age am I?"

"I really can't say, but you don't look it."

After all, when one realizes to what an extent the late brilliant William S. Gilbert contributed to the fund of national humor (and kept so many countries merry, it is not at all surprising that so many people still continue to honor his memory, for it is written that the man who has amused them is the man to whom people are most grateful.

COMIC OPERA AT MAJESTIC.

"PINAFORE," "PATIENCE," "THE PIRATES" AND "MIKADO."

"The Lottery Man" at Belasco. "Deep Purple" Still on at Burbank. "Drums of Oude" at Orpheum. Vaudeville Announcements for the Coming Week.

A season of comic opera revivals and comic opera of the finest kind will be revealed at the Majestic Theater tonight, when the Gilbert and Sullivan Festival Company from the Casino Theater, New York, will be seen in a series of the most popular works of Gilbert and Sullivan, which include "The Mikado," "Pinafore," "Patience" and "The Pirates of Penzance." It is well to note that this company, which holds many well-known stars, numbers among its principal members De Wolf Hopper, Blanche Duffield, Eugene Cowles, George MacFarlane, Kate Condon, Arthur Condon, Arthur Aldridge, Viola Gillette, Arthur Cunningham, Alice Brady and Louise Barthel, and the New York Casino chorus and orchestra.

This brilliant organization, whose engagement is limited to one week only, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, will be seen in their entire repertoire of operas, with productions of "The Mikado" on Sunday, Monday and Saturday evenings, and at the Saturday matinee. "Pinafore" is announced for Tuesday and

Wednesday and the Wednesday matinee, while "Patience" will be the bill on Thursday, and "The Pirates of Penzance" on Friday, one time only of each opera.

The restoration of these operas will serve a double purpose, inasmuch as they will bring back to memory many delightful recollections of the days of their youth to the older generation of playgoers, while it will also be the means of acquainting the younger set with a series of operas about which they have heard much, but which they have never seen.

Belasco.

Lewis S. Stone will make his farewell appearances on the Belasco stage today with the final performances of Edward Childs Carpenter's new play "The Taiming of Alberta."

Tomorrow night the Belasco Theater Company will offer for one week a fine revival of Rida Johnson Young's famous fun success "The Lottery Man," generally considered one of the three big laughing successes that has come to the native stage in the last five years.

"The Lottery Man" has to do with the whirlwind of amusing experiences of a young man, Jack Wright, who of a rather care-free nature and in desperate financial circumstances, offers himself as the prize in a newspaper lottery competition. The story as it develops is most exciting and amusing, and after the end of this exciting competition for a husband, the winner of the lucky number, 1333, is discovered to be Lizzie, a very eccentric maiden lady, who has a caricature of a face.

The Belasco has given the piece an excellent cast, Harry Mestayer appearing in the role of Jack Wright, the prize for the holder of the lucky number, Robert Ober in the role of his friend, Foxey Peyton, while Fannie Yantis, well-known to local audiences for her splendid character acting, will be seen in the role of Lizzie. Muriel Starr, Beatrice Nichols and all of the other Belasco favorites will be found in the cast.

Burbank.

"The Deep Purple," Paul Armstrong's sensational play of the underworld, which has been packing the spacious Burbank Theater at every performance and has succeeded in breaking all previous attendance records at the Main-street playhouse, will be given for a third week, commencing this afternoon, the demand for seats now being even larger than the first week of Mr. Bennett's appearances at the Burbank.

Richard Bennett is duplicating his metropolitan success in the role of the young westerner, William Lake, while Mabel Morrison gives a truly delightful performance of a young girl, Doris Moore. Ada Dwyer's remarkable performance as 'Frisco Kate has already endeared her to local audiences. Miss Dwyer created this same role in the New York presentation of the play.

One of the big personal hits of the performance has been scored by David M. Hartford in the role of Laylock, the killer, while a fine bit of character work is contributed by Grace Travers in the role of the Swede servant girl at Kate Fallon's boarding-house.

Mr. Bennett and the Burbank company now have in preparation the first presentation on any stage of Hartley Manners's new play, "The Money Moon," and this will be given at the close of the present engagement of "The Deep Purple."

Fischer's Lyceum.

Again from Fischer's Lyceum comes an important announcement—the engagement of Miss Maxie Mitchell as soubrette in the Fischer Comedy Company, to open this afternoon, when a new Alphin show, "Adolph and Oscar" will be the attraction in the popular summer series of Rice and Cady shows there. Maxie Mitchell is particularly well known hereabouts as an exceedingly clever young woman who can sing, dance and make fun. She has a large following, she is able to "get it over" when she essays anything, and she will add luster and brilliance to the entire organization. She and Ann Montgomery and Reatha Walker make a complete galaxy of feminine talent hard to beat. The new show, "Adolph and Oscar" is one of those conglomerates of fun which Alphin so cleverly makes aits out of. There is little plot; not enough to hurt in hot weather, but quite sufficient to carry a connected story. Interwoven with this thread of story will be a series of specialties. These will be allotted to Ann Montgomery, Maxie Mitchell, Reatha Walker, Rice and Cady, who, of course, will carry the name parts; Al Franks, Reeder Gardner and Lon Chaney, all of whom assume roles quite to their liking. The song numbers are unusually numerous in this lightsome show, and the dances are equally so. In these, Chaney, Gardner, and all three girl principals are to be seen at their best, not to mention the "Poppy Girls," who will don and doff numerous changes of garb, brevity being one of its salient points, and will back up the principals in many song and dance numbers. The octette of ponies will be found at its best, and the ensembles will be really notable.

Orpheum.

Six new acts arrive Monday matinee, August 19, to embellish the Orpheum bill, three of them of the headline class. Taken with "The Drums of Oude," and the dancing act of Sealby and Ducios, itself of headline variety, this makes the coming bill the greatest aggregation of star acts ever put forth on the Orpheum stage. Not only will this week afford almost a clean slate of new numbers, but it will comprise about the highest-class aggregation that could be brought together on one stage. "The Drums of Oude" in itself has set a new standard for vaudeville plays; it is admittedly above anything else of its sort ever submitted, and stamps the bill as unusual all by itself. To it are added Mrs. Louis James and her company, Marguerite Haney and her company, and Lew Sully.

Mrs. James is making her vaudeville debut, but as the wife of the late leading Shakespearean actor of America she is too well known to need introduction. Herself a player of wide distinction as Mr. James's leading woman, especially in comedy lines, she now is wholly at home in that field; her vehicle, "Holding a Husband," by Arthur Hopkins, and her excellent company, afford her ideal circumstances through which to make her vaudeville debut. As star of her own company last season Mrs. James added to her laurels, but as it often happens in vaudeville she found her true field, and as a star in its ranks she shines with new and more brilliant light. Her sketch is a real comedy of the best sort.

Miss Haney has, since her former appearance here, been a star in London and Paris, and she returns with the finish these two capitals bestow. Ralph Lynn is still her leading comedian, and "The Leading Lady," the bright Rolfe production in the way of a musical comedy, is her offering. It will be full of fun, music and girls.

Lew Sully, ponderous in personality and lightsome and lilting in fun, has a new line of "Feminine Fads" to offer, together with his authorized travesty of Alice Lloyd.

Pantages.

The incoming Pantages road show boasts "The Hold-up" as its premier attraction. This little drama has been seen before at Pantages with the same people in the cast, and memory and the newspaper files verify the advance statements regarding the quality of the act. As presented at Pantages about eighteen months ago, "The Hold-up" was one of the most amazingly truthful railroad dramas ever seen on a local stage. The scenic effects pictured a desert station and water tank, with a freight train coming to a stop in front of the station, and a Limited rushing by at full speed. The sound effects are realistic, from the singing of the telegraph wires in the lonely Arizona night to the steady leak of the freight locomotives' steamcocks and the sighing sob of the condensers. The passage of the Limited and the arrival of the freight are seen from the window of the station agent's office, within which a mortal struggle is in progress between the agent and the hold-up man, who, after he is bound and unmasked, proves to be the agent's old pal, from whom he has received many kindnesses in other days. There is a mental and moral crisis as strenuous as the physical struggle before the agent finally decides upon the course of action he is to follow—whether to pull the semaphore, stop the Limited and give his prisoner into custody or to allow the train to pass and permit his guilty friend to escape.

The supporting show is said to be worthy of the headline attraction.

Empress.

Heading the Sullivan & Considine bill of seven new acts, which comes to the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon, will be the big music and fun offering, "The New Scholar," which will be presented by Clarence Wilbur and his funny folks, under the management of the famous Billie Burke.

"The New Scholar" is one of the schoolroom type of offerings, chuck full of good, fast fun, bright, snappy musical numbers and dances of every type. It is presented by an organization of ten players, headed by Clarence Wilbur, who is generally recognized as one of the foremost eccentric comedians in the country. "The New Scholar" recently scored a genuine hit in the vaudeville houses of the East, and should prove one of the biggest music and fun successes that have recently occupied the Empress stage.

Other features of the bill will be the vocalists, Spenser Kelly and Marion Wilder, two singers who are well known and very popular with local audiences: Robert Le Roy and Aileen Harvey and their company in their western comedy, called "Rained In." This little fun hit has been seen at the Empress Theater before, and will, no doubt, be again welcomed by local vaudeville-goers who like good, fast fun of the very best sort. Two physically-perfect brothers, Hanlon and Hanlon, will furnish the athletics, and May Elinore, one of the famous Elinore Sisters, should provide one of the brightest spots on the new bill with her delightful and amusing comedy characterizations and grotesque mannerisms.

Brink's Cabaret.

Instrumental music will constitute the headline feature at the cabaret show at Brink's Cafe next week, opening next Monday evening at the dinner hour and continuing until midnight. Parmegami and Thompson, musical experts on the saxophone and clarinet, furnish the headline acts with solos and duets. Their repertoire will include classical and ragtime numbers. Both Signor Parmegami and Miss Thompson are versatile performer.

Another new musical act will be the singing turn of Nellie Lereta Witson, soubrette, who sings raggy and popular songs. She is one of the finds Amusement Manager Moore made among the things that have crowded the Mason nightly.

The closing picture is that of the chasing of the cub bear with its mother, the roping of the cub and the fight that the mother puts up to save her young.

This coming week, the fourth, will establish a record for moving pictures in this city.

THE OHLMEYERS, EAST AND WEST.

CONTRACTS FOR CONCERTS AT WILLOW GROVE PARK.

"Stabat Mater" to Be Given Soon at Coronado—Drill's Chorus Resumes Rehearsals—Some Musical News and Notes of Interest from Everywhere.

The Ohlmeyer concerts announced for the Auditorium will, in all probability, not be given at this time—they were scheduled for early September.

Director Henry Ohlmeyer, who has had the most successful season of his career at Coronado this summer, has been called to Philadelphia, immediately upon the conclusion of his Southern California season, to complete some important contracts for the band at Willow Grove Park, for early next summer.

Willow Grove is to band men what the Metropolitan Operahouse is to singers. In the past half-dozen years only the splendid organizations of John Philip Sousa, Victor Herbert and Arthur Pryor have been allowed to appear in these sacred precincts—save the Southern California band of Henry Ohlmeyer. Mr. Ohlmeyer played a very successful engagement there late this spring, and has been asked to give six weeks of his time for next season—an impossibility, considering the imperative demands which Coronado Beach makes upon him.

The Ohlmeyer band, many of whose members are residents of Los Angeles, and whose creator and director is distinctly a Los Angeles product, is the only organization west of the Mississippi River to achieve complete recognition in the East.

On Sunday evening, September 1, at Coronado, Director Ohlmeyer will present Rossini's "Stabat Mater," with the full band, a chorus of fifty voices, and four soloists from Los Angeles, viz., Miss Blanche Lyons, soprano; Edgar Temple, tenor; Miss Alice Lohr, contralto, and Sig. Minetti Frasconi, baritone. This is the most important musical undertaking on record at any American summer resort, at any time.

The Ohlmeyer symphony and octette concerts, given on Tuesdays and Thursdays, respectively, have had the most gratifying patronage this year.

during his recent visit to the cabarets in San Francisco. Pleasing baritone solos will be furnished by James G. Hill, who is appearing in Los Angeles for the first time at Brink's. Miss Wilson will share ragtime honors with "Happyana" Robinson, who remains for another week with her late song hits.

Manager Brink had planned to keep no act longer than two weeks, but Miss Mina Stralee, prima donna soprano, Madame Dossena, coloratura soprano, and Wilbur Ross, the lyric tenor, have won such popularity during their engagement here that they will be retained for a third and positively last week.

Mozart.

Beginning tomorrow, the splendid spectacular film of "Antony and Cleopatra" will be presented at the Mozart Moving-picture Theater on Grand avenue, near Seventh. The story, so well known to all lovers of romance through history, drama and poetry, which have made it familiar to us, will now find a new way of perpetuating the memory of the great romance of the unfortunate Queen of Egypt. The meeting of Queen and warrior will be wonderfully presented when Antony steps into the gorgeous Cleopatra's presence in her Egyptian palace. The dream that follows when he falls a victim to her charms, and instead of demanding the surrender of her domain to Caesar, remains with her as her captive and ally, the maritime battle, when Antony, close to victory, suddenly withdraws to follow the barge of Cleopatra, and thereby loses the day; the reproaches of Antony; his death; Cleopatra's ineffectual efforts to enslave Caesar, and finally, the asp—all the events in the historical romance will be revived in the splendid story picture.

Another film to be presented will be that of Edgar Allan Poe's "Raven," which will tell the story of the writing of this masterpiece, the unhappy conditions that surrounded him at the time, and the sore necessity which made him accept the $10 offered him by the editor of this world-famous poem.

Mason.

By popular demand the engagement of the Alaska-Siberia motion pictures now exhibiting at the Mason Operahouse has been extended another week, making the fourth and last week.

The patrons of the Mason surely have shown by their nightly-increased attendance that they appreciate such pictures and scenes as are shown in these views. The exciting chase and capture of the mountain sheep, the hunting of the big bull moose, the walrus, deer, birds and polar bears—and, in fact, all the wild animals of the Far North—is certainly something to see, to say nothing of the pictures which show the life of the Eskimo in all his picturesqueness, his manner of living, hunting methods and amusements. The capture of great polar bears for scientific exhibits, the humorous and striking antics of that great comedy actor, a diving bear, are

Two subscription concerts will be given during the coming season.

The first rehearsal will be held tomorrow at 8 p.m., in the Blank rooms.

Mme. Johanna Gadski, the Wagnerian singer, sails for Europe September 25, to open her fall concert tour, which will occupy her entire time until mid-December, when she is to start her season at the Operahouse appearances. Arthur Schneider, whom so many have favorably from his last visit here, will be heard at the piano.

Mary Garden returns to America October 29, singing the role of Thaisin September at the Opera Comique, in "Traviata," and a number of other famous roles. Her American season opens with the Boston Opera Company, December 4. The winter months will be spent in Chicago, Philadelphia, and New York in opera, while March will bring her to the Coast with the Chicago Metropolitan Opera Company in "Thais" and "Natoma."

My Dear Mr. Egan:

I have studied abroad with Jean De Reszke and others; also with Oscar Sanger of New York and in comparison I cannot express my great admiration and thanks to Thomas Taylor Drill for the wonderful help he has given me, and I do not hesitate to say I think him the peer of all vocal teachers that it has been my experience to meet.

Advance Suit Models

The new Suit for Fall and Winter is a marvel of the tailor's art. It is a combination of the mannish with the genteel, the refined, the exclusive. Our present showing—while by no means yet complete—gives the visitor a most satisfying insight of what may be expected in Suit Fashions this coming season. You are urged to see these advance styles while they are fresh and new. Many shown now will not be duplicated as the season advances.

THE MATERIALS for the most part are rough or semi-rough diagonals in various new color effects in one or two toned blues, blacks, browns, grays and black-and-white. Then for the more conservative dressers there are the smoother materials in mannish stripes—almost invisible—in a variety of color schemes.

CUTAWAY COATS are prominent. Many are bound with silk braid; some show cuffs and collar of plain broadcloth or velvet. In the skirt you will note many new ideas, styles quite unlike those of seasons past—style changes you will welcome and enjoy wearing.

Handsome new Suits are here at: $25.00, $29.50, $35.00, $39.50 and up to $65.00.

Latest Coat Styles for Fall

Every day marks the arrival of some new Coat idea. Our present showing comprises Coats for various occasions, chief among which are the new Johnny Coats. They of themselves are worth a trip down town to see. The models, the materials and the assortments now on display have been said by leading critics to have set a new standard of Coat excellence. Prices here range from $25.00 to $55.00.

Beverly Hills Notes.

Mrs. Annette H. Cheney of St. Louis is among the recent arrivals at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Mrs. Cheney will be joined later by her daughter.

J. R. Moulthrop, a prominent attorney of San Francisco, and Miss Ruth Kincaid of Berkeley, were guests of Mrs. M. J. Anderson for a few days this week. Mr. Moulthrop is a nephew of Mrs. Anderson.

Mrs. A. H. Glasscock of Oakland, Judge and Mrs. O. W. Powers and son, Roger, of Salt Lake City, are among the recent arrivals.

One of the most interesting events of the week was the birthday party given by Mrs. G. M. Anderson of Chicago on Wednesday, Miss Barbara Bennett, the pretty little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bennett, being the honor guest. The table was decorated with children's favors, bon-bons and sparkers. Miss Barbara "confesses" to six summers.

In Riverside.

Miss Elizabeth Root of No. 3616 Vermont avenue is the guest of Miss Mae Hamilton of Riverside.

Mrs. Chansior Honored.

Mrs. W. G. Chansior, formerly of this city, who is residing in Portland, was the complimented guest at a large luncheon at the Portland Hotel, given by Mrs. Theodore Nicholai. Later the guests enjoyed a theater party.

Thursday Wedding.

Interesting to many friends is the wedding announcement of Miss Elizabeth Atsatt and Charles Morton Heron, which was solemnised Thursday at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Charles Atsatt of No. 1207 West Fifth street. The bride-elect was attired in an exquisite creation of white charmeuse made over satin. With this she wore a veil and carried a shower of lily-of-the-valley and bride's roses. Her sister, Miss Mary Louise Atsatt, in white chiffon over silk, and an arm-bouquet of white China asters, assisted as maid-of-honor, while two younger sisters, the Misses Sarah and Marjorie Atsatt, served as bridesmaids. They wore gowns fashioned like the maid-of-honor and carried the same blossoms. Stephen Barrows was best man. Rev. William Horace Day, assisted by Dr. E. S. Norton of Pomona College, read the service amid a profusion of Shasta daisies, asters and golden glow. The bride is a Pomona College girl and Mr. Heron was graduated from the University of California. Mr. and Mrs. Heron will return to this city to live, after a wedding trip.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Brian of No. 731 Clanton street announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Calla Julia, to William B. Geisler of Santa Paula. The wedding will take place in September.

In New York.

Mrs. A. L. Swobdi of Hotel Woodward left recently for New York City, where she will remain four weeks.

House Party.

The Misses Anna and Lydia Kellam of South Olive street gave a house party recently at their country place at Elsinore. Their cousin, Miss Elsie Yarnall of Wilmington, Del., was the motif for the enjoyable event. Motor rides and other pleasures were shared by Mrs. Mayne Young Moore, Miss Ethel Rebman and Miss May Rebman.

Outing at Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker, with their daughter and son, Elizabeth and Lawrence, are enjoying an outing of a month at Balboa.

Home from Outing.

Home again from a pleasant outing at Balboa, the Misses May Howard, Vera Tally, Dorothy Douglas, Marjorie Douglas, Irene Turner, Madge Turner and Mr. and Mrs. Turner, all of this city, are preparing for a gay social season.

Motoring North

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Dodge, with their daughter and son, Kathleen and Fred, of No. 1435 West Fourth street, Glendale, left Thursday in their motor car for San Francisco and Sacramento. They will go the inland route, visiting Bakersfield, Fresno, and Stockton. Returning, they will make stops at San Jose, Santa Cruz, Pacific Grove and Santa Barbara.

Seaside Fun.

The Cope cottage on Surf avenue, Balboa, has been the scene this season of many jolly parties. Mrs. Cope with her two daughters, Frances and Dorothy, entertained as their guests the past week Miss Murtle Bailey, Ellis Breeden of Berkeley, S. Styrdevant and Ralph Rogers.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Ware of Los Angeles and Mrs. A. K. McCoy, mother of Mrs. Ware, have closed their home on West Adams street and will occupy a pleasant suite at the Hollywood Hotel for the fall and winter months.

Mrs. John Robson and daughter, Miss Anna Robson, of Hollywood, will make the Hotel Hollywood their home for the next six months.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Hyde, Jr. of Visalia, are the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Law at the Hotel Hollywood.

Maj. H. H. Hall, Charles E. Hall, Miss H. H. Hall Lewis Hall and Mrs. Charles E. Hall of Hollywood have reserved a suite at the Hotel Hollywood for an indefinite stay. Miss Jennie Martin of Brocton, N. Y., will be the guest of Miss Hall during August and September.

OUT-OF-TOWN-SOCIETY.

Pasadena.

WITH an almost general exodus of society people from Pasadena during the months of August and September social functions are rare, and even the club life, which has kept up remarkably well during the summer, has been for the past few weeks almost negligible. No more entertainments will be given at the Valley Hunt Club until the opening of the winter season in October, but at the Altadena Country Club and at Annandale there is some life each Saturday and occasionally during the week. One of the prettiest affairs at the Altadena Country Club was the informal tennis luncheon given complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Churchill Clarke of Altadena, who left Monday for an extended eastern

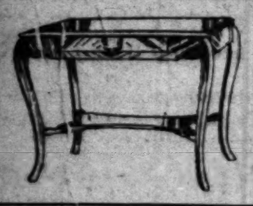
It Takes Sterling Qualities in Furniture to Stand the Test of Long and Intimate Service



This Beautiful Table at $10

For living-room or library. Made of selected, clear stock birch in mahogany finish. Has 24x36-inch top and spacious drawer. Highly polished. It's a regular $13.50 value.

It takes more than glue and varnish and a price ticket to make furniture worth while. And beware of the man who tries to sell you the furniture you must live with on the mere sham basis of appearance price.

Remember the glue and varnish—they cover a multitude of weaknesses that only time and use in your home will reveal, and from which you will be the sufferer.

In our August Furniture Sale you are safe, because we offer only the reliable, high grade furniture on which we have built a reputation for years. We are not going to tear down that hard-earned asset but are constantly building it up.

Summer Foods Often Cause Dyspepsia

Their Effect on the Digestive Organs Responsible for Many of the Season's Ills.

Summer should be the period of perfect health, but impure water and milk, unripe fruit, and the tendency to indulge in acid foods and iced drinks, produces a contrary condition in many people.

The effect of the average summer diet is to constipate even normally regular bowels, and this results in disarranging the entire digestive system. When the bowels are choked with stomach's refuse, indigestion is almost sure to follow, and the waste matter that should pass out through the bowels, not finding passage, ferments in the stomach and the poisons are forced into the blood, causing much distress and often serious illness.

To keep the bowels free, there is no more effective remedy than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a pleasant-tasting bowel stimulant and laxative tonic that is very gentle in its action, bringing relief in an easy, natural manner, and without discomfort. A spoonful of Syrup Pepsin will quickly check summer diarrhoea by cleansing the bowels and removing the foreign matter that irritates and inflames the tissue. It is sold in drug stores for 50 cents a bottle; a large family size, considerably more than twice the quantity, costs a dollar. If you have never used Syrup Pepsin and would like a free trial bottle, postpaid, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 406 Washington street, Monticello, Illinois.

USING VIS VITAE REMEDIES FOR INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Portland, Oregon, Aug. 10th, 1912.

State of Oregon, County of Multnomah, ss.

I, W. E. Thresher, Notary Public for Oregon, hereby certify that the following is a true copy of a letter now on file in the Vis Vitae Laboratories, No. 49 Union Avenue, N. Portland, Oregon.

(Seal) W. E. THRESHER, Notary Public for Oregon.

FOSSIL, Ore., Aug. 8th, 1912.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Our little boy was taken with infantile paralysis on June 9th, 1912. On June the 18th we began to treat his spine with Vis Vitae Remedies. He was unable to move a muscle of his body or eat anything but liquid foods, and those with great difficulty. He began to gain immediately. We have used four bottles (8-oz. size,) externally entirely, and at this time he has completely recovered the use of his body, excepting the lower limbs, and he is gradually regaining the use of them. We are satisfied he will walk in a short time, and not be left a cripple as is generally the case. We gladly recommend Vis Vitae Remedies for Infantile Paralysis, for we do not believe our boy would have been alive today if we had not used those external absorbents.

MR. AND MRS. A. E. HUNTER.

Three weeks' treatment sent to any address in the United States or any of her possessions on receipt of the price, $8. Address Vis Vitae Laboratories, No. 49 Union Ave., N. Portland, Ore.

The Eyes of the Store

Stores, like people, may be largely judged by their eyes, and the eyes of a store are its windows.

We hope ours have a friendly look and that they bespeak a welcome inside.

We don't blur our vision by crowding our windows. They merely offer suggestions of what you may expect inside—"headlines" to the story which is continued within.

We hope they may look so inviting to you that you will cross the threshold next time you are in our busy thoroughfare—Fifth Street.

A Side Note—

—"In more than one instance during this 6th Clearance, Customers have found the Merchandise they wanted sold before they came."

—"This has been the cause of great regret to the management of Bullock's—It is the desire of this Organization to develop a business that will have the Merchandise Customers want, when they want it, at the right price;—a business that will attract through its character, its personality and its ability to serve—

—"During Eleven Months in the year every activity is directed towards the building up of strong, regular stocks; towards the strengthening of varieties and values; towards the development of greater power to apply in the endeavor to secure the Satisfaction of every customer.

—"The Twelfth Month, August, is devoted to Clearance—The One Sale of the Year'—for Clearance is necessary to the maintenance of clean, strong, regular stocks—

—"The very word Clearance suggests incomplete—broken lines——"And it is because lines are incomplete and broken that prices are marked so exceptionally low—

—"And it is because prices are marked so low that selling is keeping up such an extraordinary pace.

—"In ever so many cases lots have been so radically reduced and in such small numbers that we have not allowed them to be advertised—

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Remember I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling in the meantime a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have said, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

HER HANDS AND ARMS MADE MARVELOUSLY BEAUTIFUL IN A SINGLE NIGHT.

Free Prescription Did It.

Grace Benson says: "Had anyone told me such wonderful results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. My arms and hands were covered with freckles; my neck was dark and wrinkled from the use of high collars; my hands were tanned and the knuckles red.

All these defects were removed by one application of a free prescription, which I am pleased to give to anyone. It's just as simple as it is effective. Go to any drug store and get an empty two-ounce bottle and a one-ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into the two-ounce bottle, add one-quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Prepare this prescription at your own home, then you know you are getting it right. Apply night and morning.

It makes the skin soft and beautiful, no matter how rough and ungainly your hands and arms are. One application will astonish you. I have given this prescription to thousands of women and they are all just as enthusiastic as I am. Try it on your neck and shoulders and you will be agreeably surprised."

delighted the guests. Games and the serving of a collation rounded out the evening's enjoyment.

The Optimist.

There was once a man who smiled,
Because the day was bright,
Because he slept at night,
Because God gave him sight
To gaze upon his child;
Because his little one
Could leap and laugh and run.
Because the distant sun
Smiled on the earth, he smiled.
He smiled because the sky
Was high above his head,
Because the rose was red,
Because the past was dead.
He never wondered why
The Lord had blundered so
That all things have to go
The wrong way here below
The overarching sky.

FORGOTTEN COLLECTORS.

The Boys Who Used to Make Lists of Names Given to Locomotives Before They Became Merely Numbers.

[Boston Herald:] Calvin Voorhis has been an engineer of the Erie was faithfully reproduced, and it was Railroad for at least thirty years, and now his name is lettered in gold on both sides of the engine, for the Erie has adopted the system of naming its locomotives after faithful employees.

Years ago there were boys who collected the names of engines, from Atlas to Vulcan. They would haunt depots—for railway stations were then thus called—they would bore engineers and brakemen; they would sit on back fences to catch a name as a new engine passed, for engines in these days had generous smokestacks, and they had the individuality of a name. They were not condemned to a number like a convict or a hotel guest, and often the portrait of a Governor, a railway president, a superintendent or some well-known public man was painted on each side of the tender. The whiskerage of the one thus honored a period of whiskers—witness the contemporaneous photographs of generals, colonels, captains, lieutenants and privates in the Civil War. A shaven upper lip and luxurious aymoe were not uncommon.

The names of engines were entered in alphabetical order in blank books, and the name of the railroad to which each belonged was added. Boys used to swap names, and there was correspondence inviting interchange. And thus boys became familiar with geography, history, political and natural. Today the only interest that a boy has when an engine draws into a station is to see whether the number can be twisted into the baleful "13," as in the case of "67" or "193."

HER COMPENSATION.

The Story of a Girl Who Lost Her Beauty, but Gained a Lover.

BY ROY VICKERS.

Eva Barnes was the undisputed belle of Morris & Blaine's, which is no mean tribute to her beauty seeing that that huge factory employed, in addition to the 600 men, fully 400 girls. There were even those who held that she had no rival in the whole populous district of Blacton.

However that may be, it is certain that, of her host of secret admirers, there were only two who could claim that she had ever given them the least encouragement, which is the same as saying that there was nothing of the idle flirt about Eva Barnes.

One of them, Rob Stranack by name, met her just as she was about to enter the factory gates.

"Doing anything Saturday night?" he asked.

"Not as I know of," she answered.

"Why?"

"'Cause I've got a couple of seats for the circle at the Acropolis—reserved y'know. Will you come?"

Eva hesitated a moment and then accepted. She could not refuse without hurting his feelings.

Reserved seats at a music hall! It was an extravagance that would never have occurred to most men in his position. But it was just like Rob Stranack. She knew that the money had probably been obtained through his having "spotted a winner," but that was no affair of hers. And his method of spending his winnings was very flattering to her.

It was really the ability to think of little attentions like this that attracted her toward him. He took care to remember the particular kind of chocolate she preferred, and if he bought her a nosegay on Sunday it would be sure to match her best dress. And when she walked out with him he always dressed himself so smartly that no one would suspect that he worked with his hands.

All these qualities were wanting in Jim Rolt. Jim was the biggest duffer going when it came to the niceties of courtship. He barely knew enough to walk on the outside of the pavement. He looked awkward in his Sunday clothes, and never seemed to grasp that a pretty girl likes to have a little nonsense talked to her occasionally.

But there was something about Jim Rolt that made up for these little deficiencies. She didn't know what it was. She just knew that when she was with Jim she felt she was in some mysterious way being looked after.

She passed to her place in the factory and fell to her task of "feeding" her section of the giant machinery. She sang as she worked, for her heart was light.

Perhaps her mind wandered in day dreams of the future. Perhaps, too, with the contempt that comes of familiarity, she relaxed the normal carefulness with which every worker is expected to handle the machinery. From whatever cause, her attention was attracted by some trifling incident behind her, she turned sharply, and her skirt was caught in the machinery, which dragged her towards it.

It all happened in an instant.

She gave a terrified scream that pierced the dull throbbing of the engines. A stout foreman who was standing near by literally hurled himself upon her, regardless of his own danger. His weight and strength together tore her dress, but not before the outer edge of a revolving shaft had struck her head.

They laid her on a stretcher and carried her bleeding and unconscious to an adjacent hospital.

At the end of the working day quite a large group of workers waited outside the hospital while two of their number went forward to inquire the extent of the girl's injuries.

"The doctor says it's nothing much," announced one of them. "Leastways, she'll be on her feet in a month or so. But it's cut her face open—under the left eye. And he says as there'll always be a big scar even after it's healed up."

"Reckon she won't be much to look at when she comes out, poor dear," said a motherly woman from the back of the group.

Silence followed the woman's remark. It was exactly what each had been thinking. Her life and limb had been saved, but the beauty of Eva Barnes had been crushed by the cruel machinery.

"Thank God it's nothing more than that," muttered a man with such passionate intensity that several turned to look at him. The speaker was Jim Rolt.

Rob Stranack's reflections were of a slightly different nature. His first instinct was to revile his own ill-luck in being cheated by fortune of what he had taken to be an easy conquest. His feelings for Eva had consisted of about equal parts of infatuation and vanity. His vanity was flattered when he was seen in the street or a music hall in the company of a girl upon whom all male eyes were enviously turned.

Now that the girl would never again be the center of masculine admiration, his chief anxiety was to be rid of her as soon as possible, and he wondered whether his previous attentions would be taken as implying more than he now wished. He must break away from her now with as good grace as possible.

Scarcely had he made the resolve when he reviled himself for a fool.

A couple of the women were walking close behind him, and a fragment of their conversation forced itself on his ears.

"She'll get grand compensation. . . . The firm will be bound to pay up handsome."

"Aye," said the other. "Nellie Maise got two-fifty for a broken wrist. What's that to a spoilt face as none of the lads'll look at? She ought to get double."

The women passed on, but they had already planted an idea in the avaricious brain of Rob Stranack.

He had lost the chance of a pretty wife, but he had now got something better—a girl who would be comparatively rich. Why, if she got no more than the other girl they had mentioned, that in itself was a small fortune!

By the end of the week the probable amount of compensation Eva Barnes would receive became quite a topic in the factory. The senior partner, Sir Preston Morris, was the sitting member for Blacton, and was liked in the constituency for his known generosity to his employees. And there could be no doubt that he would treat handsomely the girl who had lost the valuable asset of her beauty in his service.

Eva Barnes was moved from the hospital to her home after a couple of weeks. Before long she was allowed to leave her bed and lie on the sofa in the front room, her face closely bandaged.

It was then that she received the first of her visitors in the person of Jim Rolt, who had called daily since her accident and, having ascertained the earliest moment at which he could see her, took an afternoon off for the purpose.

He spoke little of her accident, but did his best to cheer her up. The effort was quite obvious to Eva, but she felt none the less grateful to him, so that he really succeeded in his object. While he was sitting with her she felt more than ever the sensation of security in his presence, and before he left she almost decided that she liked him better than Rob Stranack.

But, a few minutes after he had left, her mother came in and asked her if she felt well enough to see Rob Stranack, who was waiting at the street door.

In the presence of Mrs. Barnes Stranack inquired formally after the condition of the patient and retailed fragments of gossip from the factory. As he looked at the once beautiful girl, now an invalid with an unsightly bandage across her face, his love, which had been purely superficial, now completely vanished. But his business instinct remained.

Soon the elder woman, having some household duty to attend, left him alone with Eva.

Now Stranack had not intended to say anything definite on that occasion. But he found the girl quite clear-headed, and so thought it would be wise to lose no time.

He drew his chair closer to the sofa on which she lay.

"Eva," he said in a half whisper, "it won't make no difference to me."

"What won't?" asked the girl, genuinely puzzled.

"The accident won't," replied the man.

"How could it make any difference to you? I don't understand," she said.

"Well——" The man paused awkwardly for a moment, then remembering that there were possible rivals in the field, he resolved to put the matter bluntly, regardless of what the invalid's feelings might be.

"You know what the doctor said."

"I don't. What did he say?" asked the girl suspiciously.

"About you always having a great big scar across your face for the rest of your life."

"I thought you knew," he added hastily, as he perceived the effect his words had on the girl.

"I am sorry you are cut up about it," he said a few moments later, "but I thought I'd like to tell you as soon as I could. I was mighty keen on you when you was a beauty, and I'm not the sort to chuck you now you ain't. I was going to ask you to marry me sometime ago, and the offer stands good now. Come, what d'you say to that?"

Eva was too overcome to think clearly. The shock of hearing for the first time that her beauty was gone, coming when she was still in a low state, was overwhelming. One thought predominated, that this man was remaining true to her in her affliction. Without thinking whether she loved him or not she felt unquestionably grateful for his allegiance, and she gave him her hand.

The following day he thought it was none to early to raise the question of compensation.

"I shan't ask for anything," she said in answer to his question. "I expect they'll pay my wages while I am away—probably the doctor's bill as well."

Rob Stranack clenched his teeth.

"I've got a friend in a solicitor's office," he began untruthfully, "who says——"

"Oh, I couldn't think of that," answered Eva. "The firm has always been fair enough."

Stranack plunged.

"I think you owe it to me," he said sententiously, "to get all you can out of them after they've spoiled——"

"All right, Rob," said the girl weakly, chiefly anxious that he should not finish his sentence.

Before he left it was arranged that he should put the matter in the hands of the solicitors and instruct them to demand five hundred pounds from Messrs. Morris & Blaine.

Stranack could not contain his suspense, and babbled freely at the factory about the money Eva Barnes was going to receive. He let it be understood that he, himself, was engineering the claim. No one openly expressed the opinion that he was playing an unscrupulous part, but many thought it.

By chance the reply came to Eva Barnes one evening only a few minutes before Stranack came to pay his nightly call.

She was still holding the letter when her mother let him in.

"What do they say?" he cried the moment he entered the room.

"Oh, the claim's no good," said the girl, "but——"

Her tone was anything but despondent, but Stranack was in no mood for talking. He rudely snatched the letter from her hand. It was from the firm's solicitors.

"'Dear Madam,'" he read aloud—"'Our clients absolutely refuse to entertain your claim——'"

That was enough for Stranack.

"Ah! So that's their game, is it?" he said grimly. "We'll soon settle that! I'll go first thing in the morning and tell our man to take it into court."

"You'll do nothing of the kind!" retorted the girl hotly, suspicion for the first time entering her head.

"Do you mean to say you think you're going to drop it there?" he demanded. "Look here, my lass," he continued threateningly, "when I asked you to marry me——"

"Seems you were thinking of my compensation money," broke in the girl.

Rob Stranack, exposed and humiliated, left the room without a word. He hurried to the Workingmen's Club to publish his own version of the failure before the truth should be known.

Left alone, Eva Barnes's first sensation was one of relief at her escape from such a man. She assured herself that, if she had been well, she would have seen through his imposture, his insolent pretense of loyalty that had for the time deceived her. She knew now that she had never cared for him as she had for Jim Rolt, whom she had missed badly of late since he had kept away from the house for obvious reasons.

Ardently she hoped that he would come back, especially now that——

She had not long to wait. Scarcely an hour had passed before he came.

"I have just come from the club," he said, then added in his abrupt manner: "Stranack was there."

For a moment neither spoke. Then suddenly a flood of words burst from the man.

"Eva—now that there's to be no compensation I've come to say what I couldn't say before—I love you, Evie—I always have, and I've loved you more since the accident! . . ."

When at length he came to a stop she asked: "Have you heard what the doctor said—about my face not healing up?"

He replied by begging her to make light of the trouble. His words were music in her ears, for she could see that his sole anxiety was on her account. That is could possibly affect his love did not seem to enter his head.

"Jim," she said a moment later, as if changing the subject, "d'you mind reading that letter for me?"

She handed him the letter Stranack had dropped without finishing. He took it and read it to her, though she already knew its contents.

"'Our clients absolutely refuse to entertain your claim as they understand from Dr. Jarrett that the wound you have unfortunately sustained will, contrary to his previous expectation, almost certainly be healed in a few months, leaving no disfiguring mark. They realise, however, that your claim was made in good faith, and I am instructed by Sir Preston Morris to hand you his check for £100 as soon as you are well enough to receive it in person at this office. Trusting that your recovery. . . .'"

Jim Rolt always refused to touch a penny of that £100. It is still in the bank in Mrs. Rolt's name—in case one of the children should need it.

The Best Kind of Vacation.

[Leslie's:] To be productive of lasting benefit a vacation should mark a complete change in one's environment and habits. Country people find this in going to the city, while the city folk flee to the country; those living on the salt water go to the mountains, and vice versa. For this reason camp life has become so deservedly popular. The dweller in a modern city needs to get away for a while from telephones, elevators, subways, automobiles and all the multitude of things that make life easy and convenient, and get back to primitive simplicity. Tent life in woods or beside lake or stream constitutes the biggest possible contrast with the artificial life of the city, and a vacation thus spent means not only physical recuperation, but a tonic to the spirit, a renewal of kinship with nature's elemental forces.

CHURCHMEN, EDUCATORS.

The Rev. P. A. Rudolph, pastor of the Free Methodist Church at Keyesport, Ill., is serving as chief of police. He was given a two weeks' trial, and so satisfactory was his work that he was appointed to the office. He receives $35 a month. In addition he fills the office of street commissioner, but has time to look after the spiritual welfare of his flock.

In one of the paintings Edwin H. Blashfield of New York, is painting for the Minnesota capital, in St. Paul, Archbishop Ireland figures wearing the uniform of an officer of the United States army. The scene represents a charge of the Fifth Minnesota Regiment at the Battle of Corinth, in October, 1862. The Archbishop, at that time plain Rev. John Ireland, busied himself in ministering to the wounded and dying.

Arthur D. Call of Hartford, Ct., a school pricipal, has resigned to become the executive head of the American Peace Society. Mr. Call is president of the Connecticut Peace Society. He is a graduate of Brown University.

Rev. Miss Ina L. Morgan of the Methodist churches of Georgetown and Arrowsic, Me., is the youngest woman pastor in New England. She is in her early twenties and has been engaged in church work for nearly four years, having received a license in 1908 from Bishop John W. Hamilton of Worcester.

This Girl Recovered From Consumption

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Consumptives, are continually in receipt of really wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Here is one specimen:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South, I would surely die of Consumption. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering from lung trouble."

(Signed Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

Three years later reports still well.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by The Owl Drug Company and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

"GETS-IT," the New Corn Cure Guaranteed.

"Corns Gone! GETS-IT Got 'Em!"

"GETS-IT" is the new-plan corn cure that will surely surprise you the very first time you use it. It is so simple, painless, quick and sure in its action.

It shrivels up the corn, wart, callous or bunion, separates them from the true flesh, the corn comes off, and there you are with feet that feel positively glorious; corn-free once more as they used to be in your "barefoot days."

The most remarkable feature is that "GETS-IT" does not harm or turn raw the healthy flesh, as other preparations do. It is as safe as water. No more plasters, bandages, or salves.

"GETS-IT" is sold at drug stores at 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

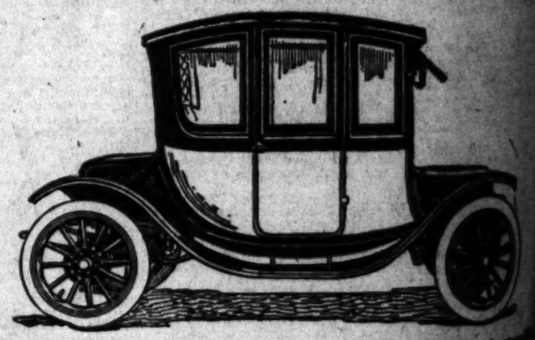
The New Waverley Electric Colonial Brougham is The Most Beautiful Automobile Ever Conceived



I KNOW this is a broad statement. I know that a majority of automobiles are advertised in an exaggerated manner, but when my own experience of ten years in the industry tells me this new creation of the Waverley Company is the final word in electric construction and style, and the finest car I have seen this car voice the same opinion, I believe I am justified in making a strong statement as that which heads this advertisement.

To appreciate the elegance and beauty of this Colonial Brougham you must see the car. If you will phone I will be pleased to send the car to you.

PINCHER'S PROGRESS.

The Chronicles of a London Thief.

BY C. MALCOLM HINCKS.

Pincher, attired in a vivid blue suit, with a straw hat in place of the familiar bowler, lounged somewhat nervously in the hammock into which I had assisted him. I sat in a chair opposite him.

"Don't think much of these bloomin' things, guv'nor," he said; "sorter cross between a airship an' a tanner-a-time on a yacht at Margate."

"Hammocks are wonderfully comfortable things," I said.

Pincher eyed me suspiciously.

"What how is it you're sittin' in the chair?"

"A host's duty is to study his guest," I said.

"Does that duty include seein' as he's got some whisky an' a cigar?" asked the little man innocently, reproved, I moved to the table and made my omission. A loud yell made me turn to find Pincher sprawled on the grass, and he eyed me reproachfully as he slowly climbed to his feet.

"I'm surprised at you, guv'nor," he said, "a man of your age an' generally dignified. That's the sorter trick I expect a schoolboy to play."

"There's no trick," I answered. "A hammock is very comfortable when you get used to it, but, of course, if——"

"Well, I ain't goin' to get used to it," said Pincher determinedly. "Nasty, tricky things, I call 'em, might have broken my bloomin' neck."

Soothed the angry little man with a whisky and soda and settled him among the cushions in the wicker chair, and then I think won a reputation for great bravery by carelessly getting into the hammock. Pincher was in silence for some little time, evidently finding that I did not fall out and that no rope broke, he seemed a little disappointed.

"I suppose there's a knack in it," he said grudgingly, "but it's a tricky thing, a hammock is just the sorter thing I could imagine Bill Emmens to get drowned in. It's a funny thing that, too, 'cos it was round this evenin' to tell me about a adventure I've had with one of Bill's blanked inventions."

"Invention, you mean," I said, "he invented a boat, didn't he?"

"Yes," said Pincher grimly. "He invented the Patent Prize-winnin' boat."

"Well, that's what you've come to tell me about?"

"That's wot I've come to tell you about," said Pincher, keeping himself cool and speaking slowly. "A few days ago it was that he came to my diggin's in the ex-neighborhood of his that always spells trouble of some sort.

"Then he says, 'wot do you say to a holiday at the seaside with me, stretched in an pocket money? I'll pay you if I offered you a fiver.'

"Well, I was drunk,' I says, 'or you wouldn't be drunk an' I ain't balmy,' I says very dignified, 'an I've got a better proposition to put before you. Have you ever heard of the Southcliff Regatta?'

"'Course I have,' I says, 'it's the event somewhere near the end of August,' says Bill. 'Very highclass. Charge you sixpence for a drink an', that sorter thing. Southcliff has a regatta. Let's go out an' the biggest one-mile open scullin' race and the prize, to say nothin' of the money which we'en melted down, be worth a few quid.'

"I was very slow in comin' to the point, they say as once we'en I'll tell his story of a burglar who was charged with the murder, an' the barristers all fell asleep, an' as he had left the court long before Bill gave a pained cough. If the sleepers an' wished it wasn't till I'd taken my fair share away an' told him to leave it until he'd ex-murdered that I got to wot he was charged with.

"Well, I'd invented a wonderful machine which was quite noiseless when under the seat of the boat, and the bubbles which moved the propeller, was hidden by the rower, an', the harder the work, he only had to row.

"'Who's worked by?' I says.

"'Me,' he says. 'I reckon I'm strong enough to last a few miles for anythin' an' the engine would have to be pretty bad if it couldn't be hidden from view.'

"Now, all we've got to do, as I says, as we're bound to win it hands down, is to be quite a bloomin' lot more than five pounder an'——'

"'Hands,' says Bill, after a moment's thought, 'an' all right, all both do all right.'

"'I'm to do the work wot you're to be the steerer,' he says, 'but I have to have a steerer. You can't be the steerer and the build of a sculler.'

"'Very well, I sought to have a free trip to the seaside and a bit of fun,' says Bill, but I thought this nasty, cold note thrown in was a bit of a damper. 'Next day me an' Bill Waterloo Bill carried our machine, his togs and mine, containin' his clothes, and Bill's is a cheap part of the way as far as Southcliff. Bill had spent hours in the place tellin' landladies he thought of 'em an' when he heard the machine he reckoned on trouble and Bill kept me in the mornin' ex-pectin' wot he'd left to happen to it, an' wishin' he'd left it at home.

"We entered for the Race, an' Bill had paid the entrance fee an' I the entrance fee an' Bill's. The race was open to anyone, and there was a lot of local scullers. Some of the town gave the scullers a good send off, an' the rest of the regatta fund. As we rowed over the line Bill bein' the heaviest, as the machine as the engine was at a critical point, I might say, as he said, to get it charged at Southcliff and we got there a little out of the way, but we charged through the next day was a bit of a crowd there was a lot of people everywhere, and we got separated from each other and got into their own boats, so I got as far as I could, but Bill hev me a sweat-

FREE MUSIC LESSONS

FROM ANY TEACHER DESIRED

The Biggest Achievement of Southern California's Big Piano House

Music lessons free in a great factory surplus sale of the Nation's standard makes—Deckers, Kimballs, the Hazelton, the old reliable Stroeber, the Eilers, the Steger and the old established Marshall & Wendell. Prices so low as to barely cover the cost to make them and the freight—lower than ever heretofore. Payments as little as $1.00 a week. The greatest offer ever made by Los Angeles' big piano house.

It was not a simple matter for us to undertake to sell a large number of pianos, and particularly the costlier kinds in addition to those regularly contracted for. But we are doing it.

First of all, we are selling these additional fine pianos at prices lower than they have ever been obtainable heretofore;

Secondly, we are making terms of payment so extremely easy (some are only $1 a week) that any home can arrange to get one; and

Thirdly, we are furnishing with each one of these pianos a term of free music lessons.

Select any teacher you like who is using one of our pianos. But remember, one scholarship goes with each instrument in this surplus sale. When the instruments are sold, the opportunity for free music lessons ends.

Come to the big piano house tomorrow or write or telephone. It is impossible to enumerate all the many fine pianos to be had, but here is a list of

A Few of the Pianos and Some Sale Prices

KIMBALL PIANOS FOR $315

The Kimball pianos in this sale will be the new $475 style 17, at $315, and the new $500 style 21 is only $435; terms of $10 a month will buy these. Other styles of the famous Kimball piano at corresponding reductions.

DECKER PIANOS FOR $376

There will be three styles of the Decker piano, among them the superb new $500 style B for $348—$10 a month buys them.

THE NATION'S COSTLIEST ALSO!

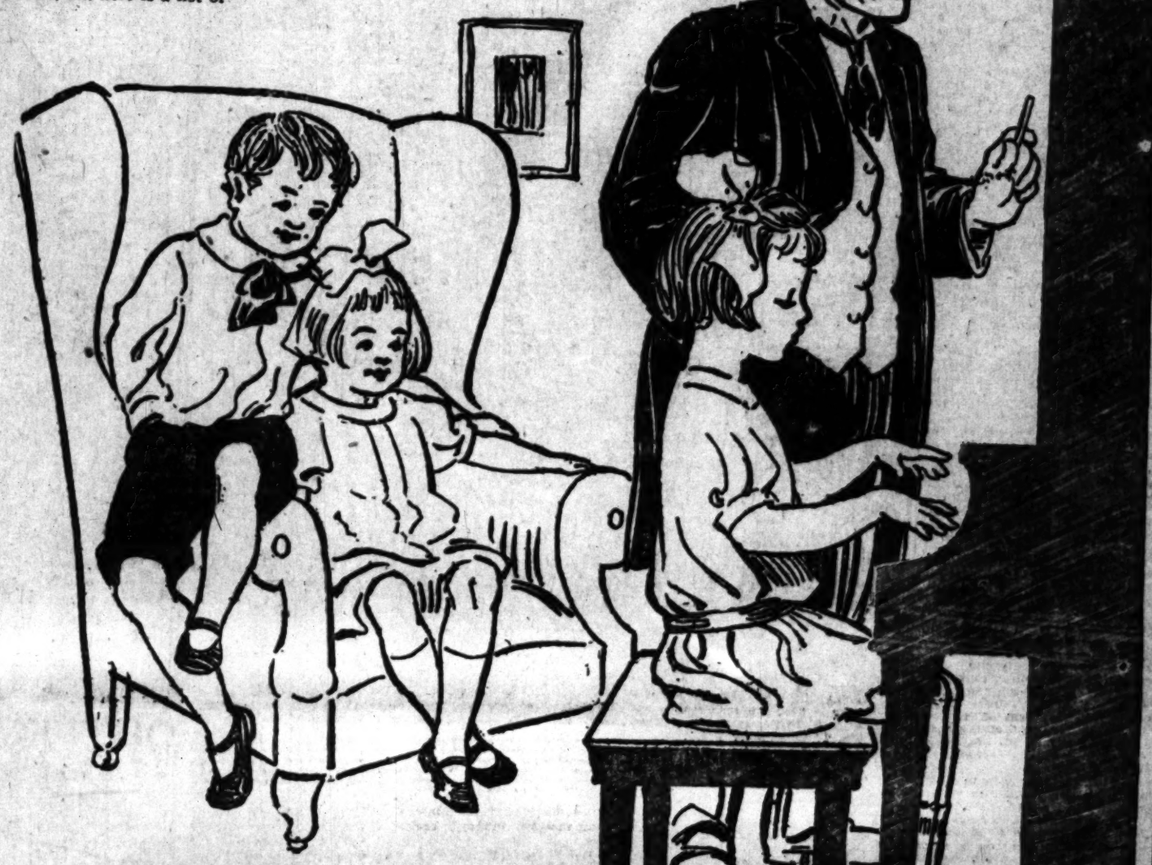
There will be 19 of the very finest uprights and Baby Grands, not the plainest and least expensive types, but the finest $725 and $900 styles, which may be had at $585 and $665. Other styles at corresponding reductions.

SOME FOR ONLY $234

The old-established Marshall & Wendell piano will be represented by two of their latest 1913 designs. One is the $425 upright, reduced to $274 ($8.00 a month buys them,) and the other is a smaller and plainer design for only $234.

STROEBER PIANOS FOR $267

The old reliable Stroeber pianos of Chicago are included in this sale, particularly a new style F, 4 feet 6 inches high, with all latest improvements. The corresponding designs of this famous old make have been heretofore sold by other houses for $400 and $450. They may be had in this sale for only $267 ($1 a week buys them,) and there are many others.



Because business in the United States has been good only in a few districts, some of the largest and oldest established makers of the best grades of pianos were compelled to unload surplus stocks. After some lengthy negotiations, Eilers Music House succeeded in getting the finest pianos ever shipped West, at virtually their own price, and in addition thereto a cash appropriation from each manufacturer to pay for this new free-scholarship plan.

Thus these fine pianos have come to us way below value. They are being sold at prices lower than ever known before. You've never known standard pianos such as these being sold below regular price. Yet if you buy now, during this sale, you get lowest price, easiest terms and free lessons. You choose the teacher—we pay the bill. The pianos are here. Every one is plainly marked. A little cash down and as little as a dollar each week and the piano is paid for before you realize it. Payments can be arranged on our new one, two and three-year plan, too.

All teachers are invited to send in their cards and their rates. Eilers Music House will pay the bill for lessons for the purchasers of any of the pianos in this sale.

CHAPMAN'S PROGRESS.

The Chronicles of a London Thief.

BY G. WALDEN HINCKS.

about three o'clock in the afternoon, after rowin' a long way round so as to get clear to fix up the electric engine, we pulled round to the head of the pier an' got into line with about fifty other boats.

"Bang went a gun, an' we were wot you might call left at the start, for Bill wasn't goin' to start up the engine, till we were clear of the pier. I had the rubber-covered cables comin' up under my sweater an' down the sleeves, my hands coverin' where they were joined to the oars.

"'Be ready,' says Bill, in a low voice, an' bendin' forward, he switched on the current.

"'Lor', guv'nor, how we picked up pace. I felt them bloomin' wire cables contractin' an' then expandin' an' the oars seemed to work like lightnin'. All I had to do was to keep hold of 'em an' see I at the other ends kept in the water.

"We simply flew past the other boats an' my arms were achin' through holdin' on to the oars.

"'Slow down a bit,' I says to Bill, who was grinnin' all over his face, 'We're clear of the others now, an' they'll never catch us.'

"'I can't slow her,' says Bill. 'I can only stop her an' trust to your rowin', an' it ain't safe to do that yet.'

"Well, guv'nor, I saw we should arouse suspicion, as the bloomin' engine, havin' got into stride, we were goin' quicker than ever, but I daren't let go for fear of wot the blanked engine would do to me if I hadn't got the oars to steady it.

"Then, with me cussin' an' the smile dyin' from Bill's face as the thing started to kick up a row just as we neared the judge's boat, he leant forward and pinched a lever. The next moment he was yelling like mad, unable to let go as the electric current had got him.

"'Look out, you fool!' yells someone, an' the next moment we went crash into the judge's boat. You see, Bill, bein' held to the machine, couldn't steer, an' me, bein' afraid to leave go of the oars, had to keep on rowin', an' the next thing I knew was that I was in the sea, an' presently me an' Bill was hauled into the judge's boat just as the other competitors began to come up, our boat with her bows stove in havin' gone to the bottom.

"'Hard luck!' says a genial-faced cove wot was in the boat. 'I can understand any steersman losin' his head w'en he saw a man rowin' as you rowed!.

"I thanked him quite polite, but I saw the judge was mighty suspicious, an' Bill saw it, too, an' there was the boat wot had gone to the bottom to think about, so, after all the competitors had been placed, an' the judge an' his pals were rowed ashore an' got into a motor-car to go back to the pier, me an' Bill went back to our lodgings by a back way an' collected our traps.

"There was only one thing that comforted poor old Mill as we went back by the express to London, an' that was that the landlady, bein' at the regatta, there hadn't been any need to settle up."

MUNICIPALIANA.

Chicago's Housing Problem.

Recommendations looking toward improving housing conditions in Chicago and preventing the development of worse conditions than now exist are under consideration by the housing committee of the Association of Commerce. The recommendations were made by the committee's expert, John C. Kennedy. "Dollars spent now," he says, "will prevent the development of a tenement house condition that it will take millions to eradicate if allowed to go on unchecked to the condition that some of the older cities like New York and London find confronting them now." It is cited that New York annually appropriates $800,000 for the tenement house department alone, while Chicago spends almost nothing.

Three definite lines of action are proposed, first the establishment of a new buildings inspection department, in connection with the city building department, whose purpose it will be to inspect buildings under construction in congested districts and see that they comply with the ordinances; second employ a corps of inspectors to be known as the old buildings department, under supervision of the Health Department, regularly to inspect all old buildings that are occupied and see that the ordinances are obeyed; and with these departments to have a complete system of records showing the number and location of all tenement houses, with their descriptions in detail; third, a campaign for more stringent laws affecting the building of tenements.

"We do not need tenements in Chicago," said Mr. Kennedy, "because there is plenty of room here. And it is far better to spend thousands to prevent than millions to rehabilitate."

San Jose's Bath House.

Plans have been nearly completed at San Jose for a $60,000 bath house in Alum Rock Park. The building will be over 100 feet wide and 160 feet in length, and will contain 50 tubs and a plunge 75x90 feet. The Park Commissioners have visited several of the best baths in the state, among them the one at Paso Robles and the Lurline in San Francisco. To get further ideas on building an equipment W. L. Prussia, who has planned to leave for the east in about three weeks, will visit a large number of the important baths in western New York, among them Stonybrook and Crystal Springs. The intention is to begin work on the foundation of the structure early in August. One of the most important moves being made at this time, however, is the development of eight new springs, some of which were active up to the time of the earthquake in 1868, but since that time have not been in prime condition. The plans call for the opening up of all the available springs in the park, and when completed a voluminous supply of the various waters will be at the disposal of the public.

Why San Antonio Celebrates.

As a result as well as a cause of its growth, San Antonio, Tex., recently found itself in possession of numerous organizations of which the purpose was to promote the commercial and industrial welfare of the city. These were all well-intentioned, and, in their way, they were all useful, but they were frequently at cross purposes, and because they did not always pull together they sometimes pulled apart. Early this year the general welfare of San Antonio seemed to demand the consolidation of these bodies, and they became one by amalgamating with the Chamber of Commerce. Thus, by unifying the efforts and concentrating the activities of its citizenship, San Antonio was able to take up and promptly to dispose of matters that had long been hanging fire.

Within a few weeks following the consolidation referred to, the Chamber of Commerce was called upon to raise a bonus for the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf Railway, the purpose of which was to bring the city nearer Aransas harbor. This new port is 100 miles closer than Galveston and its development is expected to lower San Antonio's freight rates. The amount necessary to promote the speedy completion of the work, $115,000, was raised promptly. This was scarcely out of the way before the Chamber of Commerce raised in its own behalf, that is for its own maintenance, through public subscriptions, the sum of $160,000. Then, about two weeks ago was begun a campaign to raise $250,000 for the San Antonio, Rockport & Mexican Railway, and this also has been brought to a successful end.

In consideration of these achievements the Chamber of Commerce of San Antonio has felt called upon to exhibit some special evidence of its satisfaction, and it has done so by giving a luncheon in which many of the leading citizens were participants.

St. Louis' Charity Bodies.

The Charities Bureau of the Business Men's League of St. Louis will shortly issue a list of the charitable societies and institutions which the league's Committee on Charities indorses as worthy, efficiently conducted and deserving of support of the league's members.

The list contains the names of just fifty charity organizations. In St. Louis are several hundred institutions and societies engaged in charitable work to a greater or less extent and the small number of these which appear on the list makes it notable.

Some organizations have already heard they are not on the list and have appealed to the bureau for hearings. Some were left off because their answers to a list of questions submitted by the bureau were not satisfactory in some particular.

A directory of charities published by the St. Louis Provident Association last year contains 161 societies or institutions. This list was compiled with reference to the standing of the different organizations and the fact that the league has indorsed less than one-third of this number indicates the censorship has been rigidly applied.

As an instance of how indiscriminate much charity has been the league received a report from the head of a large department store that examination of its books showed that in the course of a few years it had donated money or merchandise to about 1200 societies or individuals who solicited in the name of charity.

An investigation showed that only a small portion of these donations were for recognized societies. Many of them went to ladies aid societies and obscure organizations who are not in the general charity field at all.

Dallas Want Market House.

The establishment of a market house in Dallas is a live question with the people of that city. At the present time the farmers and merchants handling truck are in the habit of assembling on Pearl street where a business of considerable magnitude has been built up. Houston has had a market house for many years and only recently voted on a $150,000 addition. Dallas therefore believes that a good market house in its limits would prove a great encouragement to truck gardening, and that all the available lands adjacent to the city would soon be occupied for this purpose. It looks as if there will soon be something doing.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Rear-Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow, commander of the first division of the Atlantic fleet, is slated to become commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet within three months, according to reports current at the Navy Department. Rear-Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, now in supreme command of the Atlantic fleet, has seen twenty-seven years of sea duty, and is ready to retire from command. He has been at the head of the Atlantic fleet since June, 1911.

Maj. Webster Withers of Liberty, Mo., lately presented his resignation to the City Council after that body had passed an ordinance vacating a street to be used in a park driveway system, after he had vetoed it.

The most picturesque character at Sea Girt is Sam Gordon, the negro bodyguard, who has been doorkeeper and attendant for New Jersey's Governors for the last twenty-eight years. Whether blacking Woodrow Wilson's boots or bringing a glass of ice water to sylphlike little Miss McAdoo on the inclosed piazza of the summer Capitol, Sam's dignity is perfect, his geniality unfailing and his manners Chesterfieldian.

The fascination of the tropical jungle has so strong a hold upon Russell Millward, explorer and big game hunter that, although he returned only three weeks ago from the interior of Guatemala after a narrow escape from death, he will start again for that country next week. Millward's home is in Cincinnati.

In the past two years, Millward has traveled more than 6000 miles through the uncharted interior of Central America.

The Harvest.

Now is the time, O sewers of the grain,
To reap the fruitage of the early year,
When days grow dark with fleece of woolly rain,
Now with a needle to hem the greasing brow,
Of your hard labor upon him and plain.

Slowly the day declines; the wind is still,
With no frosty stories. Tell it done.
Harvest the rest to skim the
Only the valiant husbandmen can tell;
But here, as in the winter bottle of
What, O ye sewers, if ye saved not well?

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

AREN'T we getting most too progressive and modern? Here comes the secretary of the American Institute of Sacred Literature, Miss Georgia L. Chamberlain of Chicago, suggesting that the prayer of our childhood "Now I Lay Me" isn't just the proper sort of prayer for the children of this Twentieth Century. She argues that the expression, "If I should die before I wake" gives the child the suggestion of fear in that it does not understand death and does not want to die and may have more immediate needs which should be developed in daily life.

Miss Chamberlain is a profound scholar in the realm of sacred literature. I recollect an occasion years ago when I sought an interview with the late Dr. Harper at that time president of the University of Chicago and recognized as a biggest Biblical student. Like many another great man, Dr. Harper was extremely reticent about talking for the newspapers. He sat uncomfortably on the edge of his chair I remember, and, in spite of my questions and suggestions and interrogations remained to all intents and purposes practically mute. Then he blurted out like a timid schoolboy in desperation: "Go talk to my secretary, Miss Chamberlain; anything she says for me will be all right," and so he was interviewed by proxy as it were.

Since the death of Dr. Harper Miss Chamberlain has been secretary of the above mentioned institute and she has just given a lecture at Chautauqua, N. Y., on "The Religious Education of Children" in the course of which she gave utterance to the above criticism of that little prayer which has come down through the ages and has clustered about it more sacred memories than any other recollection of childhood. Its simple directness and all-inclusive petition seems a perfect a model for a child's prayer, as does the Lord's Prayer, given in the scriptures as a model, "after this manner," for adults.

The little "Now I Lay Me" prayer does not by any means exclude more personal petitions as the child grows older but to substitute any other would seem sacrilege—"It was my mother's prayer—a've said it every night of mine life" murmured Ian McLaren's doctor of the old school as he lay dying, and the mind of many another as he reaches the end of the road home turns back to "pray the Lord my soul to take."

Miss Helyn O. Henry,

Who will tell of her 25,000-mile tour of the Pacific.

To the Orient and Antipodes.

Miss Helyn Osborne Henry, daughter of Rev. J. Q. A. Henry the well-known evangelist, has prepared a series of twelve travel talks and illustrated lectures concerning her year's tour of the Pacific made in company with her parents just previous to Mrs. Henry's fatal illness. During the coming year Miss Henry will be heard at women's clubs, before church and college societies on the sights and scenes of this 25,000 mile journey to the eastern and southern hemispheres. The slides used have been presented to her by the different governments and comprise picturesque views of peoples, places and pursuits in the Orient and the Antipodes.

Miss Henry was educated in the public schools of America and afterward studied at Bournemouth and Redford (Eng.,) Lausanne (Switzerland) and Berlin. She has travelled widely with her father and would accompany Dr. Henry on his forthcoming tour through Canada and England were it not for her lecture engagements here. This week she leaves for Portland, Oregon, her birthplace which she has not revisited since early childhood, and will return in September.

Church Woman's Welcome.

The Women's Aid Society of the First Methodist Church welcomed home the president, Mrs. S. P. Mulford, last Monday afternoon from her prolonged visit in the East. Accompanied by Mr. Mulford, she went to Minneapolis the first of May to attend the General Conference, after which they proceeded to their old home in Ohio. Owing to an unfortunate accident Mrs. Mulford broke her arm which delayed their return for several weeks, the couple arriving home last Saturday. The parlors of First Church were crowded with members of the society and visitors, all of whom joined in a hearty welcome to the popular president who promised, at the next meeting, to give a detailed account of her trip. Dr. Locke, pastor of the church, dropped in for a few minutes and made a little speech full of pleasantries and Mrs. Nave, wife of Chaplain O. J. Nave, recited humorously in dialect and Will Carleton selections to the delight of her listeners. Music, both vocal and instrumental, added further to the entertainment. The society voted to hold its annual picnic on Thursday, August 22 at Sycamore Park.

Germless Toys for Children.

The prevalence of infantile paralysis, not alone in Los Angeles, but all over the country, is inspiring more and more methods of fighting germs and counteracting disease. The house cat is doomed, the family hen is dangerous and the latest comes from a St. Louis children's hospital, where clay dolls and toys will hereafter take the place of the hitherto stuffed dolls, teddy-bears and animals which Dr. Wayne Smith, superintendent, has pronounced unsanitary germ distributers. Following his orders juvenile patients will be amused with clay dolls and paper toys, which will be destroyed every night and created afresh every morning.

She Has Created a New Job.

Miss E. C. McCalmont, former superintendent of the Civil Hospital at Manila, and supervising nurse of the Bureau of Health in the Philippines, is back in this country and working at a brand new job, which she has invented herself—that of hospital specialist and consultant. She has set up an office in Brooklyn, N. Y., where schemes worked out to the smallest details for the reorganization of hospitals, interior, exterior, appliances, equipment, etc., that shall emphasize the fact that hospitals should be built and operated for the benefit of the patient, where sound-proof rooms prevent outside noise from reaching the sick bed; where diet kitchens are so planned and adapted as to give efficient service and obviate the possibility of cold meals, which are the bete noir of many hospitals; where ward patients may be given better care and where the problem of ventilation may be so solved that the disagreeable "hospital odor" which invariably inoculates such institutions, may be done away with—as has been already accomplished in a few hospitals.

Miss McCalmont designed a thoroughly down-to-date hospital for Cebu, the second city in the Philippines, and since starting out in her new job in the United States has been actively advancing her opinions and plans for reform in magazine articles and lectures.

It takes a woman, after all, to plan the hundred-and-one little details of comfort and convenience that appeal to common sense and everyone who has had experience as a hospital patient will appreciate Miss McCalmont's suggestion that the windows in a hospital should be cut low enough for reclining patients to see out of them. Nothing pleases a convalescent more than being able to look into the street or the world outside and see what is going on when one is imprisoned within the four walls of a hospital. Yet, in most such institutions this is impossible to anyone in a reclining position—indeed, in a certain New York hospital the windows were cut so high that platforms had to be placed in order to permit the patients to see out.

Miss McCalmont believes that work like hers will be taken up by many other women, with the result that the hospital of the future will be run, not only on a businesslike basis, but with far greater regard for the comfort and welfare of the patients.

DEARER BABIES.

Bribes to Parents to Have Larger Families.

BY CICELY HAMILTON.

FRANCE, as we have all been told, has a rapidly falling birth-rate; and France, it would appear, is becoming excited and nervous about it. In this, however, she does not stand alone; other nations—most civilized nations—have falling birth-rates and are getting excited and nervous. Prophets and wiseacres in many quarters of the world have taken to shaking their heads over the inevitable consequences of a decline in population; in much the same doleful fashion as the prophets and wiseacres of a generation or two ago used to shake their heads over the unchecked increase thereof.

If I remember rightly, the first modern attempt to institute such a system of monetary reward for parentage was made some five or six years ago in an American State Legislature. It was a somewhat timid attempt, and cannot be said to have erred on the side of extravagance. Distressed at the local lack of infant population, one of the members of the aforementioned legislative body was moved to propose that the sum of one dollar should be presented, from the public funds, to the parents of each child born within the confines of the State. Whether the proposal was carried or rejected I have not been able to ascertain, but even if it did become the law of the land, I should be surprised to hear that its results were in any way epoch-making.

Matters have advanced during the last five or six years, however; and it is evident that, in accordance with the economic law of supply and demand, the infant human being has gone up in value. The latest proposal emanates from France, where, if all accounts are to be believed, the scarcity of babies is most pronounced—and is much more reckless and far-reaching than the tentative American suggestion above recorded. Careful and scientific inquiry has revealed that one of the causes of the lamented and progressive decline in the birth-rate is the natural, if regrettable, reluctance of the owner of house property to let his property out to the possessor of numerous olive plants. Olive branches may enable a man to speak with his enemies in the gate, but they have been found to damage the wainscot, fight each other on the stairs, and uplift their childish voices to the great discomfort of the neighbors. And it is for these reasons, not from any deliberate desire on the part of the landlord for the rapid extinction of the race, that children, like dogs, are not esteemed desirable tenants and are made unwelcome in apartments.

NEW FRENCH PLAN.

In order to remedy this disastrous state of things it is intended to erect in Paris blocks of tenement houses whose occupants, so far from being reproached for the possession of encumbrances, will have a quarter's rent remitted upon each and every occasion upon which they present the state with a future citizen. The new baby, in short, will pay during the first three months of its earthly life for the shelter and accommodation of its entire family; while, should it turn out to be twins, it will presumably provide them with free quarters for double that period. Exactly how much this payment represents I am unable, through lack of information, to specify; but I conclude that it represents considerable more than the gratuity of four shillings and twopence suggested by the pioneer American legislator, very few flats in large centers of population being obtainable at a rental of sixteen and eighteen pence per annum. Manifestly, then, my contention that the value of the infant has of late increased is correct. The baby, like petrol and the cost of living, has advanced in price, and should the advance continue at the same rapid rate, we may look forward to the day, not far distant, when the proud parents of a new-born citizen will consider their achievement inadequately rewarded by the gift of three acres and a cow.

It will be interesting to watch as the years go by the measure of success attending on deliberate and organized efforts to bribe parents into producing large families. Personally, I am not ashamed to admit that I hope the said measure of success will not be very striking; not, at any rate, in those older lands where the struggle for existence is already sufficiently acute. It is true that the Bishop of London a little while ago found occasion for public regret in the present day lack of numerous families of healthy, happy-hearted children; but it is more than possible that in many households the presence of a numerous family would result in its members being anything but healthy and happy-hearted—for the simple reason that they would be short of cubic space and food. Two lusty, well-fed children, one imagines, are of more value to themselves and the community than many sickly starvelings, and as long as men and women have to bid against each other and and underbid each other for the work that means the bread whereby they live there seems no particular reason for packing the world more tightly.

The human being is like any other useful commodity: cheap when he is over-abundant, valued when there are not too many of him about. If the human baby has begun to go up in price it is chiefly because there are not so many of him about as formerly; because in some quarter at least he is beginning to be prized and treasured as something of a rarity. And were the human baby able to form and express an opinion, I am sure that he, as the person principally concerned, would announce his satisfaction with the improved state of things and explain that he preferred not to be too plentiful.

WASHINGTON DRIFT.

Amphitheater at Arlington.

It is now for the House to determine whether or not a memorial amphitheater, to cost $750,000, shall be built at the Arlington National cemetery, the Senate yesterday afternoon having given its approval to the bill directing the erection of the building.

Some objections to the bill have been raised from time to time in the Senate, but when Senator Sutherland, chairman of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and in charge of the measure, asked its passage, yesterday afternoon, not a protesting voice was heard and the bill went through in the time it took to put the routine motions.

The construction work is to be under the direction of a commission composed of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the superintendent of the Capitol and Ivory G. Kimball, representing the Grand Army of the Republic. The bill directs the commission to enter into contracts for the building to cost not more than $750,000, and the money is to be provided in annual appropriation bills.

The plans for the amphitheater were prepared under the direction of a commission appointed by Congress several years ago. They call for an amphitheater that will seat about 5000 people and afford standing room for many more in the colonnade.

Under the colonnade the architects have planned for the placing of a crypt, in which should be buried the distinguished men of the nation that merit special honors. This feature will raise the amphitheater to the dignity of a Westminster Abbey or a Pantheon. Under the colonnade and upon the base of the building could be placed inscriptions marking each separate crypt, while memorial busts or portrait statues could be placed in the colonnade, somewhat as has so frequently been done in the famous campo santos of Europe.

In the amphitheater, by special direction in the bill, there will be provided a chapel for the holding of funeral services when the entire amphitheater is not used. And there will also be a room where trophy flags and other objects of interest to visitors and appropriate for the cemetery can be exhibited.

Government Buys Chips.

Powder puffs, poker chips and music rolls are being furnished members of the House out of the House contingent fund, which means that the people are paying for them, according to Representative Frank B. Willis of Ohio, who proposes to ask Congress the reason why.

"In examining the record of expenditures from the fund, I find that these articles are being charged up by members to the government," said Mr. Willis. "I intend to introduce a resolution asking for an explanation. It doesn't seem to me proper that the people should be so generous as to provide these little luxuries."

Would Sell Out Trusts.

Senator Bailey of Texas, during a debate on the excise tax bill, unfolded to the Senate his plan for dealing with trusts. He would neither regulate nor reform corporations convicted of violating the anti-trust law, but destroy such corporations by selling their property and distributing the proceeds among the stockholders.

This discussion arose out of an amendment to the excise bill, which was offered by Senator Hitchcock, who wanted to tax heavily the cigarette output of a concern in excess of a specified number, in order to break up monopoly by making it possible for numerous small concerns to compete with the larger factories.

Senator Bailey deplored this character of anti-trust legislation. He said that he would reach the trusts through a simple amendment to the anti-trust law, which would authorize the court to appoint a receiver for the property of the convicted corporation, sell it at public auction, and then distribute the proceeds among the stockholders. That, he said, would deter men from carrying on commercial oppression and extortion through monopoly. But for a nation to say before the world, he contended, that it was unable to pass a law to reach the trusts, without doing violence to the theory of government, was the tragedy of the century.

Pneumatic Tube System.

A pneumatic tube system will be installed to connect the Capitol, Senate and House office buildings, Congressional Library, government printing office, at a cost of about $250,000, if an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill adopted by the Senate yesterday is accepted by the House.

The tube is to be of large size, sufficient to handle the documents, parcels and mail sacks that are usually transported from one to another of this group of buildings. The project has been under consideration by the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds for some time, and it was favorably impressed with the scheme.

Senator Heyburn, a member of that committee, offered the plan as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill, and Senator Warren, in charge of the bill, accepted it.

Citizen H. O. Thomas of Brockton, Mass., just to prove that the young fellows are not entitled to all the glory, did a high kick at Fletcher Webster Post (G.A.R.) headquarters and touched the disk at six feet six inches. Citizen Thomas was 72 years old June 29, and is remarkably agile for one who has passed the allotted span.

ONLY A CHINAMAN.

BY ROBERT SPEED.

Luey was his name, and he was bent, brown, and wrinkled. But little intelligence showed in his stolid face; none would have guessed that an ambition dogged his shuffling feet.

Not from passage of years alone was that leathery face so pinched and drawn. Those lines and seams were less the mark of time than of grinding labor on hands and knees, pulling persistent weeds from his seedbeds; of toilsome days swinging a heavy hoe among his vegetables under the hot sun, plodding behind the slow-moving cultivator between the green rows, and driving his horse, as lean, as dejected as himself, through the streets of the neighboring towns selling the produce of his garden, starting at daybreak, returning long after dark. For his daily fare, too, he allowed himself but a scanty measure of boiled rice, unflavored and unsweetened, with occasionally, an unsalable vegetable.

Other gardeners and laundrymen of his acquaintance went to the city Saturday nights and Sundays, and there at places kept by sleek, well-fed men of their own race played fan-tan, stoically watching their meager savings raked in by the smooth gamblers. Not so Luey. He had an ambition, and it was nothing so foolish as to beat the professional gamblers at their own game.

All this that his ambition might be the sooner realized. Life was hard; but always with him was the thought that the end of each dreary day brought nearer the culmination of his dream, his return to China, to the pink-cheeked little wife and the black-eyed baby. It was years since he had seen them, how many he had forgotten; the plump brown baby was a big boy now, the blooming young wife almost middle-aged, but he scarcely considered that. In his fond mind he saw them still as they were when he left them for the wonderland, America.

And now, at last, was come the time to which Luey had looked forward so long. For a hundred dollars he sold to Ah Ling the hut made of packing-cases and oil cans, the rickety wagon, the scarcely less rickety horse, and the few farm tools. This added to the sum hidden beneath the floor of the shanty would pay his passage back to China with enough over to keep himself and family in comfort the rest of their lives.

Two more days till the steamer left; what should he do with his spare time—he who had never known a leisure hour before Why not gather abalones? The tide was to be unusually low the following morning. Abalones sold well; the restaurant-keeper on the corner bought their flesh for soup; and the curio dealer next door purchased the shells to polish and sell to the tourists. Perhaps he could add another dollar to his hoard.

Daylight next morning found Luey hurrying along toward a lonesome part of the beach where people seldom went and where, consequently, there was more chance of finding the much-sought abalones. In one hand he carried a bag for his spoils, in the other a piece of wagon spring to pry the muscular shell-fish from the rocks. And ever, as he trudged along, there rose before him the vision of a pink-cheeked little wife and a plump, black-eyed baby.

By sunrise he was at work. The abalones were more plentiful than he had expected; his eyes glittered as he dropped into the bag one after another of the saucer-like shells, some nearly as large as dinner-plates, with. inside, the shrinking, leathery creatures helpless once torn from the rock. Soon the tide turned and the waves, running in, swirled, sometimes to his knees as he climbed about the slippery rocks. Before long it would be too high; but he had done a good morning's work.

A fine, large shell far down the side of a jagged rock caught his eye. Perhaps he could reach it in the brief space when the wave ran out and the water was at its lowest

Now! A precious moment was spent clambering down the rock. With a quick thrust he inserted his steel lever beneath the shell, which was raised slightly that the warm, bubbling water might pass under, and gave a quick pry. Usually this dislodged an abalone; but his present quarry was of unusual size and strength and resisted stubbornly. He gave another wrench; but now his lever was slipping out, and the water was rising again. Was he to lose so fine an abalone, the largest of them all? With an exclamation and a forgetfulness of possible consequences Luey plunged his arm below the surface and seized the edge of the shell. At that moment with a rush the incoming wave struck him. What followed was over in a flash: the slipping of his feet from their precarious hold; the dropping of the lever into the depths to clutch at the slippery rock; the closing upon his fingers with a vise-like grip of the giant abalone; the gurgling cry where there was none to hear; and the great billows, rolling steadily in were soon piled high above the jagged rock.

At low tide next day a duck hunter saw something blue floating among the rocks. It was a corner of Luey's cotten blouse. The hunter pried up the big abalone, and laid its victim, not untenderly, upon the beach.

"Poor devil," he said, "he's only a Chinaman, but what a death! I'll send for the Coroner."

NATURE STORIES.

Where Are the Birds?

[New York Evening Post:] Bird-lovers in northern Europe have been greatly exercised over the lessening number of swallows that each spring brings from the south. Full testimony on the point has been brought forward in the columns of the Spectator, and the phenemenon has been observed in France, as well. Explanations are forthcoming in plenty. One is that the cold winds of April must have destroyed large numbers of the birds during the passage of the Alps, and that others were blown out to sea. The Spectator itself believes that the scarcity of bees has something to do with the dearth of swallows. Then, again, there is the indiscriminate slaughter of swallows that is carried on in Italy for food and millinery. A philosophical Frenchman, however, has adduced the theory that the causes which formerly compelled the birds to leave their winter homes in North Africa are fast disappearing. The occupation of North Africa by the white man has been followed by the reclamation of large tracts of desert land, and the birds are no longer compelled to go north for the companionship of human beings, or the sustenance of grain fields and farmyard.

Habits of Game Birds.

[Outing:] I was riding along the shore of Great Bear Lake i.. Utah one afternoon and, coming suddenly over a rise of ground, surprised a grebe in the edge of the tules. She swam into the lake, turning and calling repeatedly. Then two little grebes appeared and, swimming low with only their head and back visible, hurried after their mother. As they overtook her, each one reached out and, catching the feathers of her back in their beak, they drew themselves alongside and quickly huddled under her wing, completely hidden. Had I not been a spectator to the act, I should never have suspected her of carrying two little "stowaways" as she hurried off.

Bird That Builds Fence of Thorns.

[Ave Maria:] The little brown wren of Central America builds a nest that should belong to a bird five or six times as large as it is; and, to prevent other birds from disturbing its home while it is away, it builds as a protection a fence of thorns leading to it. When Mme. Wren looks for a home site, she selects a tree where two branches lie parallel about two feet apart. Across these two branches she and her mate lay a little platform about five feet in length. Near the trunk of the tree is built a dome-shaped nest, about a foot in height. The sides of this nest are all interwoven with thorns. Next a covered passageway is built from the nest to the end of the platform in as crooked a manner as possible. Thorns stick out in all directions, just as in the nest itself; and every few inches on the inside of the tunnel little fences of thorns are placed in such a way that any creature not familiar with the passageway will get badly pricked. Finally, across the outer end of the tunnel is a movable gateway of thorns.

An Unusual Hen.

[New York Tribune:] Marshall Hatch of Norwell, Mass., has a hen that is 21 years old this summer and still lays eggs.

"I know she is 21," says Marshall, "because she was one of a setting of eggs that was set by my mother, and she's been dead twenty-one years this summer."

Belva Lockwood is the name of the hen that has laid eggs regularly up to this year. Last year she laid eleven and when she was at the coy age of 16 she was producing 250 eggs a year with the enthusiasm and industry of young broilers of two years.

"The only trouble with her," says Marshall, "is that she's a little blind. She seems to feel her way to her feed."

Belva spent her winter under the kitchen stove.

Cow's Tail as a Fishhook.

[Chicago Record Herald.] Seth Pelton, who has a boarding-house at Sackett Lake, N. Y., is showing his visitors a live pickerel which became his property through a freak performance of the fish itself.

Pelton drove his cows to the lake for water. While they were drinking and wading about, a hungry pickerel jumped from the water at a fly on the flank of one of the cows.

The teeth of the fish became entangled in the cow's tail. The frightened animal bounded for shore and landed the pickerel on dry ground. The fish weighed more than three pounds.

MRS. NEWELL SANDERS.

Wife of the Senator from Tennessee Is a Recent Addition to the Capital Coterie—Was a Classmate of Her Husband in the State University of Indiana.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, August 12.—Senator Sanders from Tennessee came to Washington in the early spring as the successor of that much loved and deeply lamented statesman, "Bob" Taylor. There are few more trying circumstances than to be placed in contrast with such thoroughly popular people as the late Senator Taylor and his charming young wife. But the lovely personality, the frank and cordial manner and the recognized worth of the new senator and his wife have attracted many friends and have assured Mrs. Sanders the place which is the inheritance of the old commonwealth of Tennessee. She has been among those who have remained here the entire summer. Dividing her time in sight-seeing, regular attendance in the Senate Gallery and getting acquainted wit hher further associates, she has passed the period pleasantly and usefully.

"Though Mr. Sanders and I are not native of our State and in that respect I believe we form a large proportion of the legislators and their wives," said Mrs. Sanders, "We have resided there for the past 25 years and we are entirely devoted to its interests. I am finding Washington a delightful spot and enjoying everything as the newcomer will. I am, however, familiar with the city and have been here very often and found many friends awaiting me when we arrived last spring. My home is in Tennessee, one of the garden spots of the earth and one of the most interesting from a historical and literary viewpoint. Lookout Mountain is an old friend and all the memories clustering about, are tales dear to the Tennessean. All about lie glorious vales and dainty lakes and glades, while beyond rise the famous peaks known to the world through the writers who have made the region famous. The tourist can take an interurban electric car in the heart of Chattanooga and in a short time arrive at Lookout Inn. On the road he may see the pretty little suburb of Saint Elmo clinging to the foothills, the name commemorative that Augusta Evans wrote her novel while living near the mountain. Above Lookout Mountain with its rocky peaks throwing deep shadows over the valley as early as four o'clock in the summer afternoon. You can go up the mountain on the railway by the more leisurely method of driving and both ways have an equal appeal. It is a long drive, but the scenic vistas offer rest and interest by the way. There are many beautiful parks and regions to be visited, such as the Sunset Park where a large hotel with verandahs affords a view not to be forgotten of sunset scenes. There is the Garden of the Gods and more varied than the Garden of the same name near Denver, with its rocks and the curious peaks known as the Siamese twins. A wonderful natural bridge may be found, rushing streams and leaping cascades are features of the landscape from the valley up to the bald face of Lookout Mountain. The bold crags and rocky cliffs attract attention and from any one may see the entire field of the battlefield above the clouds. The Observation Rock, the home of the Confederates are in a good state of preservation and the ruins of the fortifications where so many of the heroes of those great battles were engaged, all as an absorbing interest centering around the exact location of union and confederate troops at the battle of Chickamauga, the efforts by which the patriotic societies have accomplished definitely every point of interest permanently marked is one of the most successful things in this particular line, and just when interest in the affairs of the States has been revived by the 50th anniversary of the great conflicts, the mountains and valleys have been visited by thousands of tourists. Lookout Mountain, 1000 feet below Point of Chickamauga bluff is 2126 feet above the valley. The terrible conflict of the battery attracts much attention as the spot where Colonel Alexander shelled the city.

Mrs. Sanders is a conservative type of the progressive in every sense, the pet of feminine activities in a native of Bloomington, Ind., one of the State university towns. After finishing the high school course she entered the Institute of Indiana. Here she met Newell Sanders, then working his way through college. The friendship of college days ripened into love and the very next year Miss Sanders took his name and became Mrs. Sanders. She had not continued her studies but had turned to home duties. The young couple left Bloomington a few years after graduation. They had been very successful years but the call of a wider field of activity was heard in the southeastern part of the country. Farm implements attracted his attention in the American market. He was the first skilled plow maker and he is now one of the largest plow-makers in this country. The history of the development of that portion of the country which borders on the Ohio river has been an interesting one and the graduations of Mr. Sanders has been an inspiration and a help to his fellow-townsmen. Mrs. Sanders has practically been a helpmeet to her husband in his political career and he set a high value upon her opinions and her views quick to comprehend the significance of the political situations that arise and the Senator and Mrs. Sanders are favorably known to members of the Republican party. They have aided all along in that organization of the State in the reconstruction of the Democratic party in their home. They have an excellent reputation both of Tennessee for fine hospitality and she is in her keeping with the high standard of a home which has been set for Washington society. It is likely that they will not be here for another year. In the event of their return in the fall it is understood that the Senator will not be a candidate for re-election. The Senator has a handsome home next door to the New Willard, but the Capitol, but the Senator's family have selected a home in the southeast part of the city. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sanders delight in entertaining and the WORST NOVELS OF THE YEAR.

TEN BAD NOVELS WHICH ARE STANDARD TYPES.

Survey of the Year's Poorest Literary Output, With an Indication and Criticism of the Tendencies of Certain Modern Schools of Fiction.

From the best to the worst! A long cry, indeed; and between these two extremes lies most of our literary output. As yet we have little to be proud of in our fiction. It tires a critic's discriminatory faculties to unearth ten really first-class novels during a season. Last Sunday I recorded in this column a tentative selection of such a ten, but it required many long hours of mental sweating to complete the list.

It is trite to say that the great trouble underlying our writing is commercialism; but it is true. The author today with a serious and praiseworthy novel has difficulty in finding a publisher. Mediocrity is the ideal. The masses are necessarily the publisher's target. And a novel, in order to stand a good chance of being published, must pander to the taste of the masses. It must be subservient to their whims and their prejudices. It must caress their primitive ethics. It must seek to justify them in their faulty logic. It must present them only with those things which their untutored minds can readily assimilate. There must be no innovation, no stimulation to mentation, no controversion of their pious platitudes, no insistence on social standards other than the lofty Puritanism which governs the average entrepreneur. No heterodoxy for the plain people—only wind music and piety, slobber-gobble and platitudes, anemic love making and falsifications, boudoir morals and happy endings, provincialism and conventionality, superstition and obvious conclusions, tallow and soft soap, a soothing, a caressing, a beneficent massaging of the obvious—these are the open sesames to the proletarian pocketbook, the darling requisites of popularity. And let it be stated that the author who deals in these commodities will not starve to death. He (or she) will be feted and dined and made opulent.

This is why the novel of ideas, the novel which strives to interpret life in all its different aspects, the novel which endeavors to arrive at logical conclusions through that system of syllogism set down by Whatley and Mill and Aristotle—those loathsome intellectuals, those vainglorious and aloof savants—has such uphill work in America. Public taste, witch-hazeled and lubricated by newspaper reviewers, who are obviously influenced by the demands of the business office, has had little chance to develop. The sunskulls—always in the majority—have hotfooted it to the book stalls for the latest romantic accomplishment of the sweat-shop scriveners whose literary coat tails are always flapping in accordance with the popular breeze.

THE RESULT.

Good writers—writers capable of serious effort—have perverted their talents in order to meet the demand. But the worst of this commercialism of literature in America is not that it has discouraged to a great extent the best efforts of the best men, but that it has developed an enormous literary school of mediocrities—men and women who write seriously the best that is in them but who rise no higher than the mean level.

The newly intellectual have severely criticised Henry James for dodging Americana. But who can blame him? Whistler, too (to drop for a moment into the realm of painting) shook the dust of America from his handsome feet and installed himself in England. Ezra Pound, also, found it more congenial in London.

Something perhaps is to be said in behalf of the publishers. The fault does not lie with them. They are merely shrewd commercial men who neither read nor care for good books, but who handle literature in very much the same state of mind that Mr. Fels handles his naptha soap. Pick out the twenty best novels of this year, and I doubt if you will select one which has adequately repaid either the author, the publisher, or the book-seller.

LACK OF CRITICS.

The real trouble lies in the inefficiency of American critics, and in the difficulty which a competent critic has in getting a foothold with any American periodical. The five publications in America which are issuing the most honest and capable literary criticisms carry little book advertising; and it is this fact alone which enables them to maintain a high critical standard. Before there is any general appreciation of art or literature, or any stimulation of public taste, there must be competent criticism. The new dramed was ushed in, not by a few great dramatists, but by a campaign of intelligent critical propaganda which made the advent of the modern dramatist possible. And so it must be with the novel of ideas in America. Public taste must first be enlightened; and the moment there is a demand for better books, we will have them.

In lining up the ten worst novels of the year, it must not be thought that I have been actuated by any desire to carp. Far from it, indeed. In fact, my purpose has been a constructive one. We have in America certain classes of novelists, and for the sake of classification I will note a few of the most prominent ones:

(1) The passementerie school.
(2) The pseudo-psychological school.
(3) The neuro-erotic school.
(4) The quasi-romantic school.
(5) The political propaganda school.
(6) The provincial school.
(7) The super-sentimental school.
(8) The counterfeit moral school.
(9) The supernatural school.
(10) The stop-look-listen school.

THE TEN WORST.

In making my choice of the ten worst novels of the year, I have striven to find the worst example of these ten different types of novel. To be sure, the spring and summer season have produced many novels of downright atrocity, of execrable construction, with padded dummies hopping through the pages for characters in novels full of bad grammar and gaudy adjectives, novels at which the cognoscenti revolt. But, here is the list of ten, in order of the above schools:

(1) "The Guests of Hercules," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson.
(2) "Spiritual Curiosities," by Marian Cox.
(3) "Mastering Flame," anonymous.
(4) "Halcyone," by Elinor Glyn.
(5) "The Citadel," by Samuel Merwin.
(6) "A Hoosier Chronicle," by Meredith Nicholson.
(7) "Through the Postern Gate," by Florence L. Barclay.
(8) "The Street Called Straight," by Basil King.
(9) "The Body of His Desire," by Mrs. Campbell Praed.
(10) "Five Thousand an Hour," by George Randolph Chester.

Perhaps, a word of explanation is needed here.

"LIGHT" FICTION.

In the passementerie school I class those books obviously and cunningly designed to stimulate the pallid emotions of the matinee girl; to titillate her spinal cord; put sweet tastes in her mouth; to flatter her adolescence. In these books there is no attempt at seriousness. They are written with one purpose—generally by writers who know better. By some they are called "summer" novels. They are shameless time-killers, sentimental and childish, and deal, for the most part, with a callow love-affair between two brainless young people. The final chapter is nearly always osculatory.

Robert W. Chambers is a past-master in this type of fiction, and his "Japonette" runs "The Guests of Hercules" a close second. But credit must be given to Chambers for his wit, for the occasional cleverness of his dialogue. So long has he written these light novels, and so well does he understand the emotions and tastes of the young of the species, that he succeeds superjatively in his mission. Time was when Chambers wrote serious and excellent stories (witness his "A King in Yellow;") but those days are gone; his birthright went for a mess of pottage. He has, however, retained a certain loose and luscious style. He knows the value of words; and some of his colorful descriptions smack of the literary.

No such left-handed praise can go to the Williamsons. They are shameless hacks, who know only the minds to which they cater. They are without Mr. Chambers's nuances; and so they are a little worse.

In touching on these passementerie novels, we must not forget to mention, "He Comes Up Smiling," by Charles Sherman; "From the Car Behind," by Eleanor M. Ingraham, a disciple of the Williamsons; or "Her Weight in Gold," by that greatest living dispenser of pishmince, George Barr McCutcheon. Nor can we overlook "The Melting of Molly," by Maria Thompson Daviess; nor, "The Lighted Way," by E. Phillips Oppenheim. All are worthless and premeditated efforts to please and perfume the youthful.

BRAIN-PLUMBING.

The pseudo-psychological school is composed almost entirely of women. This school, taking its cue from England, has spread over America like some vast fungus. On every hand we are being initiated into the mysteries of the feminine temperament. The boudoirs of the race are opened for our inspection. We are supposed to assist at the toilette of women's souls. The vagaries of the feminine mind in an erotic state, are held up as important and significant. These books generally have an air of mystery, and are full of startling exclamations. Without any apparent warning, a jaded denizen of the manor will fling herself upon the butler's neck and caress that astonished man in an appalling manner. Or an "advanced" woman with an exterior of solid ice and a mind which would have put Darwin to shame, suddenly begins babbling amatory inanities to the chauffeur because he has beaten her.

In "Spiritual Curiosities," the book I have chosen as most representative of this type, we have Mrs. Orman, a super-elegant matron, a hypersensitized Beau Brummel of the fair sex, who throws herself on the neck of Laurence Illiford, crying, "I love you. . . Do with me as you will. You are my lord, my master, my God!" That which brought about this sudden burst of psychology was the fact that Laurence had locked her in a room containing radium, for the purpose of putting her to death. (Shade of the late Dr. Weininger!) The chief fault with these rare specimens of mental probing is that the books leave us quite as mystified at the end as when we began. They assume an air of profundity—and carefully avoid explanations.

NEURAL FICTIONS.

Next we come to the neuro-erotic type of novel. Of late we have had few specimens of this style of fiction. "Three Weeks" provided an engaging example; but where it fell short of being a perfect specimen was in its permitting the culmination of the physical desires of its participants. Generally, this type of novel is confined exclusively to the symptoms of hallucinosis which follow prolonged sexual repression. The struggle against temptation forms the basis of action.

This form of novel at its noblest and best is found in "Mastering Flame." For 300 pages, Lilith, the beautiful blonde wife of John Armistead, clings to the edge of the moral precipice with the fascinating American Consul to Hongkong, Randal Wayne. The agony is terrible. In fact, they do not dare mention it, though each subconsciously knows that which the other desires. As in all such novels, the Great Adventure is ever looming up in the next chapter—but, like the horizon, it retreats as the reader approaches it. Toward the end of the book, when it seems as if the inevitable must surely happen, Fate steps in—and all bets are off.

In the present book, Lilith is already on her way to Hongkong to indulge in the forbidden with Mr. Wayne—that lovely theosophical creature—and the book-makers are chalking up 100 to 1 that the tabooed affair will take place, when—the ship on which Lilith is sailing takes fire and the fair lady is burned to death.

QUASI-ROMANCE.

We come now to the quasi-romantic school. And here, perhaps, I would better explain that this school must not be confused with the passementerie school, or yet with the supersentimental. While it takes nourishment from the pap of these other two, it is sufficiently differentiated to deserve a specific classification. This type of novel may best be described as the neuro-erotic type with the eroticism omitted. The love-making is decent, and the complications attending it arise from many causes—accidents, paternal and maternal restrictions, the need of money, the lust for titles, fine points of honor, ridiculous misunderstandings, and the like. This school is the modern equivalent for the Libby-Braeme-Southworth syndicate of a past generation. One subdivision of this school is the society novel, of which Dodo Benson is perhaps the most brilliant exponent. But the school, necessarily, does not deal only with the opulent and aristocratic minority. Its chief negative characteristic is that it is free from sociology.

Gene Stratton-Porter,

The popular authoress of "The Harvester." Her new book, "Moths of the the Limberlost," has just come from the presses of Doubleday, Page & Co.

ELINOR GLYN AGAIN.

A heaven-kissing example of this school is "Halcyone," the latest contribution from the pen of Elinor Glyn, the luscious, the lovely. Halcyone is a sensitive feminine soul who, at the age of 10, discusses Greek philosophy and the symbolism of Aphrodite. She reminds one of those sapient prodigies who were cultivated by pedantic mammas in the days of Anne Seward and Felicia Hemans. Upon growing up, this fantastic super-creature falls in love with a noble youth, who returns her affection. For a moment it would seem that the book must necessarily be brought to a close. But the young man meets with an accident and is cared for by a dashing widow. He sends word to Halcyone explaining his predicament. But that recondite young lady—for some reason not patent to mere earthworms—ignores his note and proceeds to consider herself unengaged. Whereupon the wounded hero, in desperation, allows the widow to beguile him into a betrothal, travels with her to Italy and there meets the transcendent Halcyone again. We take leave of the young lovers discussing the soul.

The book is by far the worst that Mrs. Glyn has ever attempted. Its construction is loose-jointed, and its style is of that garish and hifalutin' variety which has perpetuated the fame of the Swan of Litchfield.

So far as I can see, this quasi-romantic school is without the slightest excuse for existing. It falsifies life in every detail. It is literary green goods from start to finish.

THE POLITICAL NOVEL.

There is perhaps more excuse for the political propaganda school. Progressivism—that Perusa of politics, that benign flapdoodle, that caressing buncombe—is the mother of nearly all such novels. As a rule these books are full of political platitudes, biased, inaccurate and designed to further theories and not to interpret facts. Two glaring examples of this type of novel are to be found in "The Citadel" and "John Rawn." Both are execrable, but "The Citadel" seems more insistently bad, so I honor it with first place. It is a brief for the intelligence of the plain people; for the principles of an ignorant democracy; for the furtherance of the Rooseveltian doctrines. Its inexpensive pandering to the stupidities of mob rule makes it doubly obnoxious. But no matter what your politics may be, or what mine are, the book, judged from the standpoint of the novel, fails in every particular. It is the final flower of muckraking fiction—a commodity against which the intelligent nostril instinctively revolts.

No better, and perhaps even more dangerous, are those novels devoted to the glorification of our provincialism—those novels which uphold the smug conceits of our bourgeoisie, which scoff at every form of culture, which glory in the "I seems" and "You wases" of our middlewest population. Not that great novels cannot be written on such themes; but in our literature of the provincial, we apotheosize our shortcomings, our lack of manners, our paucity of refinement. Eden Phillpotts in England, Rene Bazin and Pierre Loti in France, Gustav Frenssen in Germany, Johan Bojer in Norway, Tolstoi and Dostoevsky in Russia, Ibanez in Spain—all these writers deal intelligently with the underlings of their countries. But it remains for America to glorify her lack of culture and intelligence.

In "A Hoosier Chronicle," Meredith Nicholson—that ex-writer of best-sellers—admires (just as does Booth Tarkington in his "The Man From Home") the chromo-loving Indianans with whom he deals. God knows we have enough culture of the detachable-cuff variety. But why put it on a pinnacle and worship it as something noble and sublime?

FOR THE SENTIMENTAL.

The super-sentimental school speaks for itself. Its basis is adolescence. Its appeal is to the rubber-minded. It judges greatness by goodness; and efficiency by humility. It distorts human values, wallows in brine, and places mawkishness above the law of the survival of the fittest.

Of this type of fiction we have no greater mistress, no more supreme and seraphic votary, than Florence L. Barclay. Only those who have waded through the sticky ooze of "The Rosary" and "The Following of the Star" can gauge the trans-saccharinity of her latest book—"Through the Postern Gate." To be appreciated it must be read; no mere description of it can suffice. It is a love-story in the final stages of zymosis. And I predict that no one—not even Mrs. Barclay herself—will ever surpass it.

Of an entirely different type is the counterfeit moral school of fiction. The members of this fictional brotherhood spend their days concocting bogus ethics—fine points of honor which do not exist; manufacturing absurd and distorted standard of conduct; splitting hairs of decorum. Then they proceed to enmesh their characters in this imaginary ethical net, and their pages are devoted to explaining away and justifying these spurious situations.

In "The Street Called Straight" this type of novel is in its ascendency. The characters here are governed by Mr. King's personal ideas of morality, and extricate themselves by the use of this same gentleman's imaginary punctilios. The book is one of solemn piffle.

SNIFFING THE COSMOS.

Of the supernatural school I have written many times in these columns. This is a day of occult fads, mental healing, spiritualism, and oriental "philosophies." The cosmos is rampant. All a novelist need to do to insure popularity nowadays is to speak of Cosmic Fluids, sprinkle his text with the balderdashian aphorisms of theosophy and the New Thought, raise the dead, and bring about two or three telepathic communications. Thus is the trick turned.

"The Body of His Desire" includes all of that transcendental claptrap designed to rattle the psychic slats of the primitive-minded.

Last on this list I have put the Stop-Look-Listen School, because it is perhaps the largest and most popular of them all. The manufacturers of this type of fiction cater exclusively to that savage desire to have the eyes bulged, the hair porcupined, the skin gooseflesh. This instinct to stand agape, to be excited, is most strongly developed in negroes, children and theosophical students. But there is more or less of it in nearly all classes of human beings. "Five Thousand an Hour" is an excellent specimen of this uncivilized entertainment.

Under this classification, also, come the mystery yarns and detective stories. This type of fiction has come to be a pest, and we will never be free from it until we overcome our fear of spooks, unlucky numbers, jinks, noise and mock-heroics.

BOOK NOTES.

In "Boston New and Old," which Houghton Mifflin will issue in the fall, T. Russell Sullivan will give a series of pen pictures of the evolution of Boston life and character in recent years. The illustrations will be supplied by Lester G. Hornby, and here as elsewhere his work will reveal a charm that comes of a judicious commingling of the real with the imaginative. They will consist of seventeen full-page drawings, and seventeen head-bands, tail-pieces, etc. The volume will be a tall quarto, and only five hundred and seventy-five copies will be printed.

Houghton Mifflin Company report that "The Promised Land" by Mary Antin continues in such demand that they are printing a fourth edition, bringing the total number of copies up to 15,000 in a little over three months. The author has been visiting in Massachusetts and called on her publishers in Boston last week.

Earl Barnes is not a prolific author: the books to his credit are few, yet each possesses unique significance. His two volumes of "Studies in Education" are known to every progressive educator in England and America.

Mr. Barnes is about to give us his most important work, "Woman in Modern Society," the result of years of historical, biological and psychological research. He does not agree with the poet's dictum that there's in woman "all that we believe in heaven" nor with the same poet's contradictory "destructive, damnable, deceitful woman."

This is the summing up of the woman movement, the wise judge's impartial charge to the jury of public opinion. B. W. Huebsch will publish the book in New York in August and it will be brought out in London immediately thereafter.

For the second time in July, Little, Brown & Co. have gone to press with Payne Erskine's "The Mountain Girl," making a total of thirteen printings.

Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. will also issue on August 24 the seventh volume in the "Grant Allen Historical Guides," which will be a thorough revised edition—from the eighth English edition—of "Paris." A peculiar feature of these books is that the illustrations are not of works of art about which they themselves are written, but of similar works in other places that it is interesting for the traveler to compare those that he is looking at with.

Anna Chapin Ray's spring novel, "The Brentons," will shortly be brought out in England by W. J. Ham-Smith, the London publisher.

Professor S. E. Forman is writing a work on "The American Republic," which will emphasize the recent developments in our political machinery—the initiative and referendum, the commission form of municipal government, primary elections, etc. The Century Company announces an issue of the book in the near future.

Charles Scribner's Sons have just published fresh memoirs of the brilliant Comtesse de Boigne, under the title "Recollections of a Great Lady." Her illuminating accounts of important and interesting events, political and social, and her acute observations of leading European characters, in this new volume, begin with 1832 and end with 1848. The writer was one of the very few persons whose great opportunity for seeing everything important in high circles was really equalled by her talent to understand herself, and to impart to others. That this was the case with her, the sound judgments of affairs, the apt characterizations of personages, the witty comments on both, which run through this volume, are proof.

Charles Scribner's Sons published on August 10 a volume containing two plays by August Strindberg—"Miss Julia" and "The Stronger."

"Miss Julia" is perhaps the best known of all Strindberg's plays, and the one most frequently acted on the stage in Germany as well as in the Scandinavian countries. Strindberg's introduction to it, which is included in this volume, has never before been translated into English, and is his most important declaration in regard to dramatic art. "The Stronger" is a marvelous little play of only ten pages, but of astounding power.

"Miss Julia" and "The Stronger" make up the second volume of plays by Strindberg, published in addition to "Plays by August Strindberg," which contains three of his most celebrated dramatic works. The other additional volume is entitled: "There Are Crimes and Crimes," and contains the single play of that name.

It is universally acknowledged that Rodin is the greatest sculptor of the present day and perhaps the direct successor to Michaelangelo. Both artists have found the pen a collateral medium for expression. Rodin is the author of a wonderful rhapsody, almost a prose poem, addressed to the Venus of Milo. In this fervent apostrophe to the Greek goddess he expresses his artistic principles. The confession is full of such nuggets as this:

"Nothing will take the place of persevering study. To it alone the secret of life delivers itself. Give your life patiently, passionately to understand life. What profit, if you come indeed to understand. You will be in the circle of joy forever."

The authorized translation of the essay has been made by Miss Dorothy Dudley of Chicago, and in the fall B. W. Huebsch will publish it in an attractive booklet with the title "Venus: To the Venus of Melos."

Hon. William Lindsay Scruggs, former Minister of the United States to Colombia and Venezuela, and the author of the authoritative book, "The Colombian and Venezuelan Republics," died recently at Atlanta, Ga., at the age of 70.

WITH THE AUTHORS.

Owen Johnson, the author of "Stover at Yale," who was taken dangerously ill with typhoid fever in the midst of the tense discussion of his criticisms of college, is now rapidly recovering, and the remainder of the summer will be spent in his summer home at Stockbridge. He had expected to leave in mid-June for nearly a year in Europe, but this trip is now indefinitely postponed.

Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, whose new novel, "Mary Pechell," will be published this month, is a sister of the essayist and statesman, Hilaire Belloc. Her father was a French barrister, and her mother a granddaughter of Priestley, the discoverer of oxygen.

Anna Chapin Ray, the Connecticut author, is spending the summer in Canada. She has written for autumn publication another book for boys in her "Buddie" series, entitled "Buddie at Grey Buttes." Miss Ray's last novel was "The Brentons."

Susan Glaspell, author of "The Glory of the Conquered," "The Cleansing," etc., is a good Middle Westerner, and prefers to spend her winters in Iowa, but she is spending the present summer at Nantucket, reading proofs of her first volume of short stories, "Lifted Masks," which will be published in the fall.

Will N. Harben, the novelist, is spending the summer, as usual, in his old home in Dalton, Ga. He is engaged in gathering material for a new novel, which, like "Abner Daniel," "Pole Baker," "Ann Boyd," and the rest, will be distinctly a story of Georgian life.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Louis Joseph Vance's "The Bandbox" is the best selling novel in Canada, according to the July issue of the "Bookseller and Stationer."

Word has been received from Louis Vance, who is summering at Moosehead Lake, Maine, that the author of "The Bandbox," "The Brass Bowl," etc., has abandoned, temporarily at least, his B's for titles, for his autumn novel will be called "The Destroying Angel."

Frances Lady Shelly, whose diary is just being issued, knew most of the celebrated people between the dates of 1787 and 1817. She gives this description of her first view of Lord Byron in 1813.

"From Althorp we went to Colonel Leigh's, near Newmarket, for the shooting. We stayed there a few days. The house is far too small even for the company it contained. Lord Byron was there. Mrs. Leigh told me that he spent most of the night writing a poem which is to be called 'The Corsair.' As he did not leave his room until after mid-day, our intercourse was restricted. He is decidedly handsome and can be very agreeable. He seems to be easily put out by trifles, and at times, looks terribly savage. He was very patient with Mrs. Leigh's children who are not in the least in awe of him. He bore their distracting intrusion into his room with imperturable good humor. Mrs. Leigh has evidently great moral influence over her brother, who listens to her occasional admonitions with a sort of playful acquiescence. But I doubt the permanence of their effect upon his wayward nature."

When Commissioner Dougherty, at the head of the New York detective force, was a young Pinkerton man, he spent a great deal of his time in public libraries. Dougherty says the public library is the finest place conceivable for a detective engaged in certain kind of work. When sent out to investigate crime in a small town, where a stranger's movements are sure to be noted, the detective associates with people chiefly out of business hours, picking up his information. As he has no occupation in the place, it is fatal for him to be seen idling about while others are at work. To overcome this handicap, therefore, Dougherty always made it a point to spend most of the day in a library, and was not only out of sight, but advancing his education. Many of Commissioner Dougherty's practical methods as a detective chief are dealt with in James H. Collin's little book, "The Great Taxicab Robbery," published by John Lane Company. This is an account of how a notorious crime, fresh in the public mind, was solved by the New York police, and besides a highly picturesque story, it is a treatise on actual detective methods.

NO FEMALE POETS?

I have heretofore affirmed, remarks Michael Monahan in the August International, that poetry is the male principle, departures from which are to be classed under the head of sexual anomalies. Since the dawn of literature there never has been a woman poet of the first class. I do not except Sappho, who is extravagantly praised because her fame is largely mythical and of whose work only a few fragments remain. It is very curious and suggestive that Sappho felt rather as a man than as a woman in the most celebrated of her pieces, a highly sexualized poem—which fact caused the Greek fathers to fall foul of them and has left the poet's moral reputation looking rather queer to this day. Observe, too, how Sappho assumed the maladies, that Sappho assumed the male principle in writing the lines to Anactorfa, and no better description was ever written of a man in the throes of passionate desire.

Not long ago I was privileged to read in MS the poems of one of the best known and most popular of our women poets, in all the paraphernalia of clever and sparkling verse reminiscent of the Elizabethan, from Shelley to Kipling. The latter, who is also a writer of amazing skill, has written wittingly parodies of what have very small esteem in matters:—the lady is absorbed it like an infant, and when she came to simply Kipling again. special talent. a fair copy of the other existent poets most women poets ease and facility. memory, but had ality. THE BOOK IN LONDON.

Hall Caine Makes Money in Real Estate—Rider Haggard
Mrs. Deland in England—Chesterton Fractures Ank

BY HAYDEN CHURCH.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Hall Caine has been saying nothing, lately, but he has been "sawing wood" energetically. A friend of the Manxman tells me that, among other things, he has been speculating in land, and with a lot more success than usually attends the amateur investor in real estate. But Hall Caine is a better business man than most authors, and generally knows exactly what he is up to.

The land in which the author took his "flutter" is in North London, and his friend reports that he has managed to get as much for a part of the property as he paid for the whole. On the piece which he still holds, moreover, is a block of buildings occupied by an old-established bookbinding firm in which his son Ralph has just become a partner.

Incidentally, the novel on marriage and divorce, upon which Hall Caine has been working for over two years, is now almost finished. The title on which the author has decided, after considering a lot of others, is "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," and the work has for its motto a passage from a letter of Gladstone, which is as follows: "I have long thought that the battle of Christianity will have to be fought around the sacredness of marriage. Only Christianity can save society."

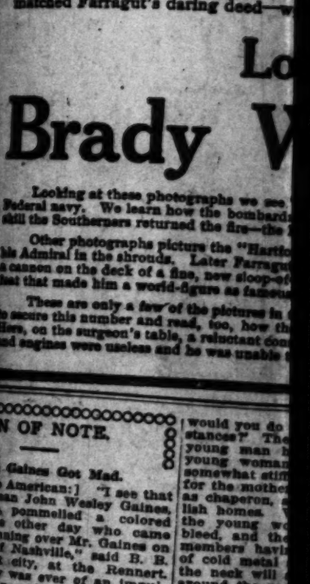
It will be some time, apparently, before we see the burly form of G. K. Chesterton, who reminds one more of Dr. Samuel Johnson than any other British writer, making elephantine progress through the Strand or Fleet street again. Not that the author of "The Man Who Was Thursday" has favored London with his large presence often of late, for he sticks close to Beaconsfield, the English town where he lives now, and where he fills the historic office of High Constable. It is pretty hard to upset "G.K.C." either literally or metaphorically, but a tub full of flowers which the author didn't notice while walking in his garden a few nights ago, accomplished the feat, as a consequence of which Mr. Chesterton is in bed with a fractured right arm. It pains him a good deal at present, but he is getting along all right and is preserving a Mark Tapley-like cheerfulness. Oddly enough, what must be the last article written by Chesterton previous to his mishap is a roast on doctors, which appears in the author's weekly preserve in the Daily News. If his medical man sees it no doubt he will have a terrible revenge.

Nobody, so far as one can remember, ever accused the late Henry Labouchere of any lack of daring, but it seems that the idea of letting a regular contributor to his famous paper, Truth, sign himself "Ananias" was too much even for "Labby." The contributor who wanted to do so was Charles E. Jerningham, who has just retired from newspaper work, after having written the "Letters From the Linkman" in Truth for twenty-two years. The name which he finally chose after Labouchere turned "Ananias" down was "Marmaduke" and he made it famous, in this country, anyway.

His letters mostly dealt with the gossip of the clubs, of which he belonged to no less than fourteen. He was witty and uncommonly painstaking. He declares that he never copied his letter out, but made five or fourteen times before it pleased him. Of the twenty-two years that he was the "Linkman," he received a number of letters from readers, many of which he replied and all of which he kept. Only three were unfriendly. The writer of one of these was Jerningham to show him a certain gathering, promising to kick him if he did. Labby sent a professional pugilist, who would pretend to be Jerningham, but for some reason this latter plan was not carried out.

Here are a few of "Jerry's" epigrams: "He who is a gentleman in a first-class carriage has had a first-class carriage has had a gentleman who has a fit in a third-class carriage is drunk." "Ability will out," said Labby, who has a fit in a third-class carriage is drunk." "Ability will out," said Labby, generally at the end of a session. "America is educating Europe; Europe is cultivating America," and "ordinary Englishmen are never themselves when they go to France, and treat it as a holiday trip instead of a business proper." Jerningham himself votes his time now is up when he sees the first of which will be a play by Henry Labouchere, which is said to make entertaining reading.

Mrs. Margaret Deland arrived in London from the United States the other day, accompanied by her husband. Mr. Deland says that his wife, "who is not in the best of health, are going straight to Scotland, but after a short stay in the Highlands of Light, they are coming to London to spend a fortnight, seeing Rider Haggard here before he changed the scene of his novels. "King Solomon's Mines" was the first gun to the moon in the series of that novel—at least to my memory, despite the fact that Rider Haggard is likely to have added to it for changing it to a more impressive eclipse of the sun. I doubt the experts in astronomy came down on him and declared that the eclipse, or whatever it couldn't have been more distinguished than Sir Rider Haggard was when the sun and moon—or whatever it was—made the orb of day look like a last year's bird's nest. If memory serves, not a word was said about the eclipse was a failure or it was possible or not.



MEN OF NOTE.

When Gaines Got Mad.

[Tennessee American:] "I see that Congressman John Wesley Gaines, of this state, pommelled a colored man the other day who came around running over Mr. Gaines on the streets of Nashville," said B. B. Cheatham, of that city, at the Rennert. Wesley was ever of an impulsive disposition, and at times his fiery temper got beyond his control, but he was a good soul and honest as the day is long.

One occasion, when quite a number of politics and hardly known in his own county, he called at the congressional mansion to pay his respects to the late illustrious Robert Taylor, then our beloved Governor. This did not be occupied the executive chair but put no damper on the jocose disposition of that fun-loving, light-hearted statesman. Advancing with outstretched hand the visitor, Bob Taylor said: "I know you; what name, sir?" "John Wesley Gaines, Governor," continued John Wesley, "one of the wealthiest citizens of the ten-in-law, Governor, I am doubly glad to know you; Mr. Gaines.'

"Gaines," responded the Governor, "I must have heard something worth repeating narrative, which he sooner or later, somebody was sure to hear and unparalleled. I've heard the jestingest remark I've heard the jestingest remark that we needed a newspaper. Archie Hughes, who was a good one and printed it only to arouse the violent wrath of Col. Archie Hughes, who, on perusing the article, went out on a hunt for the compact which was Governor Takes a Chew.

[New York Sun:] As Mayor Gaynor left the City Hall last night to enter his motor car, he saw a laborer in the act of chewing tobacco from a plug. The Mayor turned to the man and said:

"Excuse me.

"Yes, Honor, you wouldn't like some?

"I thought? Watch me!" Mayor, reaching for the plug, bit off half of its contents, put it in his mouth, said "Thank you," and boarded his car. The Mayor could not recall that he ever before seen him chew, but he appeared to Wilson's Solution.

[Philadelphia Record:] One of Gov. Wilson's stories is pleasing to his friends. "We had the high-cost-of-living question," the Governor, "and what we needed was a solution. Then I had a bright idea. It was to call in the ladies. I said, 'Ladies, we have the high-cost-of-living question. Please solve it.' It was solved in a few weeks and we are now enjoying the fruits of their labors.'

Spooner and Son.

[Philadelphia Record:] Senator Spooner told a story while in Philadelphia the other day of a young man he knew who had been smoking rather too much and somewhat stimulated by the cup that cheers. He was in the practice of coming home late and had been cowed by his father, Senator Spooner, Jr., who had threatened for the West to whip him. Father Spooner accordingly decided to offer this parental admonition:

"Now, my son, you are going to begin your career in a few days, and I would feel better about it before you go that you should know that we probably won't see each other again for a long time, and it would give me great satisfaction to know that you are in no danger of getting drunk."

Young Spooner listened to the lecture calmly. After the old gentleman he replied:

"Father, I am sorry that you will probably not see me for some time. This is going to affect your health. I would not have you think that I am a way that you have been ing ruined by this habit. I'll tell you what I'll do. You quit smoking and I'll quit drinking."

And so the compact was made. There are other families, perhaps, who appreciate the significance of the incident in the best sense.

Dyspepsia.

I come each night to bed
My thoughts slip away
Without a goal they tread
Sail out of the realm of day

They fade so quickly from me
And many are lost
But some come back to me
ward track
And into my vision creep

My soul is tortured
Where gallant sailed
But I love the sombre throng
When the pleasure

From yonder ship a
I see my father
Across the sea they
And the years turn

With sudden ache of
I stand on the shore
That the ship may is past
And at dawn ride

But the ships of my ships,
Whatever their freight
There is never a dawn gone
For they all go down

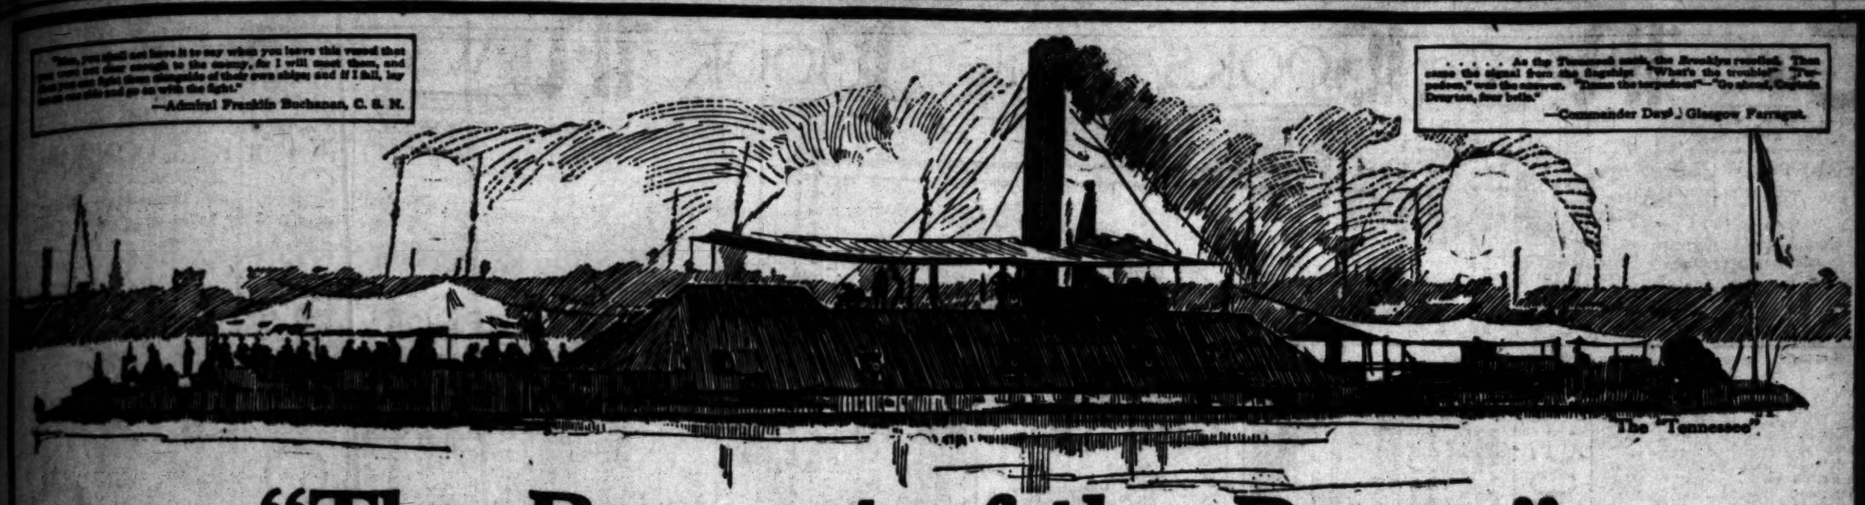
News-Letter.



"Now, you shall not have it to say when you leave this vessel that your men are shot down in the enemy, for I will meet them, and then you can fight them alongside of their own ships; and if I fall, lay your own side and go on with the fight."
—Admiral Franklin Buchanan, C. S. N.

. . . . As the Tennessee sank, the Brooklyn reached. Then came the signal from the flagship: "What's the trouble?" "Torpedoes," was the answer. "Damn the torpedoes!"—"Go ahead, Captain Drayton, four bells."
—Commander David Glasgow Farragut.

The "Tennessee."

"The Bravest of the Brave"

AMONG all the daring deeds of the naval encounters during the Civil War, the one that stands out superlatively is the gallant manner in which Admiral Buchanan fought his vessel, the "Tennessee."

We have read of Paul Jones and his reply, "I have not yet begun to fight;" of Admiral Dewey's, "You may fire when ready, Gridley;" but Buchanan's address to his men will live long after the Civil War, the War with Spain, or the Revolutionary War ceases to be a memory.

The sun-kissed waters of Mobile Bay, on that eventful morning of August 5, 1864, when Buchanan uttered blistering words, was the arena of more conspicuous heroism than marked any naval battleground of the entire war.

Farragut's undertaking in forcing his way into the Bay across the channel planted with torpedoes, has been lauded in history. How he ascended to the rigging of the main-mast, in order that he might have an unobstructed view of the conflict, every school-boy knows; hundreds of paintings have pictured "Daring Dave" in this position; thousands of men remember the death-defying run past Forts Morgan and Gaines—but of the real truth of the battle; the battered walls of Fort Morgan, the accuracy of the fire from Confederate forts, how Buchanan matched Farragut's daring deed—we know but little until the discovery of the

Long-Lost, Original

Brady War Photographs

Looking at these photographs we see "The Fort After the Bombardment"—the walls telling of a terrific smashing by the Federal navy. We learn how the bombardment was bravely answered by the Confederates, and how with amazing courage and skill the Southerners returned the fire—the Northern fleet being struck over 130 times.

Other photographs picture the "Hartford" just after the battle, and Quartermaster Knowles, who, with a piece of lead line tied to Admiral in the shrouds. Later Farragut, undoing the lashing with his own hands, climbed higher still. Then, standing beside a cannon on the deck of a fine, new sloop-of-war, comes the picture of Farragut, himself, the man who had just accomplished a feat that made him a world-figure as famous as Nelson.

There are only a few of the pictures in the 11th section of "The Civil War Through the Camera"—out this week. Don't fail to secure this number and read, too, how the brave Confederate admiral served a gun until wounded and carried below decks, then, on the surgeon's table, a reluctant consent to surrender was wrung from Buchanan, but not until the "Tennessee's" rudder and engines were useless and he was unable to fire a gun. DON'T FAIL TO GET THIS GREAT SECTION.

Like the photographs, the text of THE CIVIL WAR THROUGH THE CAMERA is surprising. It is absolutely different from any and all of the histories you are used to. It is the kind of history you will like—you will want your children to know—and, best of all, the sort they will read without urging. For it is as fascinating as a fairy tale.

The Civil War Through the Camera

Issued in Sixteen Superb Sections —One Each Week for Coupon and 10c

—besides containing the complete story of the Battle of Mobile Bay and the photographs taken on the spot, gives a vivid word picture of the Battle of the Wilderness

The artillery and cavalry took but little part in the conflict. The battle was chiefly one of musketry. Volley upon volley was poured out unceasingly; screaming bullets mingled with horrible yells in the dense woods. The noise became deafening, and the wounded and dying lying on the ground among the trees made a scene of indescribable horror.

Living men rushed in the tangled thicket to take the place of the dead. The missiles cut the branches from the trees, and saplings were mowed down as grass in a meadow is cut by a scythe. Bloody remnants of uniforms . . . .

If you want to go clear through the battle, be sure to order Section 11 at once. The supply is limited.

The Photographs

The 22 pages of war-time photographs in this section show the men of both armies as they appeared during the Wilderness campaign, the headquarters of the armies, the country over which they fought—those taken before and after the Battle of Mobile Bay, and a Colored Frontispiece—"Battle of Mobile Bay"—ready for framing.

NOTE OF NOTE.

Sir Gilbert Got Mad.

[San Francisco Examiner:] "I see that Sir Gilbert John Wesley Gaines, formerly chancellor of the exchequer, has been knighted by the king," said Rider Haggard, the novelist, to a colored man on the train. "Well, I'll be darned," was the reply of the other boy who came from Nashville, Tenn., to the Golden City, at the Rennert. "Why, we knew him when he was plain Mister Gaines, and we knew his father before him. Why, I've known Sir Gilbert's father since I was a little boy, and I've known Sir Gilbert since he was a little boy, and I've known Sir Gilbert since he was a little boy, and I've known Sir Gilbert since he

APARTMENTS TO FRONT ON PARK.

Palatial Structure to Be Fine Improvement.

Will Contain One Hundred and Twenty Rooms.

Adjoin the Riverside Drive of Los Angeles.

It is probably that the district in the vicinity of Westlake Park is to become to Los Angeles what Riverside Drive is to New York City, a section of great palatial hotels, splendid tourist accommodations and high-class apartment houses, is made more and more apparent as the months roll by. In the block bounded by Sixth street, Rampart street and Wilshire and Benton boulevards a magnificent fireproof apartment house has already been erected, a still larger and finer structure of the same type is well under way and the largest apartment-house project on the West Coast is started. Smaller apartment houses of the above, a few of the old-fashioned three-story type, but most of them of modern construction and with considerable architectural pretention, have been erected with a few blocks of Westlake Park in the last three years.

For an apartment-house district that will occupy one of the most valuable and desirable sites in the entire district have just been announced by Frederick Noonan and Charles H. Kysor, associated architects. The improvement is to be erected on the northwest corner of Sixth and Park View avenue by Jacob Morris, who recently acquired the property from Richard G. Beebe for a consideration of $120,000. A handsome mansion, a two-and-a-half-room dwelling, will be removed to make room for the new building, which is designed to be the most modern apartment-house in the district and is to be.

FACT AND COMMENT.

Better whet up the old scythe, Mr. Owner, and get after that weed jungle of yours before the police take notice and start in doing it for you. The authorities avow that they mean business this time and the Los Angeles Realty Board insists that it is going to keep the officers on the job. Even the fire department is getting interested, alarmed by the prospect of conflagrations due to the firing of some of the areas of tinder-dry weeds that are so common all over Los Angeles. The friends of the long-agitated movement to make this a cleaner and more presentable city are bound that the anti-weed ordinance shall be enforced and promise to make it hot for the violators of the law.

That's what they say, at least, and they all say it as though they mean it, the police, the realty men, the firemen and the public-spirited citizens, whose disgust at present conditions is beginning again to manifest itself. Strength, zeal and persistence be theirs, too, for if there is any question which requires all these qualities in those who would solve it, it is the problem of cleaning up the vacant property in Los Angeles. All previous efforts have been more or less of a fizzle, notwithstanding the conscientious efforts put forth by those who have sought to remedy conditions. Today Los Angeles looks as though such a thing as an anti-weed ordinance had never been heard of.

The law, Mr. Owner, the brand new, steam roller, hammer and tongs weed ordinance provides that you must clean your vacant property of weeds and rubbish between August 16 and August 21 or suffer the penalty of having the work done for you by the city at your expense, the charges being assessed against the property itself. In the past you have escaped because of the lax enforcement of previous ambiguously worded ordinances, but now the intent of the provision is as clear as crystal. Furthermore the police are having it put up to them to get out and really do something toward the enforcement of the ordinance, which is more than they have ever yet been known to do. It is quite possible, therefore, that the authorities will this year do what they threaten to do. Out with the scythe.

History-Making Deal.

The significance of the purchase of the great Cienega ranch of the late "Lucky" Baldwin by the Los Angeles Investment Company during the past week cannot be overestimated. The deal was of truly staggering proportions in point of money involved and of acreage transferred, and easily ranks with the greatest real estate transactions of the West. It is the plan for the development of the vast holding, however, which is calculated to astonish the world.

The new owners of the former Baldwin property propose to subdivide the holding into 84,000 different lots, arranged in 2500 city blocks and boasting a total street frontage of 900 miles. They further announce that the whole area is to be rapidly built up with artistically-planned homes, that hundreds of thousands of trees are to be planted, that sidewalks and curbs are to be constructed throughout the entire holding, that beautiful parks and parkways are to be created, and that all this titanic work of improvement is to be carried out under the direction of two of the country's greatest town-planning experts, Frederick Law Olmstead of Boston and Charles Mulford Robinson of New York.

Were it not for the tremendous record of achievement actually creditable to the big investment concern making these statements, those who would put any belief in them would be few and far between. The same company has already erected and sold thousands of bungalows in this city, most of them right in the section of Los Angeles adjacent to its newly-acquired holdings. Definite steps, too, have already been taken to build 200 or more houses at the city's edge and within the boundaries of the Cienega property, and if this is any indication of what may be expected in the future, it is apparent that maybe the dream of the investment company is not so wild after all. A few such projects as that of the Los Angeles Investment Company would soon bring to realization the cherished ambition of Los Angeles to reach from the mountains to the sea.

Two of a Kind.

The two cities which are today attracting the most attention in the building circles of the country are Los Angeles and Boston, both of which are in a class by themselves in point of construction activity. Los Angeles is leading every city in the United States, excepting New York, in the actual number of buildings erected, and the Hub is simply expanding all over the rest of the universe. According to population, the big, busy Massachusetts city, in fact, is putting almost as much money into new structures as is Los Angeles and the two cities, the live metropolis of the extreme Northeast and the world-beating metropolis of the extreme Southwest, are between them claiming about all the construction laurels in sight.

In order of building valuation for the year, to date, New York is, as always, first, and Chicago holds its accustomed position of second. Philadelphia, on the other hand, is completely eclipsed by Boston and crowded out of its long-enjoyed position of third. Los Angeles, with its phenomenal valuation total of $18,299,288, is close on the heels of the Quaker City, which on August 1 boasted a valuation aggregate of $22,806,005 to its credit. The Angel City is gaining every month and may yet pass the Keystone State's big city before the opening of another year.

Detroit, the big, hustling city of the Middle West, follows Los Angeles with the hunky total of $16,425,465 and San Francisco is in seventh place with $14,880,998. The Bay City is hopelessly behind in valuation and absolutely discounted by Los Angeles in the number of new buildings for which permits were taken out during the first seven months of the year. Portland holds ninth place in the national column with a little over $10,000,000 valuation to its credit.

LOS ANGELES LEADS RIVALS.

BEATS OTHER COAST CITIES IN BUILDING.

San Francisco Claims Second Place and Portland Third in Value of Construction for First Seven Months of Present Year—Seattle Far Behind.

Los Angeles leads all cities on the Pacific Coast in building for the first seven months of the present year, not only in the total value of buildings for which permits have been issued, but also in the percentage of increase as compared with the corresponding period in 1911. During the seven months of 1912 the total value of building permits issued in Los Angeles was $18,299,288. For the same period of 1911 the permits issued showed a total of $13,379,677. The gain for the current year is 36 per cent.

San Francisco takes second place in building activities on the coast, with a total of $14,880,998 for the first seven months of 1912, as compared with $13,061,120 for the corresponding period of 1911, an increase of only 13 per cent. Portland is third among the Pacific Coast cities with a total of $10,297,393 for the seven months of the present year, against $10,958,679 for the first seven months of 1911, a decrease of 6 per cent. Seattle is well down the list with a total of $5,498,310 for seven months in 1912, and Oakland is close behind with a total of $4,794,707 for the same period.

Greater New York shows the enormous total of $131,082,008 for the first seven months of 1912, an increase of 20 per cent.; but Boston shows the greatest gain among all the eastern cities with a total of $42,005,000, crowding close to Chicago, which has a total of $51,156,300.

HOME IS ATTRACTIVE.

Western Wilshire District Dwelling Planned on Low, Horizontal Lines. Large Number of Windows.

One of the attractive new homes of the Western Wilshire section is that under way for Thomas Berry on the west side of Catalina street, between Seventh and Eighth streets. The dwelling was planned and is being erected by the Milwaukee Building Company.

It is of a pleasing design, the effect being one of low, horizontal lines. The grouping of the windows also constitutes an important part of the scheme. The exterior is of white cement plaster over metal lath. The interior finish is in hardwoods.

The dwelling will contain ten rooms. The grounds are 80x145 feet in size and will be elaborately terraced. The garage will be in keeping with the house.

OPEN LARGE TRACT.

Two-thousand-Acre Citrus Property With Townsite, to Be Placed on Market in San Diego County.

The Vista Land Company has taken a lease on a ground floor office at No. 212 Mercantile place, where will be maintained its main office for the selling of a 2000-acre tract of orange, lemon, and walnut land at Vista, San Diego county. A townsite of 75 acres at Vista station, and which is surrounded by the Vista lands, will also be marketed. Vista is situated on the Santa Fe Railway, between Oceanside and Escondido, being ten miles from Oceanside and twelve miles from Escondido. The elevation of the property is from 350 to 400 feet above the sea. Water is now being developed on the property.

The owners of the property have planted out about sixty-five acres of lemons during the past sixty days and have just started the erection of a twenty-four room hotel on the Vista townsite. Among other buildings which will be erected at once are a two-story cement store and a two-story house by N. W. Hindle; a seven-room bungalow by F. B. Richardson, a residence and lumber yard by C. Bond Hammond of Los Angeles; a six-room bungalow by W. S. Morse of Los Angeles, and a five-room bungalow by Norman Hindle, on the townsite.

The Vista property was bought and is being put on the market by a syndicate of Los Angeles and Redlands men, among whom are A. W. Martin of Redlands, W. S. Morse of Los Angeles, F. B. Richardson of Vista, and P. J. Harley of Redlands. G. H. MacGinnis will have charge of both the Vista citrus land subdivision and townsite. He will have associated with him in the Los Angeles office, Grover F. Russell.

Real Estate Investments

So there is no great amount of argument necessary when West Adams Park is under discussion.

The subject is one that calls for no demonstrative arguments.

Any man will buy in a "prospective" subdivision, when he can buy a lot at

West Adams Park
The Cream of them all

The Cream of them all

if he will but know in advance that he is getting in, and know in advance that he is getting directly in the line of great development, that the street improvements, water, gas, electricity, street car service, quality of houses, building restrictions, nearness to schools, churches, parks and the center of the city, are all fixed.

These are the things that must be considered, the factors that make any piece of property a good buy or a bad one.

I tell my public to go and make comparisons. Buying a home is a serious matter. It requires thought and study. It is not to be done sight unseen, or in a hurry.

I claim we have all the best of the home-site proposition, that every advantage is on the side of

West Adams Park
The Cream of them all

as a place of residence and as an investment in real estate that must increase in value, and when those two factors are in combination, one can't go astray.

You will find that we don't do much urging. The property talks for itself, and there isn't enough of it to go around, so, unless you act quickly and get your lot before they are all taken, you may lose out entirely. It's a time for quick, decisive action. Go out today. Take West Adams (through) car, to big Red Sign at 23rd Ave.

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY into each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build houses from the modern five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or by our own lots in Los Angeles, Redondo and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charges for our Architectural services, if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design. Our REFERENCES are PEOPLE for whom we HAVE BUILT, who FREELY indorse us.

FOR SALE—OVERLOOKING THE ARROYO Seco, in Highland Park, on a hillside lot, dotted here and there with fine, sturdy, gnarled oak trees, and laid out in walks and terraces, walled with cobblestones, there has been built an 8-room bungalow, modern in every respect, for which the owner has no use. It is a truly romantic and picturesque home. It will not appeal to the plain, common, ordinary person, lacking in taste, but to the educated, the refined, the artistic, or the romantically inclined, it will. On it is an elevated shelf upon which and under the spreading, overhanging boughs of an oak, a room could be built for a summer house, or an ideal health-restoring sleeping porch. It is very convenient to both red and yellow car lines—a block. $500 will be sacrificed for a speedy sale. Price now only $4250; $1000, or more cash, and $45 monthly. TEHACHAPI

TOWN LOTS

Are the BEST and SUREST

INVESTMENT

CALIFORNIA

At Tehachapi, the joint track of the Southern Pacific and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe MAIN LINES touches one corner of a plateau comprising nearly 50,000 acres of land.

Development of water by PUMPING is making all this region spring into LIFE and ACTIVITY. From being a cattle and cord-wood region, it has become recognized in a few years as being absolutely the BEST place in California for Harlett Pears, RED Apples, Currants, and other crops that require a cool summer climate.

The ACCESSIBILITY of the region, its fine scenery, very cool climate, abundance of good water and shade trees is bringing it to the front as a SUMMER RESORT.

The abundance of LIME in the hills is the basis of an enormous lime and cement industry, just started. There is much new activity among the old and well established lodes of gold ore in the hills about.

TEHACHAPI is now a town of 800 people. It is and ALWAYS WILL BE the only shipping and trading point for the whole region. The new development will SURELY make Tehachapi a town of 2000 to 3000 people, and this in a few years.

We have lots for sale—business corners, 50x150 feet at $450, which will be worth thousands when Tehachapi ARRIVES at the destination toward which it is rapidly moving. We have residence lots as low as $200 a pair.

This is not in any ADDITION, or outlying sections, but in the ORIGINAL PLAT of the ORIGINAL TOWN, right by the present and permanent business section. We are going to sell these out FAST, and the time to investigate is NOW.

Business Property.

FOR SALE — OR TO LEASE — FOR 99 YEARS. NO. 607 SOUTH FIGUEROA ST., 62x265 FT., TO ALLEY.

THIS PROPERTY, BESIDE BEING WITHIN THE CIRCLE OF THE NEW AND EXPANDING CENTRAL BUSINESS DISTRICT, HAS ADDED VALUE BECAUSE OF ITS GREAT DEPTH. IT CAN BE USED FOR MANY PURPOSES FOR WHICH SMALLOWER LOTS CANNOT BE USED. STORES OR HOTEL IN FRONT AND OPERA HOUSE IN REAR OR ON SIDE.

IT IS NEARER THE PRESENT BUSINESS CENTER AT BROADWAY AND SIXTH STS. (800 YARDS.) THAN IS THE OLD BUSINESS CENTER AT SPRING AND SECOND STREETS. (975 YARDS.) FROM WHICH THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK IS MOVING TO SEVENTH ST.

THE BUSINESS DISTRICT OF EVERY GROWING CITY EXPANDS IN THE DIRECTION IN WHICH THE WELL-TO-DO CITIZENS LIVE. THE WEALTHY PEOPLE OF LOS ANGELES LIVE WESTERLY OF FIGUEROA ST. AND MUST CROSS FIGUEROA ST. GOING TO AND FROM THE BANKS, DRY GOODS AND OTHER STORES. IT IS PREDICTED THAT FIGUEROA ST. WILL BECOME A GREAT BUSINESS THOROUGHFARE IN A COMPARATIVELY SHORT TIME. THE FACT AND COMMENT EDITOR HAS PROPHESIED IT. IT IS SAID THE LATE MR. HARRIMAN PREDICTED IT. IF THIS FUTURE BUSINESS CENTER WOULD BE AT FIGUEROA AND SEVENTH STS.

THE SIXTH ST., SEVENTH ST., WASHINGTON ST. AND GLENDALE CARS PASS THIS PROPERTY, MAKING IT EASY OF ACCESS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE CITY AND IT IS EXPECTED THE FIRST STATION ON THE SUBWAY TO THE SEASHORE WILL BE LESS THAN TWO BLOCKS NORTHEAST OF IT.

ONE PRESENT AND PRESSING NEED OF LOS ANGELES IS A HIGH-CLASS DOWNTOWN HOTEL, TYPICAL OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AND ITS MATCHLESS CLIMATE, HAVING LARGE LAWN AROUND IT, WITH FLOWERS, PALMS, FOUNTAINS PORCHES, PERGOLA, ETC., AND AN OPERAHOUSE ATTACHED TO IT. SUCH A HOTEL WOULD ATTRACT TOURISTS FOR THE SEASON AS PERMANENT GUESTS AND NOT AS PASSING GUESTS ONLY. A CHOICE CENTRAL LOCATION FOR SUCH HOTEL IS THE 267 FEET OF EAST FRONTAGE ON FIGUEROA STREET BETWEEN 6TH AND ORANGE STS. THIS PROPERTY, EXCEPT THE 90 FT. CORNER 6TH, HAS A DEPTH OF 220 TO 265 FT. TO ALLEY.

BEING SO NEAR THE HEART OF BUSINESS AND SO EASY OF ACCESS AND IN THE DIRECTION IN WHICH THE WEALTHY CLASSES LIVE AN OPERAHOUSE ON THIS PROPERTY WOULD BE WELL PATRONIZED.

MATSON HILL, 227 S. LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

Eagle Rock.

FOR SALE—
There are about two thousand incorporated "stock companies" just now, selling stock.
They are fond of saying, "Let US take care of your money."
Funny, isn't it, we can take care of our own gardens, our own houses, our own children, our own troubles, but we must not take care of our own MONEY.
We must let some fellows who probably never built a house or really EARNED a dollar "take care of our money."
Lots of these stock-selling concerns never before subdivided a tract of land—know nothing of comparative values, still less of the proper way to build a house.
Now our advice to you is this:
TAKE CARE OF YOUR OWN MONEY.
Put it in a good savings bank, or in a good mortgage, or in a good piece of Real Estate.
If you decide on Real Estate (and the history of Los Angeles proves such investments good) we want you to see EAGLE ROCK.
Eagle Rock's population has practically doubled every year for five years. It is a good place to make your home; it is a good place to make money.
Just now, we can sell you a 50-foot lot in Fairview, Eagle Rock, for from $300 to $475.
You can pay for it $10 a month, and you pay NO INTEREST for two years. You can record your contract which then becomes an absolute first lien on the lot.
Isn't that taking care of your own money?
Isn't that safe?
Isn't that likely to prove profitable?
Ask any banker, or any successful business man.

INDUSTRIAL CITY
ANNEX
—Just Opened—

Adjoining Torrance, the new industrial city, with its great promise of future prosperity, and near Los Angeles harbor and San Pedro, where thousands of dollars will be made in the next few years by investors who see the possibilities NOW.

Enormous Growth

will be the sequel to the interest and activity in this particular section. There are good reasons for such a result: the immense shipping and manufacturing center of Southern California will be located right here and the whole region will be rapidly built up. Manufacturing and industrial plants with million-dollar pay rolls cannot fail to produce a thriving, prosperous community.

Lots in

are priced way down so that quick profit may be realized by every investor.

$ PER CENT DOWN
$5 PER MONTH.

Here is your opportunity. The extremely low opening price will not hold for any great length of time. The position of INDUSTRIAL CITY ANNEX is too favorable. A few months from now the whole region will show a marked increase.

You cannot do otherwise than prophesy great things for this fortunate locality. Right now is the psychological time for you to buy a site in INDUSTRIAL CITY ANNEX. It will be one of the wisest moves you ever made.

The demand—the advance inquiry—the interest shown in this region—are all favorable and steadily increasing. You have been waiting for the right investment, and Here It Is!

The supply of lots is small, however, and it behooves those who want any choice at all to arrange for inspection trip at once. Make yourself familiar with local conditions and realize what an exceptional opportunity is now placed before you.

While You Are Waiting

Some other wide-awake investor may get the plum that should be yours.

It's a fine trip to the harbor district, both by car and auto. Make your arrangements and go out at once.

Office Open Sunday.

FOR SALE—

$35 per acre, 6720 acres of very fine level land in Fresno county; report of the government soil expert shows the soil to be very rich, and adapted to the cultivation of anything raised in California, and the report of a very prominent civil engineer shows that two large creeks furnish enough water if property conserved to irrigate more than 14,000 acres.

2000 acres are now under cultivation with about 16 miles of ditches and laterals; the land does not require any leveling, it slopes about eight feet to the mile, making it ideal for irrigating.

We believe this to be especially suitable for alfalfa, and one of the finest subdivision propositions to be found in California.

ORANGE AND LEMON GROVES—
For Sale—Exchange—Wanted.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE GROVES
WILL BE HIGHER.

Right now is the very best time of the whole year to buy a grove for the reason that this is the dullest season, groves look their worst, and owners who absolutely have to sell find it necessary to put a SACRIFICE price on their groves in order to "move" them. The majority of our sales are to local people who know the real conditions and profit by them. When the buying season actively commences, and the crop is ready for picking, prices are very much higher.

You will find it to your advantage to investigate immediately the following REAL BARGAINS, selected from our large list in all the best districts:

$9500—Young lemon grove with large nursery stock. Fair improvements, beautiful live oaks, flowers, etc. A dandy little home grove which can almost be paid for with nursery. Easy terms.

$9000—4-acre full bearing navel grove, within one hour's ride of Los Angeles, near electric car and boulevard, on corner two fine streets. Worth $12,500, but for quick sale will sacrifice.

As we handle nothing but orange and lemon groves and a member of our firm is in the field daily, we know the good ones and can prove it if you will give us the opportunity.

If you are looking for an orange or lemon grove, let me tell you that now is the time to buy it. Did you ever see so many groves offered for sale as at the present time? There is a reason for it—FROST—last winter—which comes very seldom. While the above grove is offered very cheap, I have others at much less price, some in localities where frost catches them every year, more or less, and others where frost has never touched until last winter. Many of these are the very best of bargains at prices now asked. Some of them can be had in exchange for other property. See me, I have them, all prices, large and small. GEO. In the face of the busy season approaching, the owner of the lease of one of the most complete apartment houses in the city is offering same for quick sale. This house contains 76 living rooms arranged in 20 two-room, 6 three-room and 1 six-room suites. He offers his equity at $4000, will take 50 per cent. cash and the balance exchange. We can show you where this is a great bargain, as the house was furnished only last March. The lease is worth $7 per room, but the house is so desirably located the owner could easily obtain $7.50 now, which, in itself, would almost equal price asked.

BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

SELL WET— —BUY DRY
BUY LOW— —SELL HIGH

Fortunes are being made in buying and selling real estate—and made fast in buying large acreage, subdividing and reselling it. BUY IT CHEAP—BUY IT DRY; ADD THE WATER, SELL IT HIGH.

The investor with $100.00, $500.00, or $5000.00, is shut out from these big profits. He must be content to buy a lot or a few acres and let it increase. A good plan in its way, but it is slow; limited, and you make but a part of a profit.

To make big money requires a lot of money, a proper organization, experience, opportunity and banking. Here is just such a deal, and in this your dollar is just as big as any bank or's dollar—all shares share alike.

F. D. Cornell Company owns 4000 acres of the finest citrus land in California, and a half interest in 21,000 acres more. Its net assets are over $400,000, and its issued capital is a little over $275,000. It has $125,000 of stock to sell, the first block to to be sold at $100.00 per share. It is a big, sound enterprise. The stock is to sold like bank stock—at par, and every share is fully, amply secured.

The lands owned directly and indirectly aggregate 15,000 acres. At $50.00 per acre the land would be worth $450,000. You are buying these acres at $20.00 when you buy Cornell Company shares at $100.00, and these $20.00 acres will retail at big prices. Our first subdivision will bring $200.00 per acre or more. O, there is a big profit and a big future in these shares.

These men are directors of F. D. Cornell Company:
M. F. SNYDER, President California Savings Bank, and three times Mayor of Los Angeles.
EDWARD T. TOUMANS, President El Sobrante Land Company and F. D. Cornell Company.
FRANK R. STRONG, of Strong & Dickinson, a most successful real estate operator.
F. D. CORNELL, Secretary and Treasurer El Sobrante Land Company and F. D. Cornell Company.
JOHN W. VAUGHN, Treasurer Occidental Life Insurance Company, and realty operator.
CHARLES H. KYSOR, architect, of Monnan & Kysor.

Every man of them a money-maker. Do you believe such a great opportunity can do just than prosper amazingly in their hands? To make money for their shares, they must make just as much for yours.

Come to the office and talk with us about it. We have maps, statements, plans and prospectus. Talk to our directors, Decide to invest with us—make money as we make it, and you may believe we do not figure profits at 10 per cent. This is a big, live operation—DON'T MISS IT.

READ THIS PRIVATE LETTER ABOUT BEND, OREGON.
This is an exact copy of the letter from a purchaser who is president of the Kramer Consolidated Oil Co. of Los Angeles, Cal.:
"August 12, 1912. Mr. I. R. Snell, Los Angeles, Cal. My Dear Sir: Agreeable to my promise, I will give you my impressions of Bend. When we approached the city we thought we were having an ovation. I think the whole town was out to meet us, and all seemed to be glad that we had arrived. Met Mr. Hunter this morning, and we have been out all day. Have made up our minds that Bend is no fake, and I can truthfully say that in my opinion no one who can make an investment in Center addition to Bend will ever be disappointed in that investment. I will say that I am glad I purchased what lots I did, and wish I could buy more. If any of my people come to your office, tell them I want them to have some lots in the Center addition to Bend. It's all right. Will come in and see you when I return. My regards to Mrs. Snell and may you both live long and be happy. I am, yours truly,
A. N. HAMILTON."
REMEMBER, Bend, Or., has now a pay roll of $50,000 per month, and many more factories coming. Cheap electric and great water power is to be had; brings all kinds of factories. Population makes values in real estate all over the world. BEND, Or., will be the LARGEST inland city west of the Mississippi River. It will keep growing and growing and then some. REMEMBER, these lots will bring from three to five thousand dollars in a short time, and if held a few years will bring fifty to one hundred thousand dollars. You can buy lots in BEND NOW at $200 for inside and $250 for corners, on easy terms, $20 down and $10 per month thereafter. No taxes, no interest; 10 per cent. discount for cash. 20-foot alleys, 80 and 90-foot streets. Size of lots 50x140 feet. Call or write and get one or more of these lots from the owner, I. R. Cold Water Canyon is but little known round here. It lies about twenty miles by trail from San Dimas, and is reached by United States government trail beginning in San Dimas Canyon about four miles from its mouth, where the trail proper begins at the mouth of West Fork Canyon which opens into San Dimas Canyon, and continues over some of the most beautiful and picturesque scenery in the State. Cold Water Creek empties into Cattle Creek about six miles from Camp Baldy, and can be reached from there also. The stream then empties into San Gabriel River about four miles from where Cattle Creek and Cold Water Creek join. There is good fishing in all these streams for those who know how to catch them.

...poked at them with a stick, thinking to get them out of the water. To my surprise my "snakes" turned out to be only one, and he was very much alive, and resented my advances by sticking up his head quickly and darting out his tongue at me. I gave him a little tap on the head with my stick and killed him. Noticing a lump inside the snake, I cut it open and found a small trout about four inches long. I don't know how Mr. Snake managed to do his fishing. All I saw was that he had two or three coils of his body round the tree; his tail was in the water and it looked as if his head was also. He measured about five and a half feet long.

There are trout in all these mountain streams. Some days they will bite and other days they will not. Some people can catch them and some cannot. Some people go out for a record to see how many they can catch, but those kind of fellows don't go with me but once. I like to fish—not to see how many I can catch, but for the sport of catching them, and when I get enough for a mess I stop fishing and go to camp and enjoy eating them after they have been fried a rich brown color.

SISTER'S TRAIL LEADS TO JAIL.

BOGUS CHECK WRITER USES AN UNWITTING RELATIVE.

Detectives Follow Girl Who Innocently Tries to Pass Fictitious Paper and Capture Brother Accused of Forgery—On a Spree and Needed the Money.

Miss Julia Gust, a prepossessing woman about 22 years of age, unwittingly led Detective Nick Harris to her two brothers, Lloyd and Edward G. Gust, the latter of whom had previously induced her to try and cash for him a bogus check drawn on the First National Bank.

The young woman almost collapsed when the situation dawned upon her, and she fully realized the part she had unsuspectingly played in the arrest of her brother. Quite the contrary was the demeanor of Edward when he was taken to the Central Station. Outwardly he was calm, and throughout his booking in the detective's headquarters he acted in a nonchalant manner.

When asked for an explanation for his escapade of yesterday, which was the third of the week, Gust said:

"I was on a spree and wanted money."

Gust lives at No. 717 West Washington street with his mother, two brothers and sister. He is a representative of the Kohler & Chase Piano Company, No. 720 South Broadway. His territory includes Mexico and New Mexico, Southern California, Arizona and Texas.

On the 12th inst. Gust made the first payment on an auto by giving J. W. Leavitt, No. 1210 South Olive street, a bogus check for $100, drawn on the First National Bank. A similar piece of paper for $18.50 was given the Los Angeles Wine Company by Gust.

Detective Harris was given the two checks early in the week, and traps were set for Gust. His identity then was not known. Shortly after noon yesterday Gust gave his sister a $20 check drawn on the First National Bank, saying:

"Get this cashed for me, sister, and I'll give you half of it."

The young woman, accepting an explanation as to why he didn't get it cashed, took it to the Broadway Department Store. The woman to whom she presented it, being suspicious of the check because of the previous posting against Gust, detained Miss Gust while she sent for Detective Harris.

When payment on the check was finally refused, the young woman was shadowed to a street corner where Lloyd was met, and he was followed to a bar where Edward was drinking. Lloyd Gust, Detective Harris says, had no further connection with the transaction of yesterday aside from agreeing to meet his sister when she was supposed to return with the money, and taking it to Edward.

HANDSOME AND MODERN.

Apartments at Washington and Cherry to Be of Metropolitan Type. Fifty Suites Provided for.

Construction will be begun within a short time upon a handsome and up-to-date apartment-house to be erected for Henry S. Baer at the northeast corner of Washington and Cherry streets. Plans for the structure, which will be of the most substantial brick construction, and three stories in height, have just been completed by E. J. Borgmeyer.

The building will occupy a ground area of 70x165 feet, and will contain 104 rooms, divided into fifty apartments of two and three rooms each. The first story will contain a large and beautifully finished lobby and in the basement will be arranged a social room and billiard-room, in addition to the laundry and furnace rooms.

Both street fronts will be faced with pressed brick, the trim being of artificial stone. The vestibule will be in tile and marble and the lobby will be finished in hardwoods. Each of the fifty baths will be floored and wainscoted with tile. Wall beds will be installed throughout. Although only three stories in height, the building will be equipped with electric passenger and freight elevators.

WOMEN WIDE-AWAKE.

Are Doing More Building Than Mere Men in Beach City—One Even Plans Own Apartments.

VENICE, Aug. 17.—More than a quarter of a million dollars has been spent by women in the erection of apartment-houses here during the last six months. Mere men laid out $218,000 in buildings of two and three-room suites for the accommodation of seaside visitors and residents. A total of $498,500 has been expended here in the building of apartment-houses alone since spring. Most of these are now ready for occupancy, and find ready renters.

A good example of the type of apartment-houses now being erected here is the Rose Palace Apartments, just completed, which occupies a large lot at the corner of Horizon avenue and Speedway, well within the reach of the business and amusement center. This magnificent apartment building, costing $35,000, and built of reinforced concrete with stucco exterior, contains twenty suites of two and three rooms each. Every suite is fitted with a modern kitchenette and bathroom. Mrs. F. E. Rose, who designed and who owns the apartments, has caused to be built into every suite a wardrobe. There is a shower bath for surf frequenters, and balconies and a pergola on the roof.

Following is a list of owners and sites of apartment-houses finished within the last month, or now nearing completion: Mrs. Minnie Greenough, Crescent place, $25,000; Mrs. A. M. Waite, corner Westminster and Ennis place, $35,000; W. E. Girard, Wavecrest avenue, $12,000; F. B. Dickenson, Dudley avenue, $20,000; Willetta Ames, Westminster avenue, $25,000; Mrs. A. E. Heppe, Park avenue, $10,000; Mrs. Lois A. Herndon, Westminster avenue, $14,500; Charles L. Bowden, No. 700 Trolleyway, $10,000; Mrs. V. N. Smith, Horizon avenue, $25,000; Mrs. F. B. McClure, Thornton, near Speedway, $25,000; W. A. Huish, Brooks and Trolleyway, $13,000; Frank McClure, corner Thornton and Speedway, $16,000; Peter Muck, Westminster avenue, $6000; Mrs. F. E. Rose, Horizon avenue, $25,000; Dr. J. Z. Van Dyke, Breeze avenue, $25,000; Mrs. Maud Armstrong, Ocean Front and Clubhouse avenue, $40,000; Miss Mary E. Hunter, Mildred avenue, $10,000; Mrs. Blanche Brown, Mildred avenue, $25,000; John Stein, Rose avenue, $35,000; S. F. Freeman, Speedway and Westminster, $24,000; and George W. Fox, Rose avenue and Ocean Front, $60,000.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—The architects for the fair held a big powwow this week and as a result the cheering information comes that everything is ready. Now that it is all down on paper the anxious public would like to see some of it in concrete form. R. B. Hale, special envoy to Europe, is back with the pleasing report that the nations of the Old World are alive to the situation and will send good exhibits here.

The city has offered Spring Valley $38,500,000 for its water plant. This is less than the corporation expected, but it is more than was tendered three years ago. If the company accepts the offer a bond election will be called at once and it is to be hoped that the bargain will be ratified.

Thousands of soldiers are marching up and down the peninsula. The din of battle is heard, but there are no cries of the wounded nor is any report being made of the slain. The boys are fighting gallantly and will battle for the defense of the city until the last round of ammunition is gone and the last drop of mineral water has been exhausted.

Miss Nellie Schmidt of Alameda was the first woman to swim the bay. The Chamber of Commerce of that city appreciating the value of the advertisement will give her a gold medal. When she appears in vaudeville she will have a flag with "Alameda" inscribed on it. The inference is that if any other young ladies wish to swim the bay they must first take the precaution of being born in Alameda.

The Chamber of Commerce has a committee to recommend to the Federal government the recognition of the Chinese Republic. Uncle Sam is to be urged to act promptly. By a speedy recognition of the new government it is hoped that business will be stimulated. Washington will be asked to cut the official red tape at once and give us mercantile relief.

Juror Hyman, summoned to serve in a murder trial, was quickly excused. All he did was to circulate in the courtroom his business cards on which the following was printed: "Paw says that wimmin is like barbed wire, they run along smooth for a while but 'tain't long before you come to the spike." Quotated flippancy cost the juror the chance of serving the State.

At the first of its weekly meetings the Women's Political League was addressed by John G. Lawlor, secretary of the Society for the Abolition of White Slavery. He urged a State Civic Commission to suppress the evil. He said that effective work was being done in this city and as a result the white slavers were migrating into the country.

When James F. Young, a barber, was fined $20 for fast motoring he began to talk fast to the judge, and then broke the furniture on the refusal of the magistrate to listen. Thereupon he was sent to jail and was given twenty-four hours to talk all he wanted to.

The Bohemian Club for the benefit of women relatives is to repeat the grove performance of "The Atonement of Pan." Judge Melvin, as the ribald god Silenus, made a hit. Mounted on a donkey he sang:

"Why pickle your hide when you have died
In spices and good liquor?
Do the pickling now, is my daily vow;
It's surer and much quicker."

Which goes to show that if Silenus was alive now he would be held up as a horrible example by all good prohibitionists.

KANSAS SOCIETY PICNIC.

Through an error it was announced yesterday that the Kansas Society's semi-annual picnic was to be held in Sycamore Park on that day. The notice should have read September 14, when the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be in progress here. The programme, arranged largely in honor of the old soldiers, will be as follows:

Address of welcome by President H. H. Huntsberger; song, "Want to Live in Kansas Where the Sunflowers Bloom?" by Belle C. Harris, past national president of the W.R.C. of Emporia; "A Message from Kansas," by J. N. Harrison of Topeka, department commander of the G.A.R. of Kansas; address by Hon. Webster Davis, ex-Mayor of Kansas City and former Assistant Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of President McKinley; "The Heroes of '61," by P. H. Coney, past department commander of the G.A.R. of Kansas.

GAS COMING NEW YEAR'S.

Contract Drafted for Beach City Provides for Early Supply of Natural Fuel Fluid.

Under a contract which is being drafted by the Southern California Gas Company with the Long Beach Consolidated Gas Company natural gas will be delivered in the beach city about the first of the year.

A franchise for an eight-inch, high-pressure gas line has been obtained by the Southern California Gas Company in the county, and this main will also serve Vernon, Compton and the other towns between Los Angeles and Long Beach, with the single exception of Huntington Park.

The line will cost more than $300,000 to construct and will be capable of supplying not only the present needs of the territory to be served, but will also take care of future growth.

Huntington Park is left out of the territory to be served, for the reason that gas officials refused to bid for the franchise at the price demanded by the Huntington Park trustees, $1500.

Officials of the Southern California Gas Company state that, as the rates for outside towns are fixed upon cost of construction and physical valuation of the property, it would have been necessary to meet the Huntington Park situation by charging against Huntington Park people the $1500 demanded for service in the rates to be charged by charging the Long Beach, Vernon and Compton people rates to carry the franchise tax of Huntington Park.

The new line to Long Beach will be rushed to completion, and it is expected that service of the natural gas will begin at the beach at practically the same time as in Los Angeles.

In Bakersfield, where the natural gas is now in use, the change was made from artificial to natural gas without trouble.

BODY IN GARBAGE-CAN.

Baby a Few Hours Old Found Dead, Deserted By Its Mother. Police Weave Theory.

The body of a baby boy, apparently but a few hours old, was found in a garbage can in front of No. 140 Winston street, early yesterday morning. It was taken in charge by the Coroner, who is making an investigation.

The garbage men who collect in that section of the city refused to touch the can. People living in that vicinity, not knowing the reason, complained to the police and the health department. An investigation revealed the body.

The Coroner's office is of the opinion that the baby died at birth and the mother caused its body to be thus disposed of.

CITY IS OWNED BY HIBERNIANS.

STATE CONVENTION ASSEMBLES FOR WEEK'S SESSION.

Fine Programme of Pleasure Prepared in Addition to Business Transactions—Meeting Held Here for Third Time, a Record for Cities—Degree Work Planned.

The fortieth State convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians opened in this city last night with the arrival of the 250 delegates by special train from all parts of California. They were met at the depot by a reception committee, headed by President M. J. McGarry of this city. Other delegations will arrive this morning and it is believed that fully 350 delegates will be in attendance at the big class initiation this afternoon.

Local members of the order are preparing for one of the biggest and most important conventions ever held by the Hibernians in the State. This is the third State convention to be held in this city, a distinction enjoyed by no other city. Among the delegates who arrived last night were John Donoghue, State treasurer of the order and a member of the San Francisco Fire Commission, and Sarsfield McCarthy, manager of the Monitor, Archbishop Riordan's official publication.

All the local and visiting delegates will assemble at 9:30 o'clock this morning at Convention Hall, in the Walker Theater Building. Headed by a band they will march from there to the cathedral, where solemn convention mass will be celebrated.

A class of eighty candidates, the largest ever put through in this State, will be initiated this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by the degree team of the Los Angeles division. Members of the Ladies Auxiliary will be present and occupy a section of the hall reserved for them.

Supper will be served to the visiting delegates tonight at 6:30 in the Convention Hall annex, following which an entertainment will be given by members of the local division.

The first session of the convention will be opened tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock by President McGarry. Prayer will be offered by Rev. Terence Caraher. This session will be adjourned at noon and tomorrow afternoon the visitors will be entertained with trolley rides to the beaches.

Degree work, an entertainment, a dance and light refreshments constitute tomorrow night's programme, the Los Angeles Ladies' Auxiliary, A.O.H., being hostesses.

State convention sessions will be held morning and afternoon Tuesday and Wednesday. A grand ball will be held Tuesday night at Goldberg-Bosley assembly rooms, Flower and Sixteenth streets.

The election of officers will probably be held Tuesday. President McGarry, who has been the chief executive of the order in this State four years and who is the only man to serve two terms in this State will not be a candidate for re-election. The principal candidates for the presidency are John Cox of Oakland and John O'Gara and William Boyle of San Francisco. Many of the delegates expressed the opinion last night that Cox will probably be elected.

The convention will close Wednesday night with a banquet at Hotel Westminster. M. J. McGarry will be toastmaster and Rt. Rev. Bishop Conaty will deliver an address.

STOCK LETTER.

(Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The opening was moderately active and strong with some covering of shorts, put out on Friday when the traders tried hard to cause a downward movement. The technical position seemed to be strong but there was an absence of aggressive bullishness. Some of the traders tried to make a bull argument on the stock market out of Mr. Schiff's indorsement of the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, the gist of the contentions being that there was no reason for apprehension in the evidence of that candidate's strength and the probability of an entire change in the administration. The market showed little pressure before 11 o'clock and prices yielded to some extent, but stocks again met the same kind of support that has been rendered to them on every recession of late. Large interests are still accumulating stocks in a quiet way. The heavy reaction in the corn belt had a good effect on sentiment although as one experienced observer remarked, those who were in attendance were not looking for favorable developments.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The week just past saw few big changes in any commodity or products in the line of fresh fruits and vegetables and changes in staples only in butter and eggs. At the high prices of these two products, the call has slightly slackened up and the demand is not at all as heavy as previous to the rise. The market on cantaloupes has been active and is at the height of the season. Plums and peaches are also at their best and dealers should call attention of consumers to these things in order to stimulate a demand for canning stock. There were no changes yesterday morning and marketing as light as usual on the last day of the week.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

Demoralized Trading on Report of Darrow Acquittal—Little Attention Paid Any Issues.

Report of the Darrow verdict coming just at the opening of the market caused trading to be practically forgotten. The trial was discussed for an entire half-hour by the members who occupied the floor, and stocks were only heard of when Secretary Parsons called to order. Through it all, two sales were put over on the oil list, 1000 shares of California Midway having traded at 18¾, which closed the week steady, if not at any startling advance for the period. Mexican Petroleum common shares to the number of fifty were traded at $69, which is an upward trend and a slight increase in value since the last sale of the stock. Other stocks on the list were scarcely noticed and industrials, banks and bonds were passed over entirely.

New York Cotton Market.

(Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 113 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The market opened lower, on the cables and sold off at a net decline of about 14 points below previous close. During early trading McFadden brokers were steady sellers and some genuine hedge selling was reported and there was also some liquidation and short selling on reports of further rains in needed belt, but government report failed to confirm.

Some buying by Weld and McFadden during last half hour caused a moderate rally of about ten points. The expected government report of as good or better than last year on September 3 has now been fully discounted by the decline of over 200 points during past two weeks and any change to unfavorable weather should cause a good advance.

MANY NET LOSSES ON STEEL STOCK.

TARIFF VETO NEWS CAUSES REACTION TO SET IN.

Canadian Pacific Was Weakest of Standard Railway Shares, Being Depressed by Advices from the Dominion that There Is Opposition to Proposed Increase of Capital.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—A further tendency toward reaction was noted in today's session of the stock market, although opening prices gave promise of a continuance of the rally which came in yesterday's final dealings on the news that the Senate had refused to pass the steel tariff bill over the President's veto. Canadian Pacific was the weakest of the standard railway shares, the selling abroad and in this market doubtless being precipitated in a measure by advices from the Dominion that formidable opposition had arisen to the company's proposed stock increase. Other heavy railway stocks included Reading and Lehigh Valley, their decline being attributed by board-room gossip to liquidation for an important interest. Minor railroad stocks were moderately active at better prices while the industrials moved in both directions. Steel was well supported until the final half hour, when a selling movement of generous proportions sent the list to its lowest level of the session, leaving numerous net losses. The bond market was easy with total sales, par value, aggregating $930,000 United States government 4's declared 1-4 per cent. on call during the week.

The Financier will say: The clearing-house banks of New York still maintain their strong position, the report for the week ending Saturday having shown on calculations by the average system an increase of reserve amounting to $328,100, while the report figured on actual conditions revealed an unimportant decrease in the same item of only $356,350. Taking these figures of actual condition as showing the end of the week standing of the banks, the only changes of importance were an increase of $1,255,000 in loans, an increase of $1,179,000 in cash and an expansion of $10,815,000 in net deposits. The latter change more than offsets the result of the cash increase and the larger reserve requirement accounts for the decrease in reserve.

There are at the present time employed on the boats from Nome, Alaska, to San Diego in radiocommunication approximately 300 people. Applications from shipping companies for additional wireless operators for service on board trans-Atlantic lines are being received so rapidly by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company that the present school at Liverpool, England, is unable to supply the demand and a new school is being opened in London. It is estimated that already 100 ships have been supplied with relief operators since the Titanic disaster. There are at present over 1300 merchant ships now equipped with wireless apparatus.

The association is negotiating with the Marconi Wireless Company for the lease of one of the complete outfits now being installed as rapidly as possible on all large ships. Such an outfit in addition to the $2500 electrical equipment owned by the Y. M. C. A. Technical School, would make a great wireless school possible here in Los Angeles. Fine work is being done in wireless already by this association.

H. D. Hayes, who has been wireless operator on the Harvard for the past six months and previous to that time on the Yale will now devote all his time to the day and evening courses in radio-telegraphy. Instruction will be given in these courses from 9 o'clock to 4 daily and from 7 to 9 o'clock Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. The tuition fee includes full membership privilege in the association.

The two months' course will consist of a series of papers on the theory and practice of wireless of sufficient scope to enable students to operate and care for his set and to pass the government examination. The six months' course will include preparatory mathematics, electricity and magnetism, wiring and dynamo-electric machinery. It will be supplemented by papers on historical and current events and the development of wireless telegraphy.

Van Nuys Trustees Make Timely Preparation for Future Growth of Town—Harvest Operations Begun.

VAN NUYS, Aug. 17.—A meeting of citizens was called by William Campbell, president of the board of school trustees, after the laying of the corner stone of the new $40,000 grade school last Saturday. The object of the meeting was the consideration of the question of securing more ground for future school purposes. It was represented that as there was just so much land in the townsite and no more, it would be advisable to secure the necessary area now, before it is too late. The trustees were authorized to buy not less than ten nor more than twelve additional lots to meet future requirements.

By a vote of 46 to 18 the citizens have decided to form the Van Nuys Highway Lighting district. Active interest is being taken in the subject of lighting. One plan suggested contemplates the erection of ornamental poles with clustered lights throughout the entire sixteen miles of the boulevard. No definite plan has been adopted yet, although all opinions favor a generous use of light and handsome electroliers.

Bids for the construction of the new Presbyterian Church were opened last Thursday night. The contract will be awarded and work commenced soon.

Harvest operations have begun at the 7500 acres of beets in the Van Nuys district. The American Beet Sugar Company has a small army of harvesters at work.

The work of planting eight new orchards of peaches, apricots, plums and walnuts, in various parts adjacent to Van Nuys, comprising several hundred acres, has just been completed.

About eighty men and 100 horses and mules are engaged on tract construction work throughout this district.

Many new homes are being built and it is thought that the building operations may surpass those of July, which averaged one house a day.

W. P. Whitsett, sales manager for lots and acreage in the new town, reports increasing activity in ten-lot, two-acre pieces. This is the size plat usually selected for suburban family orchards and home sites.

Corp. Peckham of Co. F pitched for the First Battalion baseball team, is in great form. The blonde soldier boy struck out fifteen men in the game with the Third Battalion last Wednesday afternoon.

WORK BEGUN ON SCHOOL. CITY OFFICES ENLARGED.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

PASADENA, Aug. 17.—Work has been begun on a new cottage for the Pasadena Children's Training School, corner of Wilson avenue and Charlevoix street. It is to contain accommodations for fourteen boys and has been designed by C. F. Driscoll, a local architect. Every convenience for the youngsters will be provided.

The building, which will be about a $7000 improvement, has been presented to the institution by several philanthropically-inclined residents of the city. It will be a two-story structure.

The first floor will consist of a large day room, a matron's day room, a dining-room, a kitchen, a pantry and lavatory.

On the second floor will be bedrooms. The rooms are large enough so that two boys may sleep in each. The rooms will open upon large screened sleeping porches, where the cots may be placed in pleasant weather.

One of the features of the building will be a large fireplace in the day room. This will be constructed with ornamental tile, showing Dutch children in picturesque costumes. The walls will be papered with pictured paper and everything about the house will be designed for the comfort and entertainment of the children.

Driscoll is also preparing plans for the proposed addition to the Municipal Light building, adjoining the City Hall, and which is designed to accommodate the new city water department. The water department offices will be on the second floor of the present building, but in order that there may be sufficient space for the keeping of records, not only of this department but of other departments of the city government, a three-story addition will be built on the east end of the building. It will comprise three large fireproof vaults, each seven feet by eleven feet in dimensions.

In the rear of the second story of the Municipal Light building, where it will adjoin the vaults, will be constructed a drafting-room, to be nine feet by twenty-six feet in size, and to have light on the north, south and east sides.

Up to Date.

NEW BLOCK TO BE FIREPROOF.

Noteworthy Structure for Los Angeles Street.

Will Be Used for Store and Loft Purposes.

Other Important Enterprises Coming to Front.

Architectural plans for what will be a noteworthy addition to the long list of substantial commercial structures being erected on Los Angeles street have just been completed by E. C. Thorn. The building, which will be six stories in height and of the most metropolitan, fireproof type, will be constructed on the east side of the leading wholesale thoroughfare, 128 feet north of Sixth street, by Charles C. Chapman, local capitalist and owner of much valuable frontage in this city.

The block will be of the class "A," reinforced concrete type and will occupy a ground area of 50x110 feet. Its cost will be approximately $75,000. Two old frame cottages at present on the site will be removed during the coming week, following which excavation for the modern building will be begun. The structure will be completed during the present year.

The first floor will have a twenty-foot ceiling and will be devoted to two large storerooms. The five upper stories are to be divided into lofts. The front of the building will be faced with tile and will be of plain but attractive design. Two elevators will be installed.

The building for Chapman is only one of the many modern improvements for which permits will be taken out within the next few weeks and which will contribute to the swelling of the already record-breaking construction figures of the present year. Some of the noteworthy projects now on the boards of local architects follow:

Fred R. Dorn is making preliminary sketches for a twelve-story reinforced concrete apartment hotel to be erected by Robert Marsh on the southeast corner of Sixth street and Benton boulevard, the projection of which was announced exclusively in The Times during the past week. The plans, as they stand at present, call for a fireproof building containing 350 rooms, in suites of from two to five rooms each, and equipped with every modern hotel convenience. The site is 125x115 feet in size.

Parkinson & Bergstrom have completed plans for a four-story reinforced concrete factory building to be erected by the Ford Motor Car Company of Detroit at Seventh street and Santa Fe avenue and are now receiving bids from contractors. The dimensions of the structure will be 115x200 feet.

A four-story and basement brick apartment-house containing 144 rooms in two and three-room suites will be erected by C. W. Baker at Tenth and Francisco streets. The plans have been completed and the main contracts let. The improvement will cost approximately $60,000.

Train & Williams have completed plans for a three-story brick building to be erected on East Fourth street for F. W. Wachter and to be occupied by the Christian Mission and Industrial Association. The structure will be 75x100 feet in size and will contain a lobby, office, three storerooms, assembly-room, dining-room and kitchen on the first floor, with sixty sleeping-rooms and five baths on the second-story and dormitory facilities on the top floor.

Bids are being received by the Board of Education for the construction of a ten-room grammar school at Santa Barbara and Western avenues. The structure will be of brick, with plastered exterior, and will be 140x85 feet in size and two stories high. W. H. Illiesner is the architect.

A four-story brick hotel is projected by Bryan & Bradford for the northeast corner of Eighth and Hill streets. It is the intention of the builders to devote the first story of the structure to storerooms and to provide sixty-five guestrooms on the upper floors. Preliminary plans have been drawn by Noonan & Kysor.

Sketches have been prepared by Myron Hunt for a three-story brick store and apartment building to be erected by H. E. Huntington at the southeast corner of North Broadway and Workman street. The site is 100x130 feet in size.

The contract for the erection of a two-story brick building, projected by the Isaacs Bros. Company for the site adjoining the Majestic Theater on the south has been awarded to the Richards-Newstadt Construction Company. The structure will be of the old English style architecturally and will have a brick, plaster and half-timber face, the roof being of clay tile. An art store has taken a lease on the property.

Noonan & Kysor are preparing plans for a four-story brick apartment house to be built on Ingraham street near Bixel for W. A. Barker, of Barker Bros. It will contain eighty-four rooms in two and three-room suits, with private baths, and wall bells. Lobby, billiard and social rooms will be provided.

Garret & Bixby are taking bids for the erection of a three-story brick apartment-house on Flower street between Ninth and Tenth streets for J. A. Anderson and Clara Shatto. It will contain seventy-six rooms in two and three-room suites.

E. H. MacGibbon has been awarded the contract for the erection of a three-story brick apartment-house projected by J. William Roberts for a site at No. 1837 South Hope street. Roberts, who is an architect, has drawn his own plans. The building will contain eighty-six rooms and will cost approximately $45,000.

The Commonwealth Home Builders are preparing plans and will erect a three-story frame apartment-house on La Salle avenue for Miss Helen Morris. It will contain twenty-four rooms in three-room suits, with private baths and disappearing beds.

M. D. L. Scott is preparing plans for a three-story frame and plaster apartment-house to be erected on West Eleventh street for Mrs. E. H. Schuster.

BACKS HIS CONFIDENCE.

Believing Northwest Los Angeles to Be Coming Show District, Capitalist Projects Palatial Home for Section.

As the result of his confidence that the transformation of Bimini slough into the proposed Silver Lake Parkway is going to make of the northwestern portion of the city from Wilshire boulevard to Hollywood one vast high-class residential district E. M. McGillin, a local capitalist, is having plans drawn for one of the most beautiful homes in Los Angeles, which he will erect in the Windermere Park tract at Nos. 640-642 Kenmore avenue. The dwelling, with its grounds and a fine garage, will represent an outlay of approximately $50,000.

The house will occupy a high and sightly lot with a frontage of 120 feet on Kenmore and extending back 244 feet to a similar frontage on Alexandria avenue. The structure itself will be 72x75 feet in size and will contain fourteen large rooms, with three baths, a sun parlor and several sleeping porches. McGillin will make the place his permanent home.

The first story of the dwelling will be of stone construction, above which will be a half-timber and plaster effect. The roof will be of green tile. The finish throughout will be in hardwoods, high panels and beamed ceilings playing an important part in the treatment of the main rooms. The fixtures will be of special design, as will also the other ornamental features.

The reception hall will be 40x14 feet in size and will open into large living and dining-rooms. On the first floor will also be the library, music-room, breakfast-room and a sewing-room, in addition to the necessary kitchen and pantry space. Each of the five bedrooms will have a private dressing-room attached. The basement will contain laundry, wine cellar, storerooms and furnace-room. The closets throughout will be of unusual size and finished in cedar. The baths will be in tile, with solid porcelain fixtures.

The Alexandria avenue frontage will be converted into a tropical garden, a noteworthy feature of which will be a large Italian fountain. The place will add materially to the beauty of a section among whose charms will soon be enumerated a fine Carnegie library, the new State Normal School, the new Girls' High School and the Silver Lake Parkway, and where are already to be found many attractive homes.

ARDENT LOVE LETTER.

Clew to Whereabouts of Much-Sought Cowboy May Develop from Letter Received by Mexican Woman

Mrs. Maria Seibas, No. 715 San Fernando street, thought to be dying from the effects of poison which she declares under oath was administered to her by a rejected suitor, Pedro Martinez, alias Pete Martin, now a fugitive from justice, received a letter yesterday which she thinks was written by the young Mexican cowboy and secret service agent. It has been turned over to the detective department at the Central Station.

The epistle is postmarked Bellflower, and is signed "Joe Revera" at one place, and "Joe Bargas" in another.

The writer makes profuse declarations of love to the young woman, declares his heart is breaking from the affection he has for her, and says his soul is in torment. He begs her to make him the happiest man in the world by returning his affections and proving her love by joining him. The writer says he will wait at San Diego for her, but advises her to write him at Sumersey.

Central Station officers said yesterday they have no information relative to the whereabouts of Martinez. Whether the letter received by Mrs. Seibas was written by him they refuse to assert.

MARKET BACK AT NORMAL.

Busy Autumn Predicted in Porterville District.

Covina Planters Are Invading Ducor Section.

Record Price Paid for Raw Land by Southerner.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 17.—Recovering with a rush from the momentary inactivity of last week, the realty market is already giving promise of one of the busiest autumn seasons in the history of Central California. The usual fall rush of eastern and middle western farmers, attracted by various publicity devices, not to mention low rates, is already on, and within the week the dealers reported many a deal in escrow.

There have been no large deals for the past week, and comparatively little has been doing in the alfalfa lands, although a few transfers were noted in the dairy district.

Increased activity in the raw orange land areas has sent prices soaring and while plenty of Ducor district property could have been had six months ago at $75 per acre, very little is to be had for much less than double that price now.

C. B. Jackson, who recently sold his grove in the El Mirador district to an eastern investor, has the honor of making the largest purchase of the week, having purchased from Col. C. S. McLaury, the president of the Tulare County Power Company, and Harry Thompson, a local investor, eighty acres of young trees, in the El Mirador foothills. Although the trees have been set only a few months, Jackson paid $50,000 for the tract. He is to improve the property still further and hopes to make of it one of the show groves of this district.

NEW RECORD SET.

A new record has been set in the prices for bare land, a Long Beach man having the unique record of paying the largest price for bare property yet to be recorded in this district. M. H. Bardwell of the sea coast town has purchased a forty-acre tract on Lindsay road, in the heart of the orange district, paying $12,000, practically cash, for the property. There are no improvements on the holding, and the new owner, who is said to have bought for a son, expects to go to work on the development of the land in a short time.

Webster Reed of Aracee, N. Y., was the buyer early in the week of a ten-acre orange grove in the Strathmore district, having purchased from J. B. Russell. The tract is all in young trees. Reed will leave shortly for the East with the intention of returning to this district to make his home as soon as he can dispose of his holdings in the Empire State.

M. S. Sayre, who recently sold out his alfalfa lands in the Tulare alfalfa and dairy district, has gone back into the alfalfa business and has just closed for the purchase of forty acres of fine dairy land from C. T. Slauson, the property being in the North Pixley district on Hanford road. The consideration is not given.

The greatest activity in the county at the present time is in the Ducor district. Dozens of Covina people have become interested, directly and indirectly in the highlands along the line of the Southern Pacific, the property to which they have turned for investment occupying a ridge between Fresno and Bakersfield. Probably 1500 acres are now being planted in the section.

Charles Grafton, an experienced Covina orchardist, has purchased a forty-acre tract in the district and has a force of men leveling and grading, and preparing for an irrigation system to cover the entire eighth section. He will plant to early navels next spring.

J. N. Roof of Claremont, who is the owner of a thirty-acre tract, just purchased, is preparing to add to a young orange orchard which he planted last fall an olive orchard. Roof states that he has already been offered a long time contract for all the olives he produces from the trees, and at a price which will ensure him a fine return on the investment.

H. D. Blanchard, a Los Angeles broker, has added forty acres to his already large Ducor holdings, and in company with Roof and J. W. Righter of Covina will put in a pumping plant. He has a force of men at work on the leveling of the land for planting to olives in the spring.

MANY SOUTHERN BUYERS.

Dr. Albert Shuechow, a Los Angeles physician, closed this week for twenty acres of raw lands in the Atkinson district in the foothills, planning to start work at once on planting ten acres of the land to early navels and ten to olives. He may possibly plant the entire twenty to olives on a partnership with others who have recently bought there.

Thomas Campbell, a Los Angeles tailor, has invested in twenty acres of the Atkinson lands and is at work on plans for the development of the property. He is undecided whether to plant all to olives, or part olives and part oranges. Exploration for a water system is now in progress on the tract.

S. R. Earnest, a broker of Los Angles, has purchased forty acres of orchard land in section 21 of the Moxley district and in company with J. A. Alexander of Los Angeles, and L. C. Wilson of Covina, is erecting a fine pumping plant as part of an irrigation system for eighty acres. Earnest will plant to navels.

Cheap Fuel.

LOS ANGELES TO BECOME NEW GIANT OF INDUSTRY.

Natural Gas and Oil Will Make City a Second Pittsburgh in Manufacturing and a Mart of Commerce Second to None in the World—Producers Fear Change from Oil to Gas, but Effect Will Be Minimized.

THE construction of the big pipe line system by the Midway Gas Company for transporting natural gas from the Buena Vista Hills gas fields in Kern county to Los Angeles is causing some apprehension among producers in the southern oil fields as to the possible effect it will have on the free oil market in this section of the State.

Up to the present time the southern producers have been protected in a measure against an influx of cheap oil from the valley fields by the Tehachepi Mountains. A railroad rate equal to 42 cents per barrel has prevented shipping and none of the large marketing companies have ever been disposed to go to the expense of constructing a pipe line over the mountains, due probably to the physical difficulties rather than the expense. The steep grade and high altitude would make it almost impossible to send Kern county oil through any pipe line in the winter season.

For these reasons the southern producer has been secure in his markets and has received from 25 to 45 cents more per barrel than his brother producer in the valley fields. But natural gas gives the situation another complexion. There is no question but that it is the intention of the Midway Gas Company and the Pacific Light and Power Company to furnish this gas for industrial as well as domestic purposes.

Oil is the best and most economical fuel in the world, with one exception, and that exception is natural gas, and it is not doubted that manufacturers will quickly change from oil to gas when the opportunity offers. Not only will manufacturers change, but in the present case probably hotels, apartment-houses, office buildings, etc., which have been using large quantities of oil. That this will cut into the province of fuel oil can be very readily seen.

FACTORIES ARE INTERESTED.

As a matter of fact, some of these large manufacturing concerns are apparently already figuring on securing natural gas for fuel. One of them recently renewed a contract for its fuel oil, of which it consumes large quantities. Instead of renewing for a five-year period, as has always been its custom, it refused to close up for more than one year, no doubt intending to make arrangements for natural gas as soon as it is available.

The Midway Gas Company, which is a subsidiary of the Pacific Light and Power Company, is rushing work on the first of its lines—a twelve-inch affair—and has but about forty miles of pipe yet to lay, and it is stated that it will be ready to test by October 1. As soon as this line is completed work will be commenced on a parallel line, which will, however, be sixteen inches in diameter. This will give the company a capacity for handling all the gas that will be required for years to come.

The success of the enterprise, of course, depends on the supply of gas, but the company is evidently satisfied on that score. The amount of gas developed on the Honolulu Oil Company's property where the gas company secures its supply, is said to be 75,000,000 cubic feet per day, with no indications but that it can be maintained for years. As the consumption of gas at the present time in Los Angeles and vicinity is said to approximate 20,000,000 cubic feet, it is seen that the Midway Gas Company has a little surplus for distribution "around the edges," if required.

All of the consumers of fuel oil no doubt have their contracts made, and these contracts fortunately have various periods of time to run, so the change from fuel oil to natural gas will of necessity be gradual, and the effect on the producer will be less of an injury than if the change were sudden.

The effect in general will be to lower the price of crude at the wells, thus in a measure equalizing the price throughout the State, but those producers who are marketing their product through the Standard, Union or Associated will not be hit so hard as those who still insist on marketing their own oil. There are only a few of them left, but they are certain to feel the effect of natural gas.

A GREAT INDUSTRIAL CITY.

There is a feature of the natural gas news that has been little referred to, but which in reality is the big thing in connection with the entire business—that is the industrial development that should follow the utilization of this wonderful fuel that has for years been going to waste in this State. The Los Angeles booster can now go to the limit. The fellow with an imagination can soar as high as he pleases. Who may say that Los Angeles is not to become the Pittsburgh of the Pacific Coast? With the opening of the Panama Canal the development of our great harbor; with raw material of every description within easy reach, with an abundance of the cheapest and best fuel on earth; with the Pacific, the highway of the nations, spread out before us, and the greatest markets in the world beckoning to us, who may say that Los Angeles will not become one of the greatest industrial cities of the entire world. And this should not cause a chill to creep up the spinal column of the esthetic. We still will have our climate left, you know.

But as a matter of fact, the vision is almost bewildering. As soon as Accepted Design for San Francisco's Four-Million-Dollar City Hall.

Magnificent structure which will house municipal departments of Bay City, from plans of Bakewell & Brown, successful firm in keenly-contested architectural competition.

The San Francisco Way.

BAY CITY TO RUSH WORK ON SPLENDID CITY HALL.

Will Have Four-Million-Dollar Municipal Building Completed by Exposition Year—Fifty Thousand Dollar Cash Prize Paid Winner of Great Competition for Selection of Architectural Plans.

SAN FRANCISCO has taken an important forward step in the realization of its cherished ambition to erect a magnificent building for the housing of its municipal departments by accepting designs for a $4,000,000 City Hall, which will take rank among the greatest public buildings of the United States. The plans selected were chosen after one of the most noteworthy architectural competitions ever held on the continent, and were the unanimous choice of the jury of award. If the ambitions of the Bay City are realized, the splendid structure projected will be open to the public by the time the 1915 Exposition is under way.

The competition was open to all the architects of San Francisco on equal terms, and was participated in by seventy-three firms and individuals. As in the case in all open competitions, a few protests were entered against the decision of the judges, but those taking exception to the rulings were far in the minority and the general opinion in the Bay City is that the best design won.

The firm of Bakewell & Brown, winners of the award, received a prize of $50,000 in cash and will be given a sum equal to 6 per cent. of the cost of the building as an architectural commission. Twenty other competitors received $1000 each as prize awards. The jury was composed of the following well-known architects: Walter Cook of New York, John Galen Howard, John Reid, Jr., and Frederick H. Meyer of San Francisco, together with Mayor Rolph, Paul Bancroft of the Public Buildings Committee, and Daniel C. Fraser of the Board of Public Works.

AVERAGE HIGH.

"The average of at least one-third of the designs submitted was high," declares a writer in the Building and Industrial News of San Francisco. "There were at least six designs which could appropriately have been given first place and the selection of the winning plan was no easy task for the jury.

"The plans," he adds, "ran the entire gamut of architectural style and rendering. One or two looked like designs that might be found on eighteenth century wall papers or tapestries, while others had the appearance of libraries, convents, depots, etc., and were dressed in styles which might be termed Spanish, Neo-Greek, mission, L'Art-Nouveau, Germanesque, etc. The most surprising thing was the fact that there were so many poor floor plans throughout the lot, proper consideration not being given to either circulation or lighting. Many were arranged with entrances on the corners. On the whole, however, the competition was a successful one."

Writing in the same publication, John Bakewell, Jr., of the successful firm, describes the essential points of the accepted design briefly as follows:

"The distinctive feature of the winning design for the City Hall is a large dome which is expressed in both plan and facade.

"In plan this dome runs up through the various stories as a rotunda forming the center of circulation on each floor.

"On the first floor the stairs up to the Council room come down under this dome while entrances into the two great first floor groups, that of finance on the one hand, and that of records on the other, are directly off from this space under the dome.

"These two groups of the first floor have been simplified so as to form two large rooms or offices, lighted both from outside and from skylights.

"On the floors above, the rotunda becomes the center of circulation; the galleries about the dome forming the connecting ties uniting the two halves of the building.

"The general facade consists of a two-story order set up on a rather high base. This builds up into a larger order for the central feature which, in turn, leads up to the dome. In this way the interest is gradually brought up to the central feature."

San Francisco's new $4,000,000 municipal building will front on Van Ness avenue, and will look directly down Fulton street. The building will have the heroic dimensions of 390x273 feet, and will tower high above the other public buildings which will eventually be reared in the Bay City's now definitely located civic center. The structure will occupy the central position in the large square bounded by Van Ness avenue, McAllister, Polk and Grove streets.

BRIGHT DAYS FOR MEXICO.

Industrial Improvement on Many Sides.

Big Irrigation Enterprise on Rio Grande.

Increased Oil, Cotton, Silk Production.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CITY OF MEXICO (Mex.) Aug. 14.—The prospective completion of the Southern Pacific Railway of Mexico into Guadalajara in the fall of next year is being made the occasion of the formation of elaborate plans for holding an exposition in that city in celebration of the event. For the purpose of carrying out this project there has been organized a National Exposition of Industries and Belles Arts, which is composed of many of the leading business men and citizens of Western Mexico. The exposition will open November 30, 1913. It will consist of an exhibit of native products and manufactured articles of the territory through which the Southern Pacific passes. The completion of this railroad to Guadalajara will be of an epoch-making character, as it will give to that city a broad scope of territory of Central Mexico and an outlet to the upper Pacific Coast region of the country. The new line is now finished down the coast to the city of Tepic. There is yet to be constructed the division between Tepic and Orendain, the latter being a station on the Ameca division of the National Railways of Mexico, twenty-five miles west of Guadalajara. The uncompleted link is about 100 miles long, but there are involved in the work enormous construction difficulties, the whole distance being made up practically of a series of mountains that will have to be tunneled, and deep chasms that must be spanned by bridges. The Southern Pacific has a concession from the Mexican government for building its own line between Orendain and Guadalajara to the City of Mexico, and it is understood this latter construction work will be started as soon as Orendain is reached. When the road is finished to Orendain the Southern Pacific will have established a through line between that point and the west coast territory of Mexico as well as points in Arizona and California.

INCREASED OIL PRODUCTION.

Word comes from Tepic that the oil production of the different fields of that east coast region for the month of July was larger than any month since the development of the industry was started. During that month more than 300,000 tons of oil were exported through the port of Tampico, most of it being destined for Texas ports. The bar tax, as it is called, imposed by the Mexican government, is 50 cents per ton on all oil that passes through the deep water channel connecting the port of Tampico with the gulf. Wonderful development of the oil resources of that region is in progress. Many of the larger American oil producers as well as big British financial interests are active in exploiting the different fields.

GIGANTIC ENTERPRISE.

Confirmation has been received here of the report that a syndicate of Mexicans operating under the name of the Compania Agricola de Rio Bravo, S. A., has acquired a solid tract of 1,000,000 acres of land situated in the extreme northeastern portion of the country, one side of it bordering the Rio Grande for more than 100 miles. Among the men interested in the company are J. Serrano of Rio Bravo, president; P. Suso of Horreon, R. Madraso of the City of Mexico, Jose Arrenvilleago of Torreon, Carlos Michand of Matamoros, Luis Vierna of Torreon, P. Noriego of Rio Bravo, and Alfred Guerro of Lattello. When this large tract of land was taken over by the new owners there was in progress of construction a large system of irrigation thereon. This project will be immediately pushed to completion. It will bring about the reclamation of about 600,000 acres of land. The water supply will be taken from the San Juan River.

The main canal will be 100 miles long and there will radiate from it several hundred miles of laterals. Much of the land will be devoted to growing sugar cane, and the company has in contemplation the erection of several sugar mills and a refinery. In this connection it is noted that there is much interest being taken at this time in the development of sugar land in the east coast part of the country, particularly along the Panuco River, where several Americans have gone in during the last few years and established large sugar plantations and are conducting them with much financial success.

CREATING MODERN EDENS OUT OF WESTERN WASTE.

Life-Giving Fluid Stored in Mighty Reservoirs for Sprinkling Future Garden-spots Where Desert Sands Now Blister—Largest Private Irrigation System on the Continent—Reclaims Immense Area.

FEATURES of the largest private irrigation enterprise upon the continent, near Castroville, Tex.:

Its cost is $10,000,000, and it will reclaim 100,000 acres, adding more than $30,000,000 to value of the land.

The main dam will be 166 feet high, its length 1450 feet, and it will contain 250,000 cubic yards of concrete. The diversion dam will be 48 feet high.

An entirely new and novel construction feature of the dam is a seepage and inspection tunnel which extends through the length of the structure.

The main dam will create a reservoir that will afford a water supply sufficient to cover 60,000 acres five feet deep. This is enough for five years' supply for the 100,000 acres.

The main canal will be 22 miles long and will have capacity of 850 cubic feet of water a second. Many laterals will lead from it.

Two sets of syphons, one 1300 feet long and the other 1150 feet long, will carry the water under the bed of the Medina River at two different crossings. Each set consists of two concrete tubes of eight-foot diameter.

CASTROVILLE (Tex.) Aug. 11.—What nature has failed to do for the semi-arid region of Southwest Texas, human ingenuity and British money are rapidly accomplishing near here with a project that will overcome the shortage of rainfall for growing crops upon more than 100,000, acres of land.

Already several hundred thousand dollars have been expended upon dams and an irrigation canal system. Before plans adopted are fulfilled, a total investment of approximately ten million dollars will have been made by the British syndicate, of which Dr. F. S. Pearson is the head. The operating subsidiary is the Medina Valley Irrigation Company.

An idea of the magnitude of the enterprise may be had when it is stated that the main dam across the Medina River will be 166 feet high. If a 14-story building of average height were placed beside this dam, the top of the two structures would be almost on the same level. More than 1500 men are employed in the various features of the construction work.

Immediately after water flows systematically upon the land its value will be increased from about $20 an acre to $280 an acre, or a total increase of more than $30,000,000 for the 100,000 acres. It is said to be the largest private irrigation enterprise in the United States.

DISTRIBUTION PLAN.

The first unit will supply 60,000 acres of land, and when the plans for enlarging the system are carried out, the other 40,000 acres will be provided for.

The main dam is about one-half finished. Preliminary to beginning construction of the main dam a standard-gauge railroad nineteen miles long was built to the dam-site from Dunlay, a station on the Southern Pacific. This road will only be used while the construction work is in progress, the purpose being to enable the transportation of material and supplies.

The water supply for irrigation will be obtained by storing the flood waters of the upper Medina River. The storage dam is at a point where this stream emerges through a comparatively narrow gorge from a rough hilly region on the coastal plain. The catchment area above this point has an area of 700 square miles, or 448,000 acres.

This basin has been carved by erosion and solution from a series of level-bedded limestone rocks of great thickness and the resulting topography is extremely rugged. The rim of the basin has an altitude of 1800 to 2200 feet above sea level and the stream is at an elevation varying from 1500 feet at the head water to 920 at the dam.

Geologically the reservoir is in the southeast corner of the region knew as the Edwards plateau. The rocks which outcrop the higher elevations are of a formation known as the Edwards limestone, a very hard, flinty stone. The Glen Rose formation which forms the lower part and floor of the catchment area is impervious and consists of a series of limestones containing a large proportion of argillaceous matter or clay and totaling 450 to 600 feet in thickness. Under the Glen Rose formation in the valley is the Travis Peak sandstone, a water-bearing rock.

The rainfall on the upper Medina rock as deducted from government records for the stations immediately surrounding, has averaged 28 inches for 20 years. It is estimated, that the average yield of the basin will be not less than 130,000 acre-feet per annum.

RESERVE SUPPLY.

Besides the supply from rainfall the company can obtain water for considerable land by sinking artesian wells to the Travis Peak sandstone as underlying the catchment area. Test wells already sunk indicate a strong artesian pressure at points in the basin just above the reservoir and the company has secured the right to drill wells for its use on a considerable acreage of the most favorably located lands in the basin. When these wells are sunk the water will be allowed to flow into the reservoir and will be utilized on lands contiguous to the railways and the lands already owned by the company.

Owing to the fact that the Guadalupe River, the adjacent stream to the northeast, is at about 250 feet greater elevation than the Medina, it is possible, by constructing two moderate-sized earth-dams and about twenty miles of canal, with one long tunnel through the divide, to divert the flood waters of 400 square miles of the headwaters of that stream into the Medina reservoir. This project would add about 40 per cent. to the supply of water. The water rights of the Guadalupe River are owned by the company. The feasibility of this undertaking is under investigation.

The spillway elevation of 1072 feet will be 152 feet above the bed of the river, and provision is made for the future installation of movable gates eight feet high, making the maximum depth of water at the 1070-foot elevation 161 feet.

CONSTRUCTION FEATURES.

A number of unusual construction features are embraced in the project. The height of the main dam will be 166 feet. Its extreme width at the base will be 136 feet and on top sixteen feet. The length on the crest will be 1450 feet. Of this length, however, above half will be made up of two wings which will be less than fifty feet in height. The canyon, which is spanned by the main part of the dam, is 610 feet across from bluff to bluff.

The dam will be of solid concrete construction with large "plums" for boulders embedded in the mass and it will contain 265,000 cubic yards of concrete. Preliminary to commencing construction of the dam, diamond-drill borings were made at four different points to a depth of fifty feet below the river bed and one boring was made to a depth of over eighty feet. Thorough tests were made in these pits and holes of seepage and the results were pronounced highly satisfactory. The foundation of the structure rests on limestone rock.

One of the features of the dam is a seepage and inspection tunnel four feet wide and six and one-half feet high which extends through the length of the main portion of the structure at a height of twelve feet above its base and near the up-stream base. This will enable the inspection of the moisture conditions of the dam. Wells have been already dug in the floor of this tunnel at points four to five feet apart and to a depth of thirty feet below the bed of the river. The purpose of these holes is to indicate the condition of seepage under the dam and to relieve any upward hydraulic pressure tending to lift the upper edge of the dam.

FOUNDATION WALLS.

A series of wells thirty-two feet deep below the bed of the river and spaced six feet apart are built above the upper toe of the dam and into these cement grout is forced under heavy pressure. The upper foundation toe extends twelve feet below the foundation. The overflow water will pass through a natural spillway situated at one end, and above the dam this spillway will have a length of 1200 feet and water from it will be delivered into a rocky ravine which enters the river about one-third of a mile below the dam.

The height of the diversion dam will be forty-eight feet and its maximum width at base forty-six feet. It will be curved with the convex side upstream, the radius being 700 feet. The flood-water will pass over this dam. The headworks of the canal will be at the west end of the diversion dam.

The Pearson Engineering corporation of New York City is supervising the work of building the dams, the Medina Valley Irrigation Company doing the construction work. The construction plants of the company at the main and diversion dams are large and modernly equipped. At the main dam are the storehouses, commissaries, mess-room, machine shops, carpenter shop, offices, quarters for laborers, hospital, boiler house consisting of six 150-horse power boilers, engine-rooms where electric power for lights and searchlights is developed, cement shed with a capacity of 12,000 barrels and other buildings.

WATER SURFACE AREA.

The area of water-surface formed by the main dam will be 6257 acres and the capacity 300,000 acre-feet. This will afford a supply of water sufficient to cover 60,000 acres five feet deep or for two and a half years' supply for the lands. The diversion dam will cover an area of between 300 and 400 acres and will form a lake four miles long, forty-eight feet deep at the diversion dam, and six feet deep at the toe of the main dam.

The main canal will be twenty-two miles long and at its terminus it will radiate into a number of laterals which will carry the water over the big tract of land that is now being cleared and made ready for cultivation. The canal and its laterals will be concrete lined. They are now well advanced towards completion. This canal will be carried under the bed of the Medina river by means of reinforced concrete syphons at two different points. Each set of syphons will consist of two eightfoot tubes. One of the sets will be 1300 feet long and the other 1150. These syphons are of themselves remarkable pieces of construction work. It is planned to be prepared to deliver water to the land in time for next season's crops.

Besides bringing this large acreage into an intense state of cultivation the promoters of the enterprise are arranging to establish four modern towns and a number of industrial enterprises upon the property. Skirting the artificial lake are picturesque ridges of hills, and upon the slopes of these elevations sites are being laid off for resort homes by many San Antonio people. Connecting San Antonio with the lake will be an interurban electric railway which the Pearson interests will construct. This railway will be about twenty-five miles long.

Everything considered, it is one of the largest private industrial projects now on foot in this country.

LEASING FIELD ACTIVE.

F. W. Kadletz, manager of the business leasing department of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., reports the first two weeks in August, usually the dullest month in the real estate business, crowded with many deals closed and under way. Among those just closed are the following:

Torrance, Marshall & Co., from T. W. Furlong, lease of storeroom and basement, No. 625 South Hill street, for four years, total rental, $18,000. J. W. Wolters, to Torrance, Marshall & Co., Inc., loft at No. 635½ South Hill street for four years, $12,000. Mrs. Hattie C. Crary to the Golden State Film Exchange, Inc., storeroom at No. 514 West Eighth street, five years, total rental, $10,500. J. C. H. Ivins to S. Trod & Co., storeroom at No. 944 South Figueroa, five years, $3500. Storeroom and basement at No. 601 Washington street, E. Arndsteen to J. C. Olson, for three years. Mrs. Louis Bourman to D. The South Coast.

GROWING DEMAND FOR BEACH SITES.

HOME BUILDERS FLOCKING TO POPULAR SHORE FRONT.

Interest in Real Estate Lively from Bay City to Balboa—Ten Thousand Dollar Library for Huntington Beach — Newport Scene of Activity.

BALBOA, Aug. 17.—More than ever are the cities and towns of the South Coast becoming known as places for homes, and property all along the line is making rapid advance in value. There are scarcely any of the beach homes that are not occupied. The whole coast is teeming with activity.

Interest in real estate has taken quite a spurt in Bay City during the last week or so. Several new houses are in the course of erection and more are contemplated in the near future.

The board of trustees of the Huntington Beach Public Library has practically decided to create a fund for building a public library in this city. It is expected that the building will cost about $10,000. Ground for its location has been offered by a local property owner.

The High School trustees of the same place have arranged to purchase about two and a half acres adjoining the present building on Seventeenth street, the additional land to be devoted to a practical course in agriculture.

The franchise for supplying Huntington Beach with gas has been sold to the West Coast Gaslight and Fuel Company, which has agreed to provide gas early this fall. This was the last public utility needed to give Huntington Beach every modern convenience and will greatly enhance the desirability of the city as a residence point.

There are more homes in course of erection at Huntington Beach than at any other time in the city's history, since 1905. Some of these are of the bungalow style, built to house comfortably a family of six, but several are of more imposing architecture.

Street work is shortly to be begun in various portions of the Vista del Mar tract, where some difference of opinion among property holders in regard to the grade has been holding back the work. It is proposed to continue the improvements along liberal lines.

NEWPORT ACTIVITIES.

A two-story apartment-house is contemplated for Newport in the near futdre by a Los Angeles capitalist. This will be of great advantage to the little city, as accommodations have been at a premium all the season. The project is as yet in a tentative stage.

The bridge over the Rivo Alto has been widened to quite an extent so as to accommodate the large automobile traffic that is daily flowing into Newport. Fishing in the canals and the Santa Ana River has been good recently and has become a popular sport.

The Dam-Rousselle Investment Company's agents have been doing a rushing business during the last few days in the oil districts around Whittier and Fullerton. Somewhere near $15,000 worth of property has been sold in that vicinity during the last week. Newport is the nearest beach town to these points, and as soon as the Pacific Electric finishes electricizing the Southern Pacific from Santa Ana to Newport, will be an admirable outlet for the products of this locality.

The street work, which has been rushed in Newport, has been stopped for a short time owing to the fact that oil could not be had in large enough quantities, but will soon be remedied.

The people of East Newport are anxiously awaiting the completion of the government survey of Newport harbor. When the harbor lines are established, it is said, some extensive improvements will be made along the water front. Property values along the bay and in fact all over East Newport are advancing.

A. Mohr of South Pasadena has recently purchased an ocean-front lot at Sunset Beach and is preparing plans for a six-room cottage. The construction will be of the mission style, with the living-room occupying the entire width of the property, and will have a roof garden.

Miss Elizabeth Sullivan of Hollywood has completed the plans for a six-room cottage, which will be erected on the Bayside corner of Sunset drive and Twenty-second street. It will be an attractive beach bungalow with broad verandas.

The electric street lights at Sunset Beach are now installed and are filling a long-felt want, being appreciated, not alone by the visiting public, but by the residents at large.

PALACE TO CROWN HILL.

Pittsburgh Millionaire to Erect Costly Mansion on Newly Acquired Site—Residents Boosting New Park.

SOUTH PARADENA, Aug. 17.—The Newcomb Estate and Deyo, of Binghamton, N. Y., have sold to Turner & Stevens of Pasadena, and South Pasadena, a fifty-foot lot on Mission street, between Mound and Fremont avenue, improved with a brick business block. The undertaking parlors of Turner, Stevens & Berry occupy the lower floor, and on the second floor are two living apartments. The reported consideration is $10,000.

Another large sale of the week was that of the home of Mrs. Russell Conover, which was bought by Hugh B. Brown of Philadelphia. The place is on the corner of Milan avenue and Laurel street, Oneonta Park, and consists of a lot 100x172 feet, improved with a handsome residence. The consideration is given at $12,000.

The Bowles estate has sold to F. W. Shuckart of Wingate, N. M., a lot on Glendon Way, between El Centro and Monterey road, 50x160 feet in size, improved with a bungalow. The consideration is not announced.

Milton Bartley, a Pittsburgh millionaire, has purchased six and one-half acres in the northern part of the city, where he will build a home costing $75,000. He has been several months acquiring the acreage, which lies on a hill, and was purchased from several different owners.

Ernest V. Sutton of Oak street has been enlarging his artistic home. Four additional rooms, as well as sleeping porches, have been added to the house, interior partitions have been taken out, and the staircase made narrower. Charles Manwarring has remodeled the garage in the rear of his premises at Mission street and Brent avenue, into a modern five-room bungalow facing Brent avenue.

Preston McKinney of Los Angeles has had plans prepared for a seven-room bungalow to be built in this city. It will have concrete foundation, shake siding, composition roof, and brick porch front.

The beauty of Garfield Park has been brought to the notice of many by the recent Fourth of July celebration, and the presentation of Shakespeare's "As You Like It," by the Egan Dramatic School, and now a determined effort is being made to secure it as a public park. The property now belongs to the Southern Pacific, but it is thought it can be purchased, or leased for a long term of years.

STRICTLY UP TO DATE.

New Westlake-Avenue Apartment-house of Attractive Design and Substantial Construction.

One of the most up-to-date and substantial of the many apartment-houses now under construction in the exclusive Westlake district is that which is being erected by H. Stanley Benedict and Gardner H. Narbonne at No. 737 Westlake avenue. The structure, which was planned by C. C. Rittenhouse, will embody many noteworthy features.

The building will be three stories in height above a high basement, and will be of brick construction. It will contain nine three-room and nineteen two-room apartments, each with tile-floored and wainscoted bath, kitchen and separate dressing-room. Wall, disappearing and door beds will be installed. The floors throughout will be of hardwood and the general finish will be birch, with a mahogany effect. The entrance will be in marble, tile and terra cotta.

The basement will be largely given over to an amusement-room. A large sun parlor on the roof will also be a feature. Electric elevator service will be provided. The lot is 50x165 feet in size and high and sightly. The total investment is given by the owners at $70,000.

Brentwood Place

"Where the Mountains Meet the Sea"

The Moonlight scenes from this great promontory, 865 feet above the ocean, with the myriads of lights from the Resorts along the Beach, are indescribable.

By day the views of Mountain, Sea and Canyon—the sunrise over the peaks of the Sierras and the far famed sunsets of the Pacific are to be seen from the heights of BRENTWOOD PLACE in all their grandeur.

We regret that present lack of accommodations will not permit of every prospective purchaser spending at least twenty-four hours in this delightful spot, for then, and then only, would you be able to fully appreciate its many charms.

Daylight vistas alone were sufficient to convince crowds of eager buyers last Sunday that this was the very choicest home place in all the Southland.

Seven dwellings, for occupancy within 90 days, were contracted for, and a total of twenty-seven building sites were readily purchased by men and women who departed with "satisfaction" plainly written on their faces. Bargain hunters found just what they had been looking for, and many "shoppers" have now ceased looking, for the attractions of BRENTWOOD PLACE proved to be irresistible, and they b-o-u-g-h-t. IMPROVEMENTS IN SANTA MONICA REPRESENT MANY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Every Method of Quick Transportation Being Adopted. New Venice and Palms Boulevard Will Eliminate Four Miles From Present Route Between Los Angeles and Santa Monica. City Clerk Reports Present Valuation of Santa Monica Property at $11,944,815—An Increase of $1,600,000 Over Last Year.

accessible to the heart of the business, shopping and theater center of Los Angeles, as her closest city home district.

Already Santa Monica with her five car lines, her coming subway and her present automobile roads is regarded as the most accessible Beach City that there is, but with present improvements being planned, even this record will be outdistanced.

The new subway must inevitably be established in the very near future with transportation conditions in Los Angeles in the congested state that they are. This subway will undoubtedly be one of the greatest minimizers of time, according to the plans being considered for it, yet known in the West. It is possible that even the New York subway with its boasted high-speed schedule now existing between Brooklyn and Harlem and the Bronx will not surpass it.

NEW BOULEVARD TO LESSEN MOTORING DISTANCE.

A new boulevard is now to be added to the present labyrinth of world-noted automobile roads for which Santa Monica has long been famous.

This new road is planned to eliminate four miles from the present length of the trip between Los Angeles and Santa Monica. It will be twenty feet in breadth and will go from the city limits of Los Angeles, to within a very short distance of the city limits of Santa Monica. A large portion of the way it will run along the Venice Short Line, and will itself be the one Automobile Air Line from Los Angeles to Santa Monica.

Work will commence on this new road in just a few weeks. It will be one of the finest roadbeds yet established, in point of construction. Many carloads of rock will be required for the work on it, as well as gangs of hundreds of men and all of the accessory steam rollers, shovels and other equipment usually required for such gigantic undertakings.

This new road will, as it is planned, greatly minimize the present immense traffic on Washington Boulevard, and will in fact, be an easy rival of this road in both substantiality of construction and general attractiveness. Work will likely be complete on this new road by the beginning of the next season, according to report.

A plan is now on foot for the tunneling of the hill at Marine Street, Santa Monica, to lessen the present congested state of traffic, as well as to bring the suburbs of the Santa Monica beach in closer touch with the suburbs of this district.

If this plan is carried out, as there is every reason to believe it will be, it will materially add to the advantages of the entire surrounding district.

TREMENDOUS INCREASE OF BUILDING PERMITS THIS YEAR.

If there ever was a city that demonstrated the proverbial "mushroom" propagation, as to its building activity, certainly that city is Santa Monica. Seemingly almost over night entire communities spring into existence that previously consisted of nothing but barren acreage, or bean or barley patches.

Put a few months ago, the present J. J. Davis subdivision of the Palisades was merely a well located acreage, with not the minutest sign of habitation. Suddenly it was thrown upon the market—reservations on it were snapped up for some of the finest homes in Southern California, other homesites were also sold for the higher class bungalow homes and building commenced immediately.

The handsome streets were installed, with every detail known to the highest class city property by way of improvements, following.

It was not so very long ago, before the famous Brentwood Park could only boast of a few remote houses. Now it is recognized as one of the handsomest home parks in the world, with palatial homes in every direction fit for kings to inhabit, and every other detail of imposing grounds, magnificent drives and walks and superb parkings, in perfect keeping with such homes.

You could count on your fingers in months the time that has transpired since J. B. Lankershim and John W. Mitchell started their gigantic undertaking on the Santa Monica Beach, which bids fair to be the most ideal concession of a Beach Resort, Hotel and Casino on the Pacific Coast. Both of these prominent Los Angeles capitalists are now in Europe gathering the final plans for this work now in course of construction.

The Santa Monica Canyon was only announced for the market a very few weeks ago; and yet out of the five hundred and thirty-three lots offered for sale, near on to four hundred lots have been sold up to date, with the majority of purchasers planning the immediate building of their beautiful homes in this ideal sylvan retreat. Probably no property placed on the market recently has created greater furore than this.

The Golden West Home Builders are adding tremendously to the total of building permits in Santa Monica, having completed only very recently one of the handsomest modern apartment-houses and office buildings in Santa Monica. This building aggregates a fortune in cost, and is to be the Santa Monica headquarters of this prominent firm. Besides this it is building an immense number of bungalows and other apartment-houses.

Other building concerns in Santa Monica, which are distinguishing themselves and Santa Monica as a whole for the high character of the buildings being incorporated, are Proctor & Studebaker, Miles & Tegnar and the Santa Monica Bay Realty Company. These strictly high-class subdividing and building firms are now negotiating in beach, city and other property that comprises some of the most important real estate buys yet reported here.

So Santa Monica grows in buildings and improvements to almost alarming proportions. Is there any wonder that such a city, even though in its infancy, could boast of property valued at $11,944,815, as was the last report of Santa Monica? Think of an increase of $1,600,000 in one year's time. That's what tells better than anything else the story of the thrift and industry of its inhabitants.

man. This structure will cost in the neighborhood of $6000.

A contract has been entered into by this city and the Pacific Light and Power Company of Los Angeles, whereby that company shall furnish electricity to Glendale for a period of five years. The present contract between the city and the company expires next November. The new contract calls for a lower rate and better service than the city is now getting.

Much progress is reported this week by City Electrician Harry B. Lynch in the ornamental lighting system. Nearly all of the wires have been laid in conduits underground. The iron standards have arrived and have been distributed and the system, according to Lynch, will be completed and lighted by September 1. The residents are taking much interest in this "lighted way," which improvement is being done at a cost of $15,000.

Maj. John S. Payne, U.S.N., of Los Angeles, the new proprietor of the Logan block and the market building at the corner of San Fernando road and Central avenue, has his plans completed for the remodeling of these buildings. The market frame building will be torn away and replaced by a substantial brick structure. When completed the first floors of the two buildings will be occupied by the Tropico Mercantile Company with a department store. The second floor will be divided into living apartments and offices.

Work was started this week on the improvement of the large eighty-acre tract of the Richardson estate purchased a few days ago by a syndicate of eastern business men. This lies in the city of Los Angeles, at the south end of this valley, and in just south of the Pacific Electric tracks. One feature of this piece is that it will have a 5-cent car service to Los Angeles. The improvement work will include the grading, oiling and tamping of the streets, curbing and sidewalking. Plans are already being prepared for thirty homes to be erected on the tract.

WANTS FLOWING WELL.
STANDARD IN FULLERTON FIELD

FULLERTON, Aug. 16.—Although the Standard Oil Company has a producing well assured on the Stern & Goodman lease in the sand recently struck, the company has started drilling again with hope of getting a flowing well.

The well, which has reached about 1340 feet, was baled the past week, but failed to gush, though there was a strong pressure of gas. Had the company decided to bring it in at that depth it is estimated that it would have been good for a production of 300 barrels a day on the pump.

The management, however, is strongly convinced that gusher sand will be found within something like 100 feet. Perforated pipe was put down so that in case nothing better is developed production will be secured from the present sand.

Confidence is expressed that what the Standard is seeking will be found. It will probably take about fifteen to twenty days to drill into the lower sand. Meanwhile, the company is making reservoirs to handle the well when it is brought in.

The present oil in this well is the very best thing that the Standard has in the Fullerton field. But it has cost the company about $45,000 to bring the well to its present stage of completion. The cost of getting a well in this territory makes it especially desirable to secure a flowing well.

However, the Standard has demonstrated one thing, that there is a good grade of oil at less than 4000 feet in the Fullerton hills. The Standard is manifestly much gratified over having a producer in the teritrory which was regarded as wildcat. Success here means extensive development and it is likely that a number of new rigs will be started in this new territory.

The Union Oil Company is making preparations to build a rig on its lease 1000 feet north of the Stern & Goodman well. Grading was started Thursday. The Union is evidently going to protect its own ground in the southern part of the field.

The Amalgamated has 250 acres of land northeast of the Standard and it is reported that rig-builders will be at work there before long.

The Petroleum Company is another lease holder in this part of the field. Activity promises to be very lively this winter. An increase in the drilling forces in the new section opened up by the Standard would prove of great commercial benefit to Fullerton.

The Fisher Company in the flat northeast of the Standard's well has cemented at 3800 feet and will continue drilling. The company expects to get oil within another 200 feet. Oil and gas have been encountered already.

PIER TO BE WHOPPER.
WILL BE OF SOLID CONCRETE.

VENICE, Aug. 17.—Great interest is being manifested in the new Maier amusement pier now under construction at Center street and the Ocean Front, in this city. The cost of the new pier is given at upwards of $2,000,000. It will be constructed entirely of reinforced concrete, and will be 1200 feet long and 550 feet wide. The pier will be similar in construction to the municipal pier at Colorado street, Santa Monica, excepting that it will be of greater length and about 500 feet wider. August Stutzer, who erected the concrete pier at Santa Monica, is superintending the building of the Maier pier.

Stutzer expects to have the pier in readiness for business by Easter Sunday, next. Edward R. Maier, president of the Maier Brewing Company, of Los Angeles, is president and general manager of the company erecting the pier, and is responsible for the ideas and plans embodied in the project.

An important feature of the pier will be accommodations for the housing of conventions, the company having announced its intention of attempting to land some of the big gatherings annually held on the Pacific Coast. Large and up-to-date parking spaces for automobiles, to accommodate about 700 machines, will be provided for.

The new company's hold a forty-year franchise. Associated with Maier in the concern, are the following officers: W. J. Guthrie, vice-president; Perry Widener, treasurer; Alfred Barnum, secretary and Howard Lorenz, assistant secretary.

The Family Skeleton.

[Philadelphia Record:] "You yourself have been arrested, have you not?" he began in cross-examination.

"Look-a-heah!" exclaimed the dusky witness, "does yo' think Ise gwine to tell yo' mah private business? I guess not!"

"I have the right to know, and you must tell me," the lawyer persisted, and the judge instructed the witness that she would have to answer.

"Ise been arrested fo' lickin' mah husband," the woman finally said, her eyes flashing.

"Is that so?" queried the attorney, with satisfaction. "What is your husband's business?"

"He's a prize fightah," she added, and amid the general merriment that ensued the cross-examination suddenly ended.

TENDING TO OUR OWN BUSINESS.

LOS ANGELES WILL BECOME A CENTER OF INDUSTRY.

the people realize in full what these things mean, Mr. Garland's dream of "1,000,000 in 1920" will look small.

Natural gas made Pittsburgh the greatest iron and steel center in the world. Natural gas changed the quiet farming communities of Ohio to thriving manufacturing centers. Natural gas changed Indiana from a free-trade Democratic commonwealth into a protective-tariff Republican State. At least, it had a large part in the change by building up large manufacturing communities all through the gas belt.

We have, they say, an abundance of iron ore—mountains of it—a few miles to the east. Is there any reason why our iron pipe, our structural iron, and even our steel rails, should not be manufactured here? The building in progress on this Coast is the marvel of the entire country. The iron and steel pipe used in our oil fields alone amounts to millions of dollars a year. Railroads on this Coast are now few and far between, and hundreds of miles are yet to be built.

CENTER OF WORLD'S TRADE.

The great cotton fields of Texas are 3000 miles nearer us than they are to New England. Is there any reason why the raw material should be hauled across the continent only to be reshipped as a finished product? An old cotton manufacturer told the writer recently that we would not be obliged here to produce artificial climatic conditions as they do in the New England mills for making cotton goods—that the natural conditions here are ideal.

With an unlimited supply of sand suitable for the manufacture of glass is there any reason why we should bring from the East every window pane to look through and every glass to drink from?

The markets of the Orient are waiting for us and the "awakening of China" means as much in an industrial as in a political way. China furnishes the greatest market for cotton goods in the world, and China will soon begin to build railroads, and China cannot grow "sideways" much longer, and will soon be building skyscrapers. In fact is there anything China will not want, from a yard of calico to a railroad locomotive?

And all this because someone discovered oil in California! But it is the natural sequence in the development of the oil industry. The oil business, while in itself it is a great industry, giving employment to thousands and requiring millions of dollars annually in the production and distribution of the product, is primarily a basic industry, and on it may be built other industries even greater than itself.

The discovery of oil and gas was the greatest thing that ever happened in California, not excepting the discovery of gold, and has made possible the development of the Pacific Coast into what it is destined to become in future years—the center of the world's trade and commerce.

BRIGHT DAYS FOR MEXICO.

come a profitable source of revenue to the people of Yucatan. The Agricultural Society of Yucatan has been conducting for some time expensive experiments in growing silk worms and the manufacture of silk from their cocoons. It is stated that much success has attended these experiments.

BIG COTTON CROP.

Seasonable rains in the cotton-growing districts of Mexico practically insure an unusually large crop of that staple, according to authoritative reports received by the government. It is estimated that the total production this year will be approximately 700,000 bales. The largest cotton-growing district is the Valley of the Nazas River, known as the Laguna district, of which Torreon is the commercial center. It is stated that notwithstanding the long period of revolutionary disturbances in that region, planters have been able to grow their cotton crop without interference and that the prospects are favorable for a total production of 100,000 to 120,000 bales for the district. The labor disaffections have seriously interfered during the last several months with the operations of the movement of the larger cotton mills, but it is expected that these troubles will soon be settled and that manufacturing operations will be continued on their normal scale.

TO OPEN CHURCH.
SOUTHLAND IMPRESSES PASTOR.

OWENSMOUTH, Aug. 17.—The first church services to be held in the town of Owensmouth, aside from the regular Sunday-school meetings and the meetings of temporarily assigned missionaries, are set for August 25, when Rev. J. A. Hull, a Methodist divine from Havelock, Neb., will assemble a congregation.

Rev. Hull had gone to the Sacramento Valley in search of investments, when his son, Dr. F. M. Hull, a physician, came to Los Angeles, and visited the San Fernando Valley. He wired his father in the north to cancel certain options that had been taken, in the north, and the minister came to the Southland. He at once bought five acres near the Owensmouth speedway and a home site within the town, ordering the erection of a bungalow. At the same time he secured a site for a church building, now under way.

Dr. Hull, meantime, has bought a site of an acre, on which he is having a bungalow built, and will live in Owensmouth to open the practice of medicine.

Causa Honoris.

THE FIRST AMERICAN CROSS OF HONOR.

It Aims to Bind Together Those Who Have Saved the Lives of Others—Movement Now on Foot to Make Every Policeman and Fireman in Every City in the Country Eligible for the Cross When He Proves Himself a Hero.

BY CAROLYN CROSS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Aug. 12.—The fame of the Victoria Cross of England and the French Legion of Honor is world-wide. But Uncle Sam has given his official sanction to an American order that is similar to those two organizations and yet far more exclusive than either of them. It is the American Cross of Honor with headquarters in the nation's capital. And now this hero society purposes to enlarge the scope of its work and see that the heroes on the police force and fire department of every city in the country are rewarded for their valor not only with the Cross but also with a sum of money. Another recent innovation is the granting of a special Cross of Honor—one each year—to women who have proved themselves of the stuff whereof heroes are made; and the first of these medals was presented last month to a California woman who saved a man from drowning.

Though but fourteen years old, the American Cross of Honor is in some respects, its members believe, more exclusive than either the Victoria Cross or the Legion of Honor of France.

FOR NOTEWORTHY ACTS.

The American Cross will continue awarding a medal each year to the bravest of those who win the government Life Saving Medal—if the deed is sufficiently noteworthy. In addition, however, the board of governors desire to encourage the saving of life along lines not so tightly drawn as are those laid down by Uncle Sam. The government confines its honor-donations to those who perform thrilling rescues from drowning and awards them through the Life Saving Service of the Navy Department; it also makes a similar reward for heroism on railroads. Recently, the American Cross of Honor decided to annually honor with its medal the woman who performed the most thrilling rescue under any conditions.

But the greatest innovation concerns the country's fire fighters and guardians of the peace. It is purposed to organize these boys in blue in every city in the land into a sort of auxiliary of associate members of the Cross. From the very small annual dues collected from them a fund will be created for the pensioning of those of their number injured in the heroic performance of their duty. The Fire and Police Chiefs of New York and Washington have already approved the measure and at the convention of police chiefs of the world at Ottawa, Can., last July, Maj. Richard Sylvester, chief of the Washington force, laid the project before them. At the gathering of the Fire Engineers next month in Denver, Col., the scheme will also come up for discussion. Eventually, officers of the society hope to see a fund established for the relief of policemen and firemen temporarily disabled in heroic performance of their day's work.

The American Cross of Honor was organized in 1898 and chartered by acts of Congress, in 1906, "in order that the memory of the deeds of this army of peace (savers of human life) might not be forgotten but live on through the ages." According to its constitution, there are three classes eligible as members. First, all persons upon whom the United States government has conferred the Life Saving Medal of Honor; second, the President of the United States and rulers of certain countries who, by reason of their exalted stations, are heads of similar societies or distinguished orders; and third, philanthropic people who found and endow societies to encourage the saving of human life, and representatives of foreign governments appointed by their governments as members of the international society or order for the saving of life. Persons fulfilling these requirements are eligible for membership in the organization; but this does not mean that they are entitled to wear the Cross, for that must be earned through heroism. In fact, the officers and board of governors of the order do not enjoy that privilege.

HERNDON'S RECORD.

Thomas H. Herndon of Washington is the founder and life president of the society and is the possessor of a government life-saving medal. He won it for conspicuous bravery on May 20, 1880, when he and a companion rescued two negroes from drowning in Lake Griffin, Fla. The negroes were sailing three miles off shore when a squall came up and capsized their boat. Herndon and his companion saw their plight and set out to the rescue in a small boat. After a perilous journey they succeeded in transfering the men from the side of their up-turned craft, to which they had clung, to their own frail boat and for hours fought a desperate fight to regain the shore.

Fifteen years later he received the silver life-saving medal from the government and became interested in others who had won the insignia of honor. Investigating, he found that brief records in books of the service were all that bound the brave folk together. So, in 1898, he conceived the idea of organizing a society similar in purpose to the great orders of England and France. By letter and circular he interested various men eligible to the organization. It grew slowly, but finally in 1906, it attained the dignity of a permanent board of governors, a fair-sized membership roll and was chartered by act of Congress. It was the pioneer order of its kind in America although since then one patterned very closely after it has been established through the efforts of Andrew Carnegie.

The officers, in addition to Mr. Herndon, are John J. Delaney, vice-president; Harry A. George, secretary, and Richard Stockton, treasurer; they, with John Schuyler Crosby and Andrew M. Taylor, form the board of governors. Besides the 100 active members, there is a list of honorary members that includes many distinguished names. A number of these notables—save in the case of rulers who never do more than sign their names in person—have written personal letters stating their appreciation of the honor bestowed upon them. Many of them have, upon request, forwarded portraits or large photographs of themselves wearing their cross of honor.

THE CROSS.

The cross itself is in the form of a Maltese cross of gold and enamel surrounded by a wreath of laurel suspended from the beak of a gold eagle. In the center of the cross is the coat of arms of the United States and on three of the points are the letters "A.C.H." one on each point. The fourth point bears the date. The whole is suspended from a gold bar on a blue ribbon. The new medal for women is like the regular one except that it bears across the gold bar the words "She Served Humanity," and is hung on a white ribbon.

The active members of the order—those who risked their own lives in saving others—are represented in Mr. Herndon's collection by photographs kept in cabinets. Of them all, the most picturesque, perhaps, is that of Jesus Garcia of Narcozari, Mex. Though he did not receive the coveted insignia of bravery, the tribute to his memory is the most signal of all. Through the efforts of the society an imposing marble shaft now stands in the little Mexican town and points out to all who see it the way in which a hero died that others might live.

GARCIA'S FATE.

Jesus Garcia was employed as a locomotive engineer by a mining company in Narcozari four years ago. Two freight cars loaded with dynamite were standing on a siding near the smelter in the very center of the town. Somehow they caught fire. The flames were almost licking the explosives when Garcia coolly backed his locomotive up to them, and realizing that an explosion there meant death to hundreds and the destruction of the community, he made the coupling, threw his throttle wide open and dashed for the open country. On and on the death train flew with the cars blazing away in the wake of the jerking, puffing engine. Just as it was passing a little section house beyond the suburbs the deadening explosion came—and that was the last of the train, the section house and—Jesus Garcia. Only the smallest fragments of his brave body were found and twelve Mexican section hands and one American boy, who had been at work in the house, were blown to pieces. But the "Jim Bludsoe" of the Mexican mines had done his duty.

In January, 1909, Mr. Herndon noticed an account of the heroic deed in a daily paper. Impressed by almost super-human self-sacrifice displayed by the man, Herndon wrote a poem entitled "The Life-Saver" and sent it—accompanied by the clipping—to a local newspaper which printed it. The closing lines read:

"Who shall fitting tell his story,
Who recount his deeds again?
Who shall paint his Christ-like glory—
Showing that he died for men?"

Way down in the little town where Jesus Garcia laid down his life some American engineers saw that poem. They were stirred by it and wrote to Mr. Herndon. The board of the cross of honor was interested. Garcia was dead, so the insignia could not be presented. But the order took the matter up with the Mexican embassy at Washington and the suggestion was made that a monument be erected to the brave engineer. Those American mining engineers did their part and the cross of honor aided them nobly. Today, an imposing shaft, suitably inscribed, stands majestically in the Plaza of Narcozari, an enduring monument to a deed that will live in memory even after it has fallen to decay.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

With the innovation of the special medal for women this year it is appropriate to recall the fact that the very first medal bestowed by the cross of honor was given a woman. The wonderful heroism of Mrs. Ida Lewis Wilson, keeper of the Lime Rock Lighthouse at Newport, R. I., is still fresh in the public mind. She wat the "Grace Darling" of America. During the years of her lonely, dangerous service, she saved more than twenty men from certain death by drowning. Already the possessor of two medals from the life-saving service she was unhesitatingly picked as the pioneer recipient of the gold cross of honor.

A CALIFORNIA INSTANCE.

Miss Stella Emily Bartholomew, of Occidental, California, is the first to receive the new medal. It was presented to her but a few weeks ago. Naturally, there is always a long interval between the deed and its recognition by the society. Four years have elapsed since Miss Bartholomew dived overboard from a boat in Russian River Inlet and rescued a man from drowning. Her rescue was said to have been especially heroic because of the condition of the water and the struggle that ensued when she seized the drowning man.

Between these first and last acts of heroism by women were six others, in each of which the women were honored with the Cross. Mrs. Edward White, of Copalis, Wash., saved three sailors of the British bark Ferndale, wrecked off the coast of Washington, January 29, 1892. Marie D. Parsons, of Fire Place Point, Long Island, though but teh years of age saved a young man and a little girl from a watery grave on July 7, 1883. Edith Morgan, of Hamlin, Mich., rescued two fishermen from their capsized boat on March 23,1878, and in December of the following year helped save the crew of a steamer wrecked in Lake Michigan. Edith Clark saved a schoolmate from drowning in Lake Chabot, Oakland, California, and Mary Whitely and Maud King brought three men to safety from their overturned boat in Charleston harbor on August 21, 1888.

From now on, a number of women will be admitted to associate membership in the Order that they may interest themselves in the strictly feminine phase of the work. Wives of the Governors of various States have been the first chosen for such honor. Already, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has acknowledged her selection with a graceful letter of appreciation. Eventually it is hoped to bestow a sum of money upon each woman who wins the Cross and is in need of pecuniary assistance.

In 1908 the Cross was awarded to George H. Poell, of Nebraska, who, while his train was running down a steep grade, climbed out on the pilot of his engine and jerked little Paul Ussary from between the rails. The weight of the child's body, however, caused him to lose his hold and he was dragged four hundred feet over a trestle with one foot caught in the engine. Finally his imprisoned foot was severed by the terrible strain and he escaped death. The boy was saved for the heroic engineer cast him far out of the way of the onrushing train with his free arm as he fell from the pilot.

TO A COAST GUARD.

William S. Doyle, of New Jersey, won the coveted insignia in 1909. As a life guard along the coast he had saved many lives, often in the face of almost insurmountable odds. Prior to his becoming a member of the Board of Governors, Capt. John Schuyler Crosby, a member of the New York Yacht Club, received the gold badge of courage. While on a pleasure trip in a yacht, the boat suddenly sank. Two young girls in the party were below in the cabin, shut off from escape by furniture that had overturned before the cabin door in the initial lurch of the vessel. Capt. Crosby rushed to their rescue but could rescue only one of them before the waters closed about him. He kept her and himself afloat until picked up. The other girl was drowned.

Last month, Mayor Gaynor, of New York, presented the American Cross of Honor to John H. Rapp, a watchman along the water-front, with impressive ceremony. Not even Rapp himself, it is said, can remember just how many men, women and children he has pulled out of the water. Excursionists and boys in swimming have called to him for help during the years and have not called in vain. Twice in his heroic life he has saved two people from drowning at the same time, one on each arm. The first of these double rescues was effected in August, 1877, and the other in September of the following year. He is the proud holder of both the gold and silver Life Saving Medals.

The Cross has not been presented exclusively to Americans. Five years ago Lieut. Heinrich, Anker, of the Imperial German Navy, dived overboard, fully dressed, from a German training ship at anchor off New Orleans, La., and rescued a sailor who had missed his footing in climbing along the bowsprit. The struggle for life was a desperate one for the water was cold and the current strong. But finally the Lieutenant succeeded in towing the sailor back to the ship. He received the U. S. Life Saving Medal and also a German medal of honor for this brave deed.

ADDING GOLF LINKS.

In way of adding to the delectation of guests and campers at Idyllwild, a summer recreation spot, a mile high among the pines of San Jacinto, W. C. O'Carrol, an English expert, is completing an excellent golf course, surfacing the tennis courts with clay and laying out bowling greens. Strong & Dickinson are the developers of the resort.

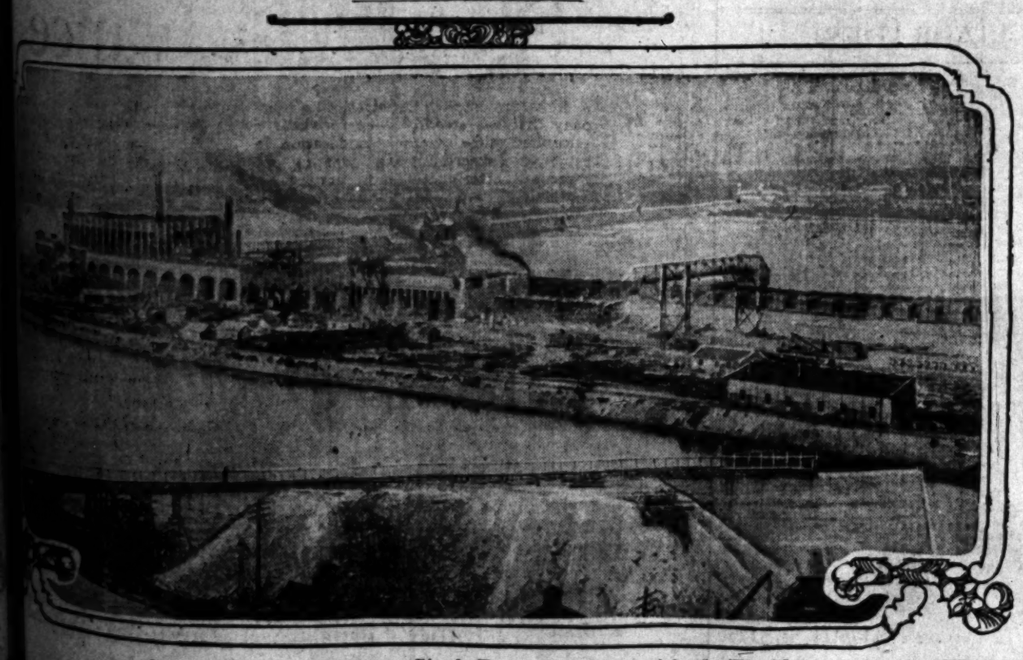
SQUEEZING POWER FROM MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

ghtiest Dam in the World Going in at Keokuk—Over Quarter of a Million of Horse-Power to Be Developed by Thirty Great Turbines.



General View of the Largest Single Power Development in the World.

...construction work attendant to building the great dam and power-house on the Mississippi River between Keokuk, Iowa, and Hamilton, Ill. ...concrete dam, seven-eighths of a mile long, stretches out from the Illinois shore and joins the upper corner of the massive power-...is located to the left and a little above the center of the picture. Power-house will be three times larger than any before built; is a ...mile long and half a city block wide. To the extreme right, just outside the bounds of the picture, is located the titanic lock, greater ...respects than those at Panama. All of the construction work to be seen is located flat on the bottom of the river—a gigantic cofferdam ...the river from its old haunts, encloses thirty-four acres of the bottom, and permits the construction work. All work is to be finished by ...1913.

...Mississippi River at ...are building ...power dam in the ...are going ...of the contin... ...America's great... ...whose sins are ...Mississippi's immensity, ...have not ...world. ...some of the gen... ...water-power de... ...is now ...ts in the ...any river ...anywhere along ...the other miles of its length it is lucky, then this twenty-three feet to twelve miles looms up larger. Then, too, the Mississippi is something around a mile wide at Keokuk and when you get a stream a mile wide to fall twenty-three feet there is going to be some power resulting. Moreover, the Des Moines Rapids are bounded on both sides by steep hills, which is a very material factor to be considered when you go to put a dam at the foot of a falls and start to figure out the amount of ground the resulting lake will overflow. Having a line of hills close on each side will, of course, limit materially the amount overflowed. Nowhere else along the Mississippi is there so steep a fall in so short a distance or a fall so well confined between steep hills.

The second step mentioned inthe process of getting power from a river was to dam up the stream and concentrate the drop made over the entire length of the dam to one place where the waters could be made to run through a power-house and their energy squeezed out. This necessary dam the builders of the Keokuk project have now practically finished. For seven-eighths of a mile it stretches out over the broad bosom of the Mississippi from a firm anchorage on the Illinois shore. It is fifty-two feet high and wide enough on top to support three standard-gauge railroad tracks side by side for the use of construction trains. It is not one solid wall, but is composed of a series of close-set arches, 119 in all, something on the order of a concrete bridge only the supporting piers are close together. The reason that the dam was made this way, was that when too much water accumulated above its walls for the use of the power-house the surplus could be permitted to slide through the dam by opening the steel gates, that will fill the gaps between the piers. Then, too, the government specified that such construction be made from considerations having to do with minimum flow of water in the river below the dam.

THE TURBINE.

The general type of agent used to do the direct squeezing of the power from the Mississippi is the "Francis" turbine. Let us go back a little and consider the different agents used in other developments of days gone by. The first means used to get power from the falls was the old paddle-wheel, such as we described at the beginning of this article. The water either went over it or under it, and it was known as the "overshot" or "undershot" wheel accordingly. This type of wheel is almost as old as civilization and has been used since time immemorial. Its efficiency is very low. The principle of the turbine was next applied to water wheels in an effort to increase this efficiency and a mark as high as 60 per cent. was attained. The turbines were of the reaction type; that is, a body of water under pressure was admitted to the hub of a wheel whose axis was vertical and ejected at an angle from its periphery. The ordinary revolving lawn-sprinkler is a reaction turbine of the simplest form, and works on the same principle. After the reaction turbine had been used for some time a man named Francis came along and made an improvement in its design and succeeded in getting even greater an efficiency. He just reversed the circulatory path of the water—he admitted the water to the periphery of the wheel and ejected it at the hub. In these, especially designed Francis turbines at Keokuk an efficiency of 86 per cent. will be attained, higher by at least 6 per cent. than ever before.

THE POWER-HOUSE.

The power-house containing these turbines stands at right angles, practically, to the dam itself, and to its upper corner the west end of that structure is anchored. The sub-structure, the part containing the turbines, is completed, and the superstructure, to house the electric generators and accessories, is in process of construction. When at last the project is completed and the structures put to use, the waters held up by the dam will sweep around the corner of this power-house and surge through a series of 120 openings in the foundation wall to the turbines beneath. There will be fifteen turbines of 10,000 horse-power, each in the initial installation and fifteen more in the second part to be built while the first is in operation. The volume of water leading to each turbine will be so great that no ordinary pipes could be used to conduct it. So, in the basement of this power-house they have moulded great passageways in the concrete to carry the water from the outside to the turbines. Each passageway is big enough to contain a load of hay without crowding. To properly handle such an immense body of water the turbines had to be made several times larger than any heretofore used. They are sixteen feet in diameter and the cases that contain them are great chambers in the concrete in which a house might be built thirty-nine feet in diameter and twenty-two feet high.

The power-house when fully completed will be nearly 2000 feet long and more than 100 feet high, three times larger than any ever before built. Its capacity will be up to 300,000 horse power, which is more than half all five companies develop at Niagara.

HUGE LOCK.

The fourth requirement to get power from a river, that of having a lock to let boats by the dam, so that power could be wrested from the river without disturbing navigation, the builders of this project are satisfying by the erection of a structure for the purpose that outrivals those in the Panama Canal. This lock is 110 feet wide and has a lift of forty feet, greater in lift by fifty-eight feet than any one of the terraced locks that will lift boats over the Andes Mountains at Panama. The government required that it be made a present of the lock when completed, before it would give the developing company a franchise for the dam, and also required that a drydock be built beside the lock so Uncle Sam might have a place to build and repair boats.

Dealers Report Sales Aggregating One Hundred Thousand Dollars. Score of Fine Homes Under Way.

WHITTIER, Aug. 16.—Dealers report the sale of more than $100,000 worth of property here, a large part of the sales having been made in building lots in the northeast part of the city. Choice sites in this particular section are at a premium and the sales are showing a marked advance in price since the spring opening.

Building activities are also on the increase, with a strong trend toward a better class of dwellings. There are at present a score or more of houses nearing completion in this section, with a total valuation exceeding the $100,000 mark.

Several miles of street work are under way, and a number of new subdivisions will be placed on the market this winter.

Most noteworthy of the deals to be reported lately is the sale of eight and one-fourth acres in the north part of town for Amos C. Maple, cashier of the Whittier Savings Bank, to Walter Wildman, a capitalist of Springfield, Iowa. The place is just at the head of Pickering avenue, against the hills, and is set to four-year-old lemons and Valencia oranges. Wildman will further improve the place by the erection of a fine residence.

J. Howard Johnson reports the following recent sales: Two lots on North Painter avenue to O. H. Barr, president of the Barr Lumber Company, who will soon begin the erection of a $10,000 residence; lot on the corner of Washington and Broadway to Dr. H. F. Wilson, $2250; house and lot at Greenleaf avenue and Camilla street, for Fred C. Luck, to C. G. Warner, $3000; lot for Ph. Rudisch to Thomas Norcross, on West Camilla street, $400; two lots on North Bright avenue, F. W. Wright and Ernest Saunders, to C. G. Warner, $2500; two lots at Friends avenue and Broadway to F. L. Pease, a recent arrival from Hastings, Neb., who will build a ten-room bungalow, and a house and lot on North Bright avenue for A. C. Davis to M. R. Crenshaw, $3350.

Material for the article and photographs are being gathered by the writer with the assistance of the Janss Investment Company, subdividers of this land and developers of Owensmouth.

RHINELANDER WALDO, GENERAL OF POLICE.

The Rich and Sensational Young Man, Who Is Trying to Run New York's Army of Ten Thousand "Coppers." Now in the Public Eye.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—There are 10,208 policemen in New York. They cost the taxpayers $16,000,000 a year. Set down in another way, the annual charge for the maintenance of order and the supposed prevention and detection of crime equals the amount the interest on a bonded debt of $400,000,000. The total was aside from their plundering of the taxpayers by means of contracts awarded to favored bidders. The money assessed against vice was often collected by the police and punctually turned over to "the men higher up." In the end, as any one could have foreseen, the police became extortioners, and blackmailers in their own behalf. The system thus started bonded debt of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is $270,000,000, and of the New York Central and Lake Shore, constituting a four-track line to Chicago, $416,000,000.

The city of London has 21,000 policemen; Paris has about 8500. "You," so Mayor Gaynor recently wrote to Rhinelander Waldo, chief of the force, "have the hardest police situation in the world to deal with, as well as the second largest body of uniformed men." Zachary Taylor fought and won at Buena Vista with 5400 regulars and raw recruits. The victory made him President of the United States. Washington, at the head of 2000 Continentals, and 4000 French, under Rochambeau, marched 400 miles from New York to Yorktown, where he compelled Lord Cornwallis to surrender, and thereby broke down the war of the British against the American colonists.

Ten thousand soldiers are equivalent to ten regiments. The Praetorian Guards, whose licentious fury, Gibbons has shown, was the first symptom and cause of the decline of the Roman Empire, numbered 9000 at first. In the slang of the twentieth century, they were habitual grafters.

Murdering Pertinax, the Emperor, they "ran out upon the ramparts, and, with a loud voice, proclaimed that the Roman world was to be disposed of to the best bidder by public auction."

There, under the walls of the fort, Didius and Sulpicianus bargained like horse dealers. The latter promised $1000 to each of the guards, who, by this time, were 16,000 in number. Didius raised the bid to $1250. In the lump, he is reported by history to have paid $20,000,000 for the Emperorship. He was the ruler of Rome for sixty-six days, when he, in turn, was assassinated, as was Herman Rosenthal, the Manhattan gambler.

ASTOUNDING FIGURES OF GRAFT

The figures of the ancients were invariably exaggerated. It is probable that Didius gave no more to the rascally and murderous Praetorians than has been given yearly by various breeds of lawbreakers to a few New York policemen for license and protection. Vice and crime, it is said by careful newspapers, have secretly paid so much as $2,000,000 annually to certain officers of the police force. Indeed, newspapers and public men are charging today that policemen, gamblers, pickpockets, procurers, house-breakers and thugs are still in partnership. The country again has been astounded by the accusations and the revelations of the past two weeks.

The death of Didius occurred 1700 years ago. There are students and philosophers who believe that the centuries change but slightly the primal elements of human nature. Politics was at the bottom of the Roman tragedy. Politics, it is said by everybody, is at the bottom of the violence and corruption in New York city.

A sober and respectable Dutchman, known as the schout or sheriff, walked the streets after candle-light, when this island was first settled by immigrants from Holland. Later appeared the rattle watch of six men, who noisily went their solemn rounds for the sum of $2.36 a week, if they also patrolled their beats on Sunday nights; otherwise they got only $ 2.25.

By the year 1863, when William M. Tweed obtained control of the city, the police department contained 1850 men. The "Tweed Ring" stole many millions of dollars. Politicians, with the greed of barbarians, began at that time the practice of demanding tribute from violators of the law. That has flourished, it is believed, ever since. Anyway, police officers for years have been retiring to private life with large fortunes, saved, theoretically, from the modest pay they have received.

Also the vicious classes have had votes. Cash has not always been the only down payment; nor have the policemen been alone in selling out. The New York police, not as a whole, but in part, are commonly thought to be the worst on earth. There are politicians in New York who are equally degraded and corrupt. Policemen, politicians and criminals, banded together, are—and that is what it amounts to—living riotously at the expense of the decent people of the town. And they can carry the voting districts on election day whenever and as often as they put their minds to it. Even the courts, so the newspapers and many public officials maintain, are crooked, in that the judges, with the hope of holding their jobs, or out of gratitude for getting the jobs, are scandalously lenient toward all sorts of lawbreakers, felons included.

It has been the custom in most cities for the police either to confiscate and keep or completely to destroy the tools found in gambling places. Not so here. Commissioner Waldo, in formal letters to Mayor Gaynor, has not only shown that scores of dangerous criminals have been turned loose upon the community by judges of the courts under what is known as suspended sentences—in a single year eighty-one burglars were let go after being convicted—but that in twenty-four recent cases the judges from the bench have restored gambling implements found in gambling places to the gamblers who owned them.

A story related by Mr. Waldo makes plain certain conditions that are notorious hereabouts. The story was given him by a lawyer of standing and truth. An assistant District Attorney had about ended his case against the prisoner at the bar when the judge asked: "Is that all the evidence you have in this rotten case?"

"Everything," the prosecuting attorney answered, "except the confession of the defendant, which I have in writing and which he signed himself."

"I direct that you acquit the defendant," the judge said, addressing the jury, "because of the impertinent remark addressed to the court."

"Why are convicted burglars in New York let go under suspended sentences?" I asked Commissioner Waldo.

"I have very decided views on the matter, but never have made them public," he answered.

AND NOW APPEARS R. WALDO.

Into this situation and into this old and scientifically organized system, came Rhinelander Waldo, a year and three months ago. "A refined and sensitive man," Mayor Gaynor describes him; a well brought-up man, of ancient family and having independent means of his own. Moreover, a graduate of the Columbia School of Mines. The picture, briefly drawn by Mayor Gaynor, is hardly sufficient, however.

"A refined and sensitive man," standing by itself, gives a wrong mental portrait of a character at once robust, determined and commanding. Sensitive he may be, but he is a giant in stature, and he weighs 240 pounds.

Scheme Fails.

WILL NOT BE DOMINATED.

Postal Employees Oppose Union Coercion.

Danger Is Pointed Out by Leader.

A Scheme of Bureaucratic Tyranny.

[SPECIAL WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, August 17.—[Special Dispatch.] A Washington dispatch to the New York Herald says: In an interview with the Herald, Peter J. Schardt, president of the Railway Mail Clerks' Association, declared today that legislation to enable postal employees to join unions was not sought by the great majority of postal employees, but by the American Federation of Labor, which desires to "organize" the entire service.

Co-operation with the federation he says is the first step toward a great organization of all government employees and ultimately the injection of labor influence into politics to interfere with an ever-present tampering to coercion and intimidation.

THE PRESENT FORM.

The Senate amended the House provision covering this point, and it passed in this form, and will have to be thus finally enacted: "That membership in any society, association or other form of organization of postal employees not connected with any outside organization imposing an obligation or duty upon them to engage in any strike, or refusing to assist in any strike, shall not deprive the United States, having for its object, among other things, improvement in the conditions of labor of employees, including hours of labor and compensation therefore and modes and rates of payment, methods of making deductions, or any person in said postal service presenting by any such organization the grievance of persons of any class, or grievance to the consideration of any member thereof, shall not directly or indirectly, or be cause, for removal, prejudice or reduction of compensation or deprive any such person or groups of persons from said service. Any person of persons employed in the postal service of the United States, either separately or collectively, to consult, confer or any members thereof, to furnish information to either House of Congress or to any committee thereof, shall not be denied."

MASS OF RESIGNATIONS.

Open Revolution against affiliation with labor organization imposing an obligation to strike will not prevent withdrawal from the American Federation of Labor. That body imposes no such condition. It will operate to the development of a brotherhood of railway mail clerks organized under an agreement which contingencies resignations will be presented "en bloc."

MAIL CLERKS SATISFIED.

Mr. Schardt, who is a railway mail clerk in Milwaukee and a man of common sense, was asked: "Do the provisions of the postal bill for the organization satisfy the aspirations of postal employees?"

"Many provisions in the postal bill will meet with the approval of most of the employees, and they go a good deal further than anything the postal employees have ever asked. They have been successful in obtaining the right of trial by jury in case of removal, and the right to appeal to Congress for redress of grievances, and have believed that with this legislation they would be fully protected against removal by the Postoffice Department."

ORGANIZATION UNWISE.

"Even in the government service, where given this subject study and consideration, that it would be unwise for the government employees to affiliate with organizations having nothing in common with the service. In fact, such affiliation with powerful outside organizations as will encourage amalgamation of the entire Federal employees into one great organization. The next step would be to use the tremendous power gained to enforce demands not due regard to the rights of others, to inject the element of coercion and intimidation into what has been an organization into which no one has been ever present, and, if indulged in, to the detriment of the public welfare, and the inevitable destruction of the organization itself."

EXECUTIONS.

Criminal Is Feasted and Allowed His Own Time for Mother's Deadly Work.

[Special to the Bee-Hallsale:] An execution is an extraordinary business, but as an extraordinary business it has an extraordinary aspect. The condemned man, awakened at 2 o'clock, is chained to the temple. Guards are all around him. He is allowed to think of nothing, and his mind from mundane things is given the best food that the menu being served according to the social status of the criminal. The executioners, one from Brushwood, while the other, in a vivid red, conducted him to the place of execution, where he be seated on a chair in order to be entirely free from earth." The current is then put into position. For two hours or more the flames law demands the criminal shall bow to the ax. This is the sheer exhaustion of the executioners are then [illegible] and other-wise in contact with the

THE LITTLE MEN.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

They told Columbus that he was a fool to sail due west;
They laughed when Morse declared his telegraph would stand the test;
They sneered at Bell and called his telephone a "talking toy,"
And Westinghouse, the airbrake man, they dubbed "a crazy boy."
They've sneered an jeered at better men since humans lived in caves—
When genius first proclaims a truth the masses scream, "he raves."
Doubt, incredulity, and shrugs and sneers and clownish winks
Lie in the path of every one who breaks a rule and thinks
According to his lights, and strives to reach an unfound goal.
'Tis only when success is plain the multitudes extol;
'Tis only when the ship returns safe from a virgin shore;
'Tis only when machines produce what never was before;
'Tis only when the proof is writ for all eternity—
That little men grant honor and admit the victory.

THE WORKINGMAN AND PROTECTION.

[EDITORIAL.]

THE late Edward Atkinson of Boston, the noted statistician, showed that during twenty-five years of our protective tariff system, from 1860 to 1885, the purchasing power of our working class increased from 23 to 57 per cent. (see Century Magazine, Vol. 34.) The average annual wages in 1830 in our manufacturing industries were $421, against $518 in 1909, not counting the salaried workers; adding those, the 1909 average was $589. Under a low tariff, such as we are now threatened with, unless we prevent it by voting only for protective-tariff Congressmen in November next (Col. Holabird for Los Angeles, for instance,) the average annual factory wages were only $247 per worker, or $342 a year less for each worker than in 1909.

How has the workingman been able to save? asks F. G. R. Gordon of Haverhill, Mass., in the Boston Protectionist for August. In 1850, under a low tariff, the total amount of savings in all the savings banks of this country (the workingman's bank) was only $48,431,130, or an average of less than $2 for each inhabitant. In 1910 the total savings deposits amounted to the enormous sum of $4,070,486,247, equal to over $44 for every man, woman and child in the United States, or twenty-two times as much on the average under a protective tariff as compared with a Democratic low tariff.

Even Gompers, one of the leading apostles of labor discontent in this country, admits, after complete personal investigation, that the American workingman is twice as well off as the average worker in any country of Europe. Employers who have factories on both sides of the Atlantic say the same thing.

Another fact, the American home owners now number nearly eight million families (the majority being workingmen's families,) in spite of the fact that during the past dozen years 9,000,000 immigrants have landed on our shores, bringing in money an average of less than $50 each for adults. Forty-seven per cent. of our people own some real estate.

Courageous Talk.

GET NO PROFIT ON INVESTMENTS.

SOUTHERN PROTEST AGAINST LABOR DOMINATION.

John H. Kirby Tells of Years of Hard Work and Millions of Dollars of Business Done Without Any Profit on the Capital Invested in Lumber Industry.

[Manufacturers' Record:] John H. Kirby, president of the Kirby Lumber Company, and active in every movement for the material welfare of Houston, Tex., is a man of courage, the kind of courage which is being drafted more and more into the service of the country. He showed his courage in a speech last month in Texas, addressed primarily to the many employees of his company. During the past two or three years the lumber mill men in the Southwest have been hampered in the operations by an organization calling itself the "Timber Workers' Union." The activities of this organization have recently been reinforced, with a revolutionary programme, by the Industrial Workers of the World, which sets itself against all of the modern tendencies of civilization toward the settlement of differences between employers and employees; and which, judged by its manifestations in the coal regions of Idaho and the cotton-mill districts of Massachusetts, will soon spell anarchy of the most pronounced and savage sort unless it be suppressed.

One of its main reliances is what is known as "sabotage." This word originated during a strike in a foreign country in which, as the workers left the plant, some of them threw their sabots, or wooden shoes, into the delicate machinery, putting the latter out of commission. Sabotage in practice ranges from the worker's soldiering on his job, in other words, robbing his employer in time wasted, or dropping emery into the bearings of delicate machinery, to shutting down the pumping machinery of a mine during a coal strike, thus permitting the mine to be flooded with water, or blowing up property of employers with dynamite. Industrial Workmanship of the World is therefore a menace to civilization. Mr. Kirby boldly paid his respects to the system when he said:

"While my whole life's record sustains the fact that my sympathies are not only with the laboring masses, but that they extend also to that class of laborers which constitute what we know as legitimate labor organizations, it is also true that I have no sympathy with a certain lawless aggregation which proclaims itself as the champion of some of the laboring men. This organization is known as the I.W.W. Its members claim that this stands for the Industrial Workers of the World. Others who are well informed claim that it stands for 'I Won't Work.' I call this a lawless organization because they teach and preach the following things:

"'(a) That workmen are to use any and all tactics that will get the results sought with the least possible expenditure of time and energy.

"'(b) The question of right or wrong is not to be considered.

"'(c) The avenging sword is to be unsheathed, with all hearts resolved on victory or death.

"'(d) The workman is to help himself when the proper time comes.

"'(e) No agreement with an employer of labor is to be considered by the worker as sacred or inviolable.

"'(f) The worker is to produce inferior goods and kill time in getting tools repaired and in attending to repair work; all by silent understanding.

"'(g) The worker is to look forward to the day when he will confiscate the factories and drive out the owners.

"'(h) The worker is to get ready to cause national industrial paralysis with the view of confiscating all industries, meanwhile taking forcible possession of all things that he may need.

"'(i) Strikers are to disobey and treat with contempt all judicial injunctions.'

"Their contentions are so rank that even the Socialists in their national meeting at Indianapolis a few weeks ago had to cut off all relations with them.

"We never ask a man in our employ nor one who applies to us for work, whether he is a Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian or Catholic, nor whether he is an atheist, a Jew or a Christian, nor whether he s a Democrat or Republican, nor whether he is a Mason, Odd Fellow, Knights of Pythias, Woodman, Elk or Hoo-Hoo, nor whether he is or ever has been a member of a labor organization or in

And so on down a long list of vacancies with equally good pay in this city and State and adjoining States of work all the year round. These things being so, why should Los Angeles, or California, or Arizona working labor listen (except to refuse) to the voice of the non-working, though well-fed and well-paid, union strike agitator?

North Dakota Wants Farmhands.

North Dakota looks for the largest crop in the history of the State, with the possibility that there will not be help enough to store it in good shape before winter sets in. More than 3,000,000 acres in wheat alone is the story that Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor W. C. Galbreath tells, which means at least 120,000,000 bushels to be cared for. Here is a chance for the easterner who is not afraid of work to run out West, see the country and incidentally more than pay expenses. Wages will probably be at least $2.50 per diem with board, and work is assured until snow flies.

Railway Employees Better Paid.

In 1911 the employees on American railroads got $41,000,000 more wages than in 1910, and $69,000,000 more than in 1909, yet, like Oliver Twist, they are crying for "more." At the same time these employees numbered 21,027 less in 1911 than in 1910. These facts apply to the roads of 500 or more miles in length, totalling 188,760 miles of lines.

They got in the aggregate $1,005,277,249 wages, as follows: (Bureau of Railway Economics:)

Yet on the fifty eastern railroads, alone, a further wages increase of $42,000,000 is demanded and being arbitrated—using the demand of the enginemen as a basis for arbitration. They got $3,945,320 more in 1911 than in 1910 and $5,791,868 more in 1909. All the employees (particularly the firemen) are holding off from striking pending that arbitration.

Strikers Have No Suggestions.

[Boston Advertiser:] In New Bedford the manufacturers have asked the strikers if they object to the present system of fines for bad work, to suggest some other system by which the manufacturers may be protected from bad work. The issue in the strike, acording to the strikers, has been the system by which a worker, who ruins a piece of goods, is fined. This system has aroused strong objections on the part of the strikers. As yet, however, they have offered no suggestions for another system. The invitation by the manufacturers is fair. If the strikers wish to have any public support for the strike, they should accept it. They can scarcely afford to be in the position of insisting on the same pay for good work as for bad. If there is any method except the system of fines, by which the loss can be met, it is for the strikers to offer it as an alternative to the present system.

Twenty-five hundred operatives of the Berkshire Cotton Mills at Adams, Mass., are on strike because four weavers refuse to join the Weaver's Union. The mills are closed and the loss of wages is going on.

Present Problem.

RAILWAY LABOR'S LOST EFFICIENCY.

RESULT OF TOO MUCH UNION DICTATION.

Organizations Have Taught that It Is Disloyal to Respect the Interest of Employers or to Save Unnecessary Waste of Material and Time of Workingmen.

At the eighth annual convention of the International Railway General Foremen's Association, in Chicago, last month, an important address on the efficiency of railway employees was delivered by W. L. Park, vice-president and general manager of the Illinois Central, as follows:

In my opinion, the paramount problem confronting the mechanical foremen of our American railways today is the effect of socialism on the working forces.

In recent years, we have lost much of the esprit de corps which formerly characterized our shop labor. There is not to be found anywhere, as obtained a few years back, that firm control of the employees, so essential to the proper conduct of large industrial undertakings. While there has been, perhaps, improvement in contract shops in general efficiency, it can be attributed more to new machinery and methods than to increased efficiency of labor. The inability of the railway shops to increase their efficiency in the same ratio was brought out quite prominently in the recent discussion of Harrington Emerson's scientific management, used by Mr. Brandeis to defeat, for his clients, the railways in their request for increased rates in the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

As you gentlemen know, the greatest difficulty in operating a railway shop as you would like to operate it is the present attitude of the labor element. Organized ostensibly to benefit their members, the unions have recently become subservient to the service of certain individuals of strong socialistic tendency, who, do not only insure their salaries, but certain perquisites and emoluments, constantly instill insubordination, dissension and dissatisfaction into the rank and file, which in turn breeds indifference, bickering and strife.

Our railways, because of their magnitude, are particularly vulnerable. One foreman may have absolute control of his particular shop, treat his men fairly, and obtain a reasonable amount of work. He is, nevertheless, affected by shop methods and adverse conditions existing in some remote locality, which upset his best calculations and cause his men to be overcome with imaginary grievances. It behooves us all to make a most careful survey of the situation and get together to apply the remedy.

There has been too much managerial caution in this country for the good of the railways. We have temporized too long with socialism, syndicalism and other pernicious isms. When organized labor attempts to dictate who shall be employed, regardless of capability, and who shall be foreman, regardless of all qualifications other than seniority or unionism, it is digging a pitfall into which it or its employers must eventually disappear. When the organizations again realize that they are to man the railways, and the managers must be left to manage them, they can begin to really better their condition. No business can prosper saturated with disloyalty and steeped in incompetency, bred by labor restricting fanatics and socialistic agitators.

The railways can perhaps stand more of it than ordinary business, but there comes a breaking point and it is with a breath of relief that many a foreman has stretched forth his arms and said, "Thank God, I am boss again," as the strike line filed out of the gate. He had been ignored, mistreated, and humiliated. He was not turning out the work he was capable of doing. He saw on every hand waste of time and material—an unnecessary waste, an ungodly and unjustifiable waste of his employer's property, powerless through the tyranny of the organization to prevent it, and when the thing broke he felt the shackles fall from his arms. He knew trouble was ahead, but he welcomed it as a relief from an intolerant condition, repugnant to every right-thinking and honorable man.

What is the trouble? Is it with the bosses or with the rank and file, or with both? Railways which treat their men liberally with pensions for old age, modern hospital departments, good working conditions and the highest wages are frequently the ones to suffer first.

Let us attempt to analyze the problem. We are all cast in the same mold. In this country we are assured under the Constitution equality of birth. Our best statesmen, business men and industrial captains have been self-made men. The same opportunities exist today as have heretofore existed. There is no boy in this wide land endowed with health and average intelligence who cannot make a place for himself far above the working classes, if he chooses. He must be loyal, industrious and studious. All these attributes are seemingly treated with contempt by the modern shop organizations. Instead of examples to emulate and advice to rise in his chosen profession, the young apprentice is instilled with disloyalty and insubordination, constantly told to do as little work as possible, to deceive his foreman, and that his employers are grasping capitalists seeking his undoing. He is told that the shop foreman wears a brass collar, that he obtained his preferment through favoritism, and that he is a nonentity anyhow—the shop committee dictate to him where he should head in. He listens to socialistic talks, and is advised to keep away from the night schools, so that his time is occupied in poolrooms and other questionable amusements.

He must be, indeed, strong if he can fight shy of all these harmful and pernicious influences and rise above his fellow-shopmen. If he does, he has the mettle and stuff in him of which men are made.

I can remember when it was not considered treason to his fellow-workmen to be loyal to his employer. I know of a time when an employee on the railway could do something for which he was not paid without fear of ridicule or a lodge fine. It is entirely within my recollection when a foreman was looked up to for advice, and his word was the law of the shop. He did not require a walking delegate or a shop committee to dictate to him how far he could go, and where he should stop. Only a few years ago employees who asked for the dismissal of a foreman invited disaster to themselves.

Are the foremen less competent today? I think not. They have been made in a hardier mold. They may, from necessity, be more diplomatic. They may gum shoe through the CALIFORNIA PROPAGANDA TO ENLIST EUROPEAN CAPITAL.

Some Practical Requirements for the Further Development of Our State—Carry Gospel Abroad, Says Hancock.

BY A TRADE EXPERT.

THE greatest need of California is money for developing her resources, both in the agricultural and mineral fields. It might be assumed that this money should be forthcoming from this country in sufficient quantity to do all that is necessary, but when put into practice it is found that money obtainable in this country is only for short periods, the money so obtained being for speculation and not for real investment. California requires money for long periods, so that it can be used for developing the resources.

The point I desire to make clear is that money in this country is chiefly used for speculation purposes. Now European money is used in an entirely different way, as they are accustomed to place money for investment purposes. This point might be more clearly appreciated, when it is realized that there are practically no projects in Europe in connection with which there can be speculation. No matter how much money the successful English business man may make, he is practically unable to speculate with it in his own country, either in lands or resources. This also applies to any part of Europe. He has therefore learned the art of investment.

I would like to add here that the channel of investment in foreign countries is mainly in one direction, that of the manufacturing industries, and for some time labor troubles have disturbed this channel of investments, hence the prospects abroad are being favored.

During my last visit to England I met several of the labor leaders and I pointed out to them that the services of the men would receive better consideration in this country and at the same time they would always have before them the possibility of being able, by the fruits of their labors, to purchase ever so small a quantity of land, thus gaining for the first time in all their generation a real independence. They unanimously agreed that until such conditions could be obtained, the educated working man would never be satisfied, either for himself or for his family.

I pointed out the practical method of obtaining this result in this State of California, where the most primitive of labor always has within its scope the possibility of experiencing independence that nature has undoubtedly instilled into every human being, besides the advantage of attaining this possibility under the practically perfect conditions of climate and environments.

CANADA'S ADVANTAGE.

Canada has for some years been exploited, not only in England, but on the continent of Europe, as a desirable place for investment and for immigration, and compared to the existing conditions in Europe, both in connection with investment and labor, Canada certainly has the advantage of offering something that is required to benefit both these elements. Just how many people have been taken into Canada as a result of this exploitation, I am not able to state, but it is certainly a fact that the population of that country is rapidly increasing, and as far as investments are concerned, a sum of not less than $400,000,000 was placed in Canada by the investments of Europe during last year.

Both the above objects were accomplished through the perfect system of advertising and the complete exploitation of information concerning the whole of that country, not only in England, but also on the continent of Europe.

It is hardly possible to walk many hundred yards in the busy city of London without seeing evidences of this exploitation in the form of large windows facing the main streets, showing the products of each of the sections of Canada, and, offering in each place to give information, not only freely, but with the greatest pleasure.

It is also hardly possible to read any English papers without finding a part of same devoted to advertising some section of Canada, and in many instances, I should say at least once a month, the leading papers devote a complete page or more to this exploitation.

The financial houses are kept close in touch with Canada by carefully prepared circulars and data on all its properties.

It is hardly to be wondered at that Canada receives such support. As an Englishman, I am interested in the development of Canada by British and foreign immigration and financial assistance and I have no desire to see that restricted, but I have studied that country and have compared it to the United States, especially this section of the United States, and freely admit that Canada has no place within her domain with so many advantages of life and so many opportunities of profit, as compared to the whole State of California.

OPEN BUREAUS.

I want to bring before every part of Europe the wonderful prosperity of this State, and it is with a view of this being done that I now propose the following:

That the State of California should open one or more large organized bureaus in the city of London, similar, but not necessarily so extensive as the California development board established in San Francisco.

I take the stand that London is the logical place for such an organization, because the continent of Europe will coincide in all matters concerning the United States by the interpretation and support given to these matters by the people of Great Britain; London houses first pass upon the matters of investment in the United States, chiefly because they understand these investments.

The question of immigration is perhaps not so important as being necessary to be established by the example of immigration from Great Britain, but even this subject will receive much greater support and reach a much more desirable class of people, if valuable information concerning the prospects for the immigrants was received from a London institution.

At the present time California is practically an unknown quantity to England and the continent of Europe, and it will be a great surprise in every direction when they learn the great possibilities of this State. I could name hundreds of instances both amusing and pathetic to illustrate the utter want of knowledge of this State in Europe. I speak as an authority in this matter, having made many business tours over the continent, through Belgium, Germany, Italy and France, also having made eleven visits to this country, extending over many years.

I cannot impress upon the people of California too much the absolute necessity of at once planning a campaign of information abroad, so that the right support can be obtained and willingly given to both the investment channels, trade matter and immigration.

I find that you have almost a perfect system of distributing information dealing with all the prospects of the country. I also find that this information reaches the various parts of the country as far as the eastern coast, but my experience shows me very positively that such information ends within the boundary of this country.

It is with a view to your carrying this propaganda abroad that I am bringing these points before you.

I find that there exists no institution in California at the present time, which is thoroughly representative of the entire State. The institutions being divided and having their interests chiefly local, also that a great deal of jealousy exists, which, while it serves to promote a form of competition, as far as each section is concerned, does not lend itself to the building up of the State as a whole, when circulating such information abroad.

The nearest institution to the one I would advise as being the party to take charge of the information bureau in Europe, is that of the "California Development Board," but even in this there is a want of harmony or agreement among the various sections of the State.

I have studied this side of the question, very fully and have talked with the various Chambers of Commerce, or Supervisors, and also many business men, and I have come to the definite conclusion, that the matter should be taken up in the broadest possible sense, and I now propose that this should be accomplished by the establishment of a committee of business men drawn from each part of the State, and that this committee shall be called the California Information Committee, its objects being to see that all interesting data shall be properly presented in foreign lands, showing all the possibilities of this State, regardless of individual interests or sections.

I advise that this committee be made very large and that they shall form subcommittees, to see that various sections of the State are properly exploited. I also advise that a headquarters for Europe be established in London and that subscriptions be obtained from the general business men to defray the expense of the Home Committee, and the officers and the headquarters established in the city of London. The magnitude of the institution in London to be guided and decided upon by the funds available from the subscriptions.

OUR FRUIT.

As you know, England alone has a population of 45,000,000 people and has a free market to all parts of the world, the result being that every country where it is possible to produce agricultural products find a ready market there. In some respects California has already a good market for some of its products, but this is only to a very limited extent and applies chiefly to California wines and dried fruits. The various other products of California are yet unknown there, and, for the purpose of making a market for products such as oranges, lemons, grapefruit, olives and various other products of this State I advise that the information campaign which I set forth earlier in this letter should also include an advertisement of these products, which will very soon establish a demand at a wonderfully profitable market. I found that only forty-two carloads of California oranges were received in the London market last year. These would supply the demand about one day, there being over seven million people in the city of London alone. To my knowledge, there are no oranges or lemons received into the London market of such fine quality as are produced here and I am positive that only in this connection, but in all other products of this State, a large demand will be created.

There is also the question of the opening of the Panama Canal to be realized, and the effect this waterway will have by connecting this coast with the enormous markets of Europe by cheaper freight all steamer route; and owing to the fact that communication is so cheaply, quickly and easily made by Marconi or cable at reduced and special rates, I predict that the larger purchaser abroad will communicate his requirements direct to the grower.

While on this subject of the canal, I would like to refer to the various shipping interests that already exist here, and that will be extended as soon as the canal is opened. All facilities, dock charges, tides and such general information should be at the disposal of the information headquarters in London for the use of the various shipping companies abroad, and as it will tend to help development.

CONSIDERABLE ORE.

The management of the Inspiration Company is working steadily toward the end of so developing and equipping its property that a daily supply of 8000 tons of ore may be fed the giant concentrator when it is completed next year. Development work now is being pushed at the rate of 4500 feet a month, two main shafts are being sunk, as well as five development shafts, and two long tunnels are being driven.

A branch of the Arizona Eastern Railroad is to be built at once from Miami to the portal of the Inspiration tunnel, and a large amount of railroad work for the mines and concentrator has been given the grading firm of McArthur Brothers. The whole property has been well explored by drills and the ore has been handled successfully in experimental mills, so there appears no doubt whatever concerning the success of the immense enterprise.

STRIKES STEADY GAIT.

The Miami Copper Company has struck a steady gait in the production of 3,000,000 pounds of copper a month, in the shape of concentrates from its big mill. This comes from nearly 100,000 tons of ore mined. One thousand men are employed more than half of them underground. Development work is keeping well ahead of stoping, 4952 feet having been driven during July. Some work also is being done by means of drills.

MINING BRIEFS.

It is reported that Superintendent George H. Dowell of the Old Dominion Company is to leave for Bisbee soon, there to take a newly created office, that of assistant general manager of the Copper Queen Company, in charge of mining work, under General Manager S. W. French. Mr. Dowell formerly was ore buyer for the Copper Queen smelter at Douglas. He is to be succeeded here by P. G. Beckett of the administrative force of the Copper Queen.

Smelter and mine foremen complain bitterly of the new semi-monthly pay day, prescribed by the Legislature of Arizona. They say it simply means for a considerable part of their force two debauches a month instead of the one that formerly sufficed, with consequent failure on the part of many workmen to show up next morning for duty.

lies near the Ironsides, where bonanza quartz was encountered, as recounted in The Times. The Comet lies north of the Ironsides, on a parallel vein, and considerable free gold shows in the developed ore body. The interest generated by the Ironsides strike has been given fresh stimulation by discovery of rich quartz in the Sierra El Oro, another Jim Canyon mine. Several thousand dollars in rich ore have been recently extracted. An adit is being extended to give a vertical depth of 200 feet.

STEEL HULL DREDGES POPULAR.

Natomas No. 10, the first steel hull dredge ever erected in California, is soon to go into action. It was expected to have finished the giant gold boat several months ago, but unforeseen exigencies developed and postponed the placing of the big gold ship in commission. The dredge is building for the Natomas Consolidated of California and is provided with fifteen cubic-foot buckets. This company is also having its No. 7 and No. 8 dredges reconstructed with steel hulls. It is understood a contract will shortly be let for another mammoth fifteen cubic-foot boat, also of the steel hull type.

RANDSBURG FIELD ACTIVE.

The Placer Gold Mining Company has installed a concentrating plant at its placer holdings, near the Baltic mine. The deposits contain gold and tungsten, and are considered among the most valuable in the district. Considerable development work has recently been performed. Col. E. Dunham, proprietor of the King Edward Hotel of Los Angeles, is president. E. Coppock is vice-president and J. R. Metcalf secretary. Los Angeles people are principally interested.

The Consolidated Mines Company is prosecuting vigorous work on the Good Hope claim. The shaft has gained a depth of 250 feet and east and west drifts are under extension on the 200 and 250-foot levels. Fifty-four tons of ore averaging $51.40 per ton were extracted from these drifts in July, according to local reports. Recent developments are understood to have been excellent.

A lease has been taken on the west end of the Butte mine by James Delaney and S. P. McKnight. Drifting is under way from the 120 level, and the ore showing is said to be particularly encouraging. The Shipsey lease on the Butte is about to send fifty tons of quarts to the Red Dog mill. The ore has been stored on the dumps until teams are available.

Globe.

CHEAP POWER PLEASES THEM.

GLOBE MINING MEN ANTICIPATE TAKING THE SURPLUS.

So Many Properties Are Being Operated in that Vicinity that All Excess Electricity Created at the Roosevelt Dam May Find Ready Market.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Aug. 16.—Much interest is being taken locally by mining men in a contract lately made with the Reclamation Service for electric power from the Roosevelt dam, as the cost, about $50 per horse power per annum, is lower than ever before known in this district. The power line from Roosevelt is to be paid for by the Inspiration Copper Company, the cost repaid by annual subtraction from its power bills, but construction is to be under the charge of the Reclamation Service officials, supervised by O. H. Ensign of Los Angeles, Chief Electrical Engineer of the service. In this locality is an almost unlimited market for electric power, for far more than the Reclamation Service may be able to divert from its Salt River irrigation project, and it is probable that the Roosevelt supply will be absorbed around Miami, though efforts already are being made for an extension of the power line to Globe.

Goldfield.

BONNIE CLARE NOW EQUIPPED.

Stamps Will Begin Dropping Within a Few Days.

Large and Profitable Yield from Mine Expected.

Activity Is Resumed Near Famous Reilly Lease.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Aug. 15.—The stamps of the Bonnie Clare mill, located 36 miles south of Goldfield, on the main line of the L. V. & T. Railroad, will begin dropping within a few days on ore from the Poleverde workings of the Jumbo Extension Mining Company. The plant would have been started before this but for delays in receiving some of the equipment due to recent washouts. Shipments of ore from the mine have been going forward to the mill, in order that the storage bins might be filled before the plant starts operating, but some of the cars have been delayed and a few of them are at the mine awaiting transportation to the mill. Many of the old stopes in the mine are filled with ore, and there is no lack of ore to supply the mill to full capacity.

Conditions in the mine are said to be highly satisfactory, and the amount of new ore placed in sight recently insures a large and regular production of a grade of ore that will yield a profit, as indicated by the exhaustive tests that have been conducted on the ore. The new intermediate drift to the south, at a depth of about 950 feet, is making an excellent showing and a large tonnage is being blocked out in the main ore shoot, opened on the 750 and 800 levels, which is now exposed for a distance of 300 feet. The south drift on the 900 level is being extended to a point near the southern end of the property where connection will be made with the raise from the 1000-foot level, from which good assays have been obtained. E. S. Van Dyck, president and general manager of the Jumbo Extension Company, has just sent a circular letter to the shareholders containing a report of operations in detail.

Encouraging assays have been obtained lately in the south drift from the main shaft of the Vernal property and the management has every confidence in opening an ore body on this ground. It is now thought, however, that greater depth may be required to obtain the best results, as the ground is still broken and the vein appears to be erratic in construction and in the character of ore contained. The prospects, however, are regarded as giving encouragement and the work will be carried on as outlined. A strong flow of water has been coming into the workings of late, and while this has operated to impede progress to some extent it is regarded as the certain indication of a continuous vein and possibly of the near proximity of an ore channel, a condition characteristic of this district. It is the intention of the management to continue the work as at present being prosecuted in order to determine if the water can be readily exhausted or reduced, and if not a pump will be installed.

FLORENCE GOLDFIELD.

Sinking is now in progress on the Florence Goldfield and harder ground is being encountered, insuring the making of better progress than was possible in the shifting, loose ground penetrated around and below the 1100-foot level and at other points in the shaft. Ground of this unstable character has been found at a number of points in the mine, as elsewhere in the district, and is always a source of delay and difficulty. In sinking it is at times necessary to suspend the work for a time to permit the ground to settle and drain, in order that the timbers may be adjusted and the guides held in place. These difficulties in the Florence have now been largely overcome. One of the most interesting parts of the Florence property is on the extreme north end of the Florence claim and near the western boundary, where the famous Reilly lease made a production of about $900,000 in ninety days. It is said that more rich ore was "high-graded" from this lease than from any other in the camp's history. The workings of this lease were never extended to a depth greater than 240 feet, and the company work in this ground has been of limited extent owing to its distance from the main shaft, over 1200 feet.

The Reilly vein extends to the Combination No. 2 and is classed by some as a part of the Combination vein system. On its own ground the Consolidated has extracted a considerable tonnage of rich ore from this vein, and has opened the high-grade in the vein to a depth of about 460 feet. On the Florence it has not been developed below 350 feet. The Reilly vein has its apex in part on the Combination and on the Side Line Fraction now owned by the Consolidated. With the opening of a deep level on the Florence, which will be at a depth of at least 1200 feet, it is the intention of the management to drive a main working drift to the north, to open the Reilly vein and others that may be in the intervening territory. Much interest will inevitably attach to the development of the property and the opening of these known veins at great depth. The Florence mine has now a large tonnage of excellent milling ore exposed, broken down or blocked out, and in due time will be equipped with facilities for the profitable treatment of its product.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

The work now in progress on the property of the Silver Pick Consolidated is of interest to the entire district because of its relation to that already conducted on the adjoining Mohawk and Combination claims of the Consolidated, and from what the near future may bring forth in determining the extension of the veins opened on adjoining ground. On the 260-foot level the drift that is being extended from the main company shaft toward the Mohawk and the ground of the old Ish-Sheets lease has exposed a strong vein and some excellent assays have been obtained. On this level a cross-cut is to be extented along the south line of the Deserted claim of the Silver Pick and parallel with the end line of the Combination in order to determine, if possible, the exact trend and dip of the Combination vein and others that may enter and traverse this ground from the south and southwest.

Shipments from the Tonopah mines were large the past week as follows: Tonopah Mining Company, 3000 tons; Belmont, 1600 tons to the Millers plant and 2110 tons to the new mill; Montana-Tonopah, 1297 tons; Tonopah Extension, 1050 tons; West End, 320 tons; Midway, 40 tons; Mispah Extension, 40 tons; total for the week 9957 tons of an estimated value of $248,925.

The Klondyke district, which is almost midway between Goldfield and Tonopah, is attracting considerable attention at this time. Leasers and prospectors are going into the district in droves, and the assays being obtained are upsetting some of the old-timers.

STARTED UP AT FULL CAPACITY.

TWO MILLS AT TONOPAH OPERATING SEVENTY STAMPS.

There Is No Abatement of Activity in the Region Records. Fine Showing of Deserted Prospects in Hands of Men Who Will Thoroughly Test Their Merits.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) Aug. 17.—Two mills started at full capacity with seventy stamps dropping and pulverizing 4000 tons of ore every week is the mill record of the past seven days. The Belmont, after a series of ordinary drawbacks incidental to breaking in a new mill is now in fine fettle and running smoothly, with sixty stamps pounding out values.

The MacNamara, which was knocked out of commission by lightning three weeks ago, is back in the running with its ten stamps treating a tonnage of relatively greater amount and extracting a larger percentage of values than any other mill in the district. The old Belmont mill at Millers continues to do business at the old stand and will run steadily until such time as the new plant is able to handle all the ore which this big producer is able to hoist to the surface. Close estimates make the tonnage for this week (ending August 17) not less than 11,230 of an approximate value of $280,000. The Belmont new mill at the collar of the big steel gallows frame has been running intermittently with thirty stamps alternating the batteries to test them to their full strength until now the whole mill is grinding and producing in the most satisfactory form.

On the surface there is no abatement of activity the records showing five deserted near mines or old prospects in advanced stages resuming after a suspension of years in some cases. This revival is the greatest tribute that can be paid the recent Merger strike, as each of the new properties is out in quest of the Merger vein or ledge which, according to various authorities runs in the direction of every one of the companies which appears to have faith to try, out the theories of their respective managers or advising engineers. Poles for power lines are coming in by the trainload and electricians are at a premium since every company wants to be first to reach the deeper zone, where values are said to be waiting for the picking up. On top of these the Midway, one of the oldest properties in camp, but one which has suffered from bad management in the past, has decided to sink a new shaft 1200 feet deep 1500 feet north of the present working shaft in virgin territory. Machinery has been ordered and installation will begin in ten days and sinking will begin in thirty days.

ONE MORE CHANCE.

Even the big Tonopah Mining Company, the "granddaddy" of them all, the first in camp, the first to build a mill and the first to declare a dividend in Tonopah, is willing to admit that there is something to be learned from the prospectors out on the western horizon and they are going to take one more chance by renewing work on the Sand Grass claim, where twenty acres have remained dormant.

It was supposed this country was barren, but the acreage is to be thoroughly tested with the one overruling purpose of finding out what the Sand Gross conceals without any thought of framing up for an apex issue with the Tonopah Merger. President Austin has been here all week giving the subject his closest attention and left Wednesday after, it is said, declaring himself in favor of inaugurating aggressive work on the western extremity of the district, where so much capital is being centered now.

TWO NEW RECORDS.

Two new records were made in July for both tonnage and value of product by the Tonopah Extension and the West End mills. The former treated 2056 tons more than in June, when the net earnings were $19,056.24. The July gross aggregated $63,200. Figures for the West End are not available, but the bullion and concentrates are largely in excess of the preceding month.

MIDWAY A HOODOO.

The Midway, in proposing to sink a deep shaft to indulge in further prospecting, recalls the fact that the property has a comparatively small area with an estate of only fifty acres to burrow, and while it is situated in the very heart of the richest section of the district, it has signally failed to achieve wealth for its owners, who are among the best-known mine operators in Tonopah.

Some of the oldest miners say it is the hoodoo mine owing to the sudden stoppage of the ore bodies of the Montana and Tonopah right at the boundary lines of the Midway, which has been officially described by the management as a "bewildering complex of small faults." One of the best mining experts has gone on record with the statement that "there is no geology to explain this; it is simply an element of ill luck and I feel confident that with these characteristics large pay shoots will yet be opened on Midway ground."

TWELFE-FOOT VEIN.

Belmont Development Company reports continuation of twelve feet of ore on the thirteenth level. This width does not represent the full value of the ledge, which keeps on

The Road to Independence

April 17th, 1906, thousands of San Franciscans walked the streets, secure in the belief that they possessed wealth.

The following morning these same thousands were paupers. Earthquake and fire had wiped out the accumulations of a lifetime and destroyed property valued at $700,000,000.

Such a calamity cannot visit the farmer. In this land of irrigation and perpetual sunshine there are no uncertainties. Every such calamity shows the city man the security of land ownership.

News From the Great Oil Fields.

Santa Maria.

HEAVY OIL HAS A BIG FUTURE.

Cat Canyon Product Makes Fine Asphalt.

Producers May Take Steps to Increase Output.

May Compete With Trinidad When Canal Opens.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA MARIA, Aug. 15.—The Cat Canyon district may develop into a great center for the production of asphalt. The greater part of the oil found here is so heavy that to use it for the ordinary purposes to which oil is put—fuel and refining—seems out of the question. It contains, however, a very high percentage of pure asphalt. A considerable portion of the output is now being shipped to Hadley, a few miles north of here on the Pacific Coast Railway, and is made into asphalt at the plants of the Baker-Ensign Refining Company and the California Asphalt Company, but these are small plants and are prepared to take care of only a fraction of the output that is being developed.

It is now recognized that the popular way to handle the product is to make it into asphalt before it leaves the field, and it is not improbable that in the near future the plans of the Santa Maria Oilfields Company to this end will be carried out.

This concern operates the Palmer Annex, the Los Alamos Petroleum, the Merchants' and other companies in this district, and is the owner of the Santa Maria Railway, a broad-gauge road built from Guadalupe on the Southern Pacific to the company's camp on the Palmer Annex property. It was built for the original purpose of handling the company's own product.

Among the plans of the owners was the construction of an asphalt plant at the terminus of the road. The plans and specifications are all ready, but have been pigeon-holed for some time. They are now, however, again receiving attention. The company has a production of from 1200 to 1400 barrels of oil, running from 8 to 10 deg. in gravity, and cannot get rid of it. Storage tanks and reservoirs are being built, and the plans for the asphalt plant are being gone over. The plans call for a factory having a capacity of handling 4500 barrels a day.

There were 166,000 tons of California asphalt shipped east last year, but all of this went to points in the Middle West. With all-water transportation, which will be afforded through the Panama Canal, it is said that California asphalt can be laid down in New York at a price to compete successfully with the Trinidad product. And the Cat Canyon district will probably by that time be in a position to furnish its quota of the output. The product manufactured at Hadley from the Cat Canyon oil is of an excellent quality—as good, in fact, as any in the State. The district is connected with the tidewater by two railroads—the Pacific Coast running to San Luis Obispo and Port Hartford and the Santa Maria Valley road connecting with the Southern Pacific at Guadalupe. So far as shipping facilities are concerned, the district is in good shape.

Owing to the inability to handle the heavy Cat Canyon oil, there is a considerable amount of storage in the field. The Palmer Oil Company still has a large amount of oil in its reservoirs, although it is shipping out about seven cars a day, and delivering some to the Associated lines. The Palmer has tried a number of experiments in order to raise the gravity of its product so it might be pumped through a pipe line, but with unsatisfactory results.

The Brooks Oil Company, although having a smaller production, is about in the same condition as the Palmer This concern controls the California Asphalt Company at Hadley, and ships its product, which amounts to about 350 barrels a day, to that point. The company built a pipe line from its property to the railroad at Sisquoc, but it is about impossible to use it. The railroad has since been extended from Sisquoc to the Palmer Oil Company camp, which is not far from the Brooks property, and there is talk of extending a spur to that point.

Operations in the Cat Canyon section of the Santa Maria field are quiet. None of the companies are starting any new work except the Palmer, which is obliged to raise its production in order to accomplish the sale, recently reported, to English people, and the company intends drilling a number of new wells and has commenced work on two. One of these will be drilled with a rotary outfit, which method is a new one in this field.

The property of the Dispatch Oil Company directly north of the Palmer Annex has been acquired by L. D. Peters and associates, who are extensively drilling in the Scepe district. The Dispatch well was drilled to a depth of 3200 feet, after going through sixty-five feet of sand. The well was cemented and when the writer visited the field was being bailed out. A baller was lost, and after a long fishing job, the work was shut down. Peters is going on with the work, and expects to get a well.

The Summit Oil Company well, the farthest north of any in the field, has been cemented. A fine showing of oil was found there and the owners believe they have struck the real thing.

In advance of the Summit, a tract of 2000 acres, extending to Triglers Point, has recently been leased by A. A. Dougherty, general manger of the Santa Maria Oilfields, and drilling will be started within sixty days.

The old Los Alamos Petroleum well is still putting out about 750 barrels of oil, or rather liquid asphalt. The gravity of the product is about 10 degrees. Two other wells on the Palmer Annex bring the production of this company up to 1200 barrels a day.

In the old Santa Maria field things are rather lively, as considerable new work is going on, and a number of old wells are beig deepened. The Union's sensational gusher on the eastern part of the Newlove tract has the center of the stage at present. It is more than half a mile from any development, and might almost be called a wildcat. It is still flowing about 200 barrels an hour of thirty-one gravity oil, and is showing a large amount of gas. The well is not far from the Los Flores Oil Company's tract, on which probably $250,000 have been expended to get an oil well, and the property is still minus the oil well. The Union well makes this territory look better.

The Dome-Pinal Company is running six strings of tools, drilling three new wells and deepening three. The Rice Ranch is drilling two new wells and deepening two. The Western Union is running three strings.

There are now four gasoline-from-gas plants in operation in this field, turning out an aggregate of 2500 gallons of gasoline a day. The Dome-Pinal Company has ordered another eighty-horsepower unit and will double the capacity of its present plant. The Purity Gasoline Company is putting in another plant, a duplicate of its Rice Ranch plant, on the Western Union Oil Company's property. The Union will increase its gasoline manufacturing business in the near future. The company has about 17,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day on its various properties in this field.

The Midway Gas Company has brought a lot of producers in this state out of their trance as to the value of natural gas for various purposes, and the Santa Maria producers in particular are sitting up and noticing things.

A Judge's Story.

One must learn to sympathize with domestic frailties, says "Parry's Judgment in Vacation." I was rebuking a man the other day for backing up his wife in what was not only an absurd story, but one in which I could see he had no belief.

"You should really be more careful," I said, "and I tell you candidly I don't believe a word of your wife's story."

"You may do as yer like," he said, mournfully, "but I've got to."

Coalinga Independents Had a Bad July.

Nine New Wells Brought in During Month.

Syndicate Company Erects Big Gauging Tank.

COALINGA, Aug. 15.—The report of R. W. Dallas, manager of the local branch of the Independent Producers' Agency, has been completed for the month of July, and shows a slight falling off in production, taking into consideration the number of days in July and in the month previous. This decrease is in spite of a general healthier condition of the fields, as can be seen from a glance at the table appended.

The total of fuel consumed in the field during the past month was 63,500 barrels. Private shipments by car, 19,700 barrels. Private shipments by pipe line and wagon, 10,700 barrels. There were nine new wells brought in during the month with a total daily production of 545 barrels. Following is the tabulated report:

SIXTH SENSE FOR SHIPS.

Sir Hiram Maxim Would Provide Vessels With an Electrical Device that Will Give Warnings.

[London Standard:] Sir Hiram Maxim has just passed a pamphlet explaining his device for providing ships with a "sixth sense" that shall forewarn them of objects in their proximity. In future, if his invention is put into practice, ships will feel their way in the dark or the fog with a foreknowledge similar to that possessed by bats.

"When a bat flies about in total darkness," he writes, "the best of its wings sends out a series of pulsations or waves after the manner of sound-waves. . . . These waves strike against all surrounding objects, and, like sound or light, are reflected back to their source of origin. . . . They are received by the sensitive organs which form part of the face of the bat. The extremely delicate nature of the bat's wings, together with the sensitiveness of its organ of the sixth sense, enables it to judge the distance to any object. . . . .

"The energy employed by the bat is certainly not more than one-thousandth part of a horse power, but it serves the bat's purposes perfectly well. Suppose, now, that we construct an apparatus that will produce atmospheric vibrations of about the same frequency as those produced by the bat, but use 200 or 300 horse power. . . . These vibrations. . . will not be audible, but they would be able to travel at least five miles, and send back to the ship a reflected echo that would be strong enough to be detected."

Working on this theory, Sir Henry Maxim would fit ships with an instrument for producing vibrations and an instruments for receiving their reflexes and making them audible by ringing bells. "For producing the vibrations, . . . use a modified form of a siren, something about fourteen or fifteen vibrations per second. These will not come within the range of the human ear." For receiving the vibrations, "I provide . . . a large diaphragm lightly drawn over a drum-shaped cylinder, . . . always able to vibrate freely in response to the waves of the echo, and its vibrations are made to open and close certain electrical circuits which ring a series of bells of various sizes." A third apparatus gives a chart of the reflex vibrations, by which the distance and size of the object reflected can be determined.

In an appendix upon icebergs, Sir Hiram says that he is very strongly of the opinion that the thermometer, either in the air or in the water, can be of very little use in their detection, but that his apparatus would not only detect the presence of an iceberg, but would indicate its approximate direction from the ship, and measure the distance with a high degree of accuracy. Although the pamphlet is well illustrated with sectional diagrams of the three organs that are to constitute Sir Hiram's "Sixth sense for ships," he promises that if interested parties wish to see his large colored drawings, which are much easier to understand, he is prepared to show them.

"I am not going to rest at this point," he adds. "I shall shortly produce a recording instruments with a selective power that will not receive any vibrations except those due to the echo of the blast sent out."

The Socialized German Nation.

[World's Work:] A German laborer may begin life attended by a physician or nurse paid by the State; he is christened by a State clergyman; is taught the rudiments of learning and his handicraft by the State. He is drafted by the State into the army, devoting two of his best years to the drill sergeant. If he falls ill, his suffering is assuaged by the knowledge that his wife and children are cared for, and that his expenses will be paid during illness, and he spends his convalescence in a sumptuous state hospital. If he falls victim to an accident, the ample insurance, even if he be permanently injured, is a balm to his suffering. If he gets out of work, city and State unite to find or make work for him. If he wanders from town to town in search of work, the cities through which he passes offer him free hospitality. If he wishes to move to another part of his town, the municipal bureau will be glad to help him find a house, or even lend him money to get one of his own.

If he is in dispute with his employer, the government furnishes A court of arbitration. If he is sued by his master or wishes to sue him, the State has provided a special industrial court. If he is in trouble the city places a lawyer at his disposal.

SEVEN PRODUCTS.

Superintendent Mitchell of the Maine State Oil Company stated today that by the first of the month work would be started on a new rig and drilling commenced as soon as completed. The property contains 160 acres and is located on section 31. There are seven producing wells on the property and the present plan is to keep one string of drilling tools running all the time. As soon as the new well is completed another will be started.

GOES TO INDIA.

Having accepted a position through Thomas Hayes of the Burmah Oil Company, C. Rassmussen, formerly of the Bunting Iron Works, left on the 5:30 train last evening for San Francisco, from which port he will sail August 17 for Burmah, India.

Rassmussen has been employed at the local ironworks as a machinist for the past two years. In his new position Rassmussen will have charge of the machine shops for the Burmah company.

ERECT GAUGING TANK.

Superintendent Carl Baker of the Coalinga Syndicate Oil Company is having a 1500-barrel gauging tank erected on the property of the company on section 31, 20-15. He states that arrangements for the delivery of the oil from the two wells producing on the lease have not been made and he could not say whether the oil would be delivered by train or pipe line. At the present time the wells together are averaging about 225 barrels per day and there are at least 26,000 barrels of oil in sump storage on the lease. Baker states that the wells will produce more when pumped to their full capacity.

Yesterday evening while hauling his last load of eight-inch casing, which was being transferred from one point of the lease year to another, Paul Evans, a teamster for the Hydraulic Mining and Drilling Company, sustained serious injuries to his left foot which may necessitate the amputation of that member. In some manner the load of heavy casing slipped and fell upon his foot crushing nearly every bone in it. The young man's pain was so severe that he was nearly rendered unconscious and it was not until it was discovered that his team was loose that his fellow employees reached him where he was lying beside the road.

A SURPRISING CORPSE.

Body Snatchers Find Themselves Possessed of a Warmer Body Than They Had Expected.

[Denver Republican:] Apropos of the recent resolution of the Bible Students' convention in Washington repudiating the doctrine of a literal "hell fire," Dr. Philip Hale Curtin of Wheeling said to a reporter:

"Hell fire is rarely mentioned any more except in jest—except, for example, as in the body-snatching story.

"A doctor, according to this story, saw, late one night, a fine automobile halted outside a cemetery. He hid behind a tree, for he suspected that body snatchers were at work; and, sure enough, in a few minutes he saw two body snatchers stagger from the cemetery carrying a body. They placed it upright in the automobile, as though it were alive, propping it securely in the back seat, and then they hurried back to the cemetery to fill the violated grave again.

"The doctor in their absence lifted the body out of the automobile, hid it under a hedge, and took its place himself.

"Soon the scoundrels returned. One seated himself at the wheel and the other seated himself in the back seat beside the body, so as to support it. Then, in the darkness, they glided off.

"After a while the man in the rear seat said in a rather awed tone:

"'This body seems mighty warm for a corpse.'

"The chauffeur reached back his hand and touched it.

"'Don't it, though!' he muttered, between perplexity and fear.

"Then the corpse, in deep, sepulchral tones, exclaimed:

"'Warm? Of course I'm warm! And if you had been where I've been for the last two days you'd be warm, too!'

"With loud yells of horror the body snatchers leaped from the automobile and fled. The doctor seized the wheel and drove it home. He has it, they say, still."

The Oil Industry.

BIG NEW WELLS FOR FULLERTON.

Columbia Gets Four-Hundred-Barrel Producer.

Output of Company's Orange Gusher Improving.

Fields Are Alive With New Derricks and Wells.

The Columbia Oil Company has brought in a big producer in well No. 22 on the Olinda division of the Fullerton district, and it is now pumping 400 barrels a day. The hole was drilled to 2950 feet.

The production in well No. 3 in Brea Canyon has increased to 900 barrels within the last few days, and the well is steadily clearing up. The increase in the production was the result of enlarging the hole. Great care was necessary in this operation because it was feared that sand would get in and cut the pipe. When the passageway for the oil was first enlarged it was found that the sand was beginning to appear, and so the opening has been narrowed.

This well has every appearance of being one of the largest producers in the Brea Canyon. It came in about three weeks ago with a tremendous gas pressure, which was very difficult to control. It is located a short distance from the big well of the Birch Oil Company.

WORK FOR LARGER OUTPUT.

The Palmer Union Oil Company has been cleaning out several wells in Cat Canyon, Santa Maria district, to increase production. In well No. 1, which was one of the largest gushers in the field at one time, and which recently commenced to produce about 500 barrels a day on the pump, it was found that some obstruction was interfering with its full output. It was therefore thought best to clean it and several other wells are being given the same treatment. Quite an increase in the yield of these producers is looked for as a result of this. Well No. 4 is steadily flowing 1000 barrels.

The Palmer company has been shipping a large quantity of oil for

A Sober Thought for Investors

At the present time, when speculation is so frequently indulged in by corporations, it is refreshing to find a company maintaining an absolute, definite policy of

No Dangerous Speculation— No Costly Debts—

Security is demanded by investors above all else. Sound security is the right of every investor. Every wise investor demands such security.

Income is of secondary importance, for without security the income is problematical. No matter how large the present income may be, you may lose it.

Profits are considered last. The company which indulges in speculation incurs costly debts will never be able to guarantee satisfactory profits.

Note, September 1st price advances from $1.35 to $1.45 share.

TUCSON IS COMING BACK.

Enjoying the Liveliest Period for Years and Many Old-time Mines Are Still Idle.

[Special Correspondence of the Times.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Aug. 16.—Not for years has mining been as active around Tucson as at the present time, even though the Imperial and many other old-time properties still are idle. It has been estimated that $150,000 a month is being paid for wages in the mines of Pima county on properties that were not being worked a year ago. Much of the activity has been due to the operation of the Pioneer smelter, which is about to start again after a short stoppage due to the lack of sufficient sulphide ores. To correct this condition, a contract has been made for the supply of four carloads of sulphides a week.

The sum of $200,000 has been raised for the well-known Centurion mine, half to be used in development and the balance for pumps, hoists and other necessary machinery. Some of the best ore found on the property cannot be handled at present on account of water.

Renewed activity is noted at Johnson Camp, due to the rise in copper and work has been resumed on the Peabody and other Johnson properties. Available at the camp are a 125-ton copper furnace and transportation may be had by a railroad which operated but little before the fatal slump in the copper market.

The August group of copper claims in the Santa Rita Mountains, twelve miles north of Patagonia, have been purchased by an English syndicate, the Arizona-Pacific Copper Company, of N. A. McDonald and John A. McDonald of Harshaw and August Yarick of Patagonia. The price paid is said to have been $50,000. T. Cunningham, an English mining engineer, is on the ground, preparing for work.

FILM MEN PIONEERS.

As indicative of the varied topography to be found within the vast 5000-acre Hill tract of the Los Angeles Investment Company, on the southwest side of the city, the Universal Film Company, makers of moving pictures, has leased for a year the right to use this section for picture settings. Indians, cowboys, heroes and heroines and swarthy tragedians have already taken up their abode on the land. Two hundred horses, many wagons and complete camping equipments have been scattered about in different parts of the investment company's property and simultaneously with the building of homes and the advance work of surveyors, thrillers will be enacted daily.

BUYS VILLA SITE.

R. W. Vincent, European representative for the J. W. Robinson Company's Boston Store of this city, has just purchased two large lots comprising a fine villa site, in Santa Monica Canyon. It is his intention to ultimately improve the property. On the Santa Monica side of the canyon, the channel is now being dug and work will soon start on the other side. Ditches for water pipes have been dug. Several carloads of pipe are on the grounds. Mission Inn is done away with. In its place, Frank Small is building a home. Three other houses are in course of construction, one of them the property of Mr. Bundy. The L. D. Loomis company reports the sale to Dr. Cecil Reynolds of the Hotel Pepper, of two lots for $2050, and the sale to Marcia Chrystal Chant of a large lot for $4950.

WESTWARD ACTIVITIES.

Victor G. Kleinberger and F. H. Edwards, subdividers, report sales in the new West Adams and Washington boulevard tract as follows: Charles Paulson, $800; Henry Wiatt, $2750; Augusta Nelson, two lots, $925 each; R. B. Kent, four lots; three at $975 each, and one at $800; R. R. Zurcher, $590; Clara H. Adams, $1000; Michael Malley, $1000; J. S. Brown, $590; Belle C. Adams, $800; Roy R. Adams, $800; I. Olson, $900; Millie E. Simmons, $800; George T. Andersen, two lots, $875 each; Anna L. Willis, $400; Al T. White, two lots, $850 each; E. B. Andrews, $1450, and Ralph Doney, $700.

In the Eagle Rock City tract are as follows: O. J. Brodin, $700; C. J. Robbs, $850; Mrs. S. I. Barck, $400; Mrs. S. I. Barck, $600; Anthony Kahler, $800, and R. V. Trento $600. At Gamon Junction: Carl Line bought a lot for $450 and J. Orr a site for $700. In the Western avenue and Thirty-ninth street tract Albert Schramm bought two lots at $1050 and $1100, and George T. Allen one lot at $975.

GIBRALTAR COMPANY BUYS HEMET TRACT

INVESTMENT CONCERN MAKES ADDITIONS TO ITS VALLEY HOLDINGS

Another large real estate transaction was consummated last week when the Gibraltar Investment and Home Building company, of Los Angeles, took over the 215 acres of the Walters' ranch, four miles west of Hemet, the latter part of last week.

This is only a portion of the acreage held by the company in the Hemet valley, and it will be disposed of in the same way that its other holding are being put upon the market. It will be divided into five, ten and twenty acre tracts and set to trees. The nursery stock of this company will be used in setting out the orchards. Isaiah Martin, formerly of Redlands but now of Los Angeles, is the president of this investment company. He was for many years the largest single owner of acreage in Southern California. [illegible]

OLIVE GROWING PROLIFIC

California cannot at present raise enough to go around. We import more than one-half the oil used in this country. With these conditions prices are better than ever before and the olive industry certainly has a great future. Any one owning land in the right location and of the right kind will surely make no mistake in planting to olives.

L.A. TIMES

[illegible] Aug. 15.—Conditions being found [illegible] exhaustive experiment, for the manufacture of the finest grade of olives in this Central California's thermal belt, steps were decided upon for the establishment of [illegible] three thousand olive trees in the Dover district of the [illegible] Sevilla variety.

So great is the demand for this Tulare county fruit, which is declared by experts to be the superior of anything raised in California, that they have been offered ten-year contracts for all the fruit they can raise, at prices approximating $400 per ton. Contract prices on pickled fruit run from $400 to $800 per ton, depending on quality.

OLIVE BUYERS AFTER RAISERS

The olive buyers are on the ground very early this year and are making every effort to purchase the winter's output this month. A buyer from the Los Angeles Olive Growers association was in Redlands this morning, and visited owners of olive groves for several miles around trying to purchase their fall crops. Olives were purchased last season for about $183 per ton, but persons who are in a position to know say that the price will [illegible]

Dear Sirs:-

Find enclosed Money Order to secure (5000) five thousand shares of your — preferd stock as per your ad "San Bernardino Sun" issue of Sunday.

I am familiar with many of Mr Martins Nursery acts, and can not say too much in their favor, I heartily endorse the venture as well as the method involved. And little Home Lovers will appeal to the many working small acreage.

Yours

Gibraltar Investment and Home Building stock will advance to 12c a share at midnight on next Saturday, August 24th. This means a profit of 200% by the increase in value of the shares secured by payment down before the advance. The actual value of your investment in Gibraltar is far beyond this figure as the stock is worth much more today than the selling price. The thriving condition of the olive industry and the big prices being paid for olive trees, of which Gibraltar owns the largest number in the world, together with the demand for planted olive orchards, insures the selling of Gibraltar 8% preferred stock for at least 15c a share by January 1. The 200% profit that may be secured now is on the total increased value of the number of shares subscribed to. A quarterly dividend of 2¼% will be paid September 1st, the books closing August 26th. The remarkable demands of the thriving olive industry are the talk of the public press throughout California, and insure profits beyond estimate to every holder of Gibraltar stock.

Big Profits in Olives

Our president, ISAIAH MARTIN, who has back of him twenty-four years of CONTINUOUS BUSINESS SUCCESS along the lines in which this company is operating, and who is the foremost practical orchardist and nurseryman of the Pacific Coast, says:

"The olive industry will be our greatest and most profitable horticultural industry, being greater and more profitable than our great orange industry, as there are 50 or 100 acres in this State that can be planted successfully to olives to one for oranges, as the olive tree will stand more cold and will produce prolifically in the great Imperial, San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, and in the Salt River Valley in Arizona, doing splendidly almost anywhere in these sections as well as near Los Angeles and San Diego in Southern California.

"The phenomenal advance in the olive industry is due to the fact that has just been proved that California can produce the ripe olive, which is a food and not a relish like the green olive or orange, and that much more food can be produced on an acre of olives than upon the same amount of land in raising hogs or cattle. Another is that out of more than 126 varieties we have just found that the Mission is the one great variety, with possibly Manzanillo as the next best and with a small amount of Ascolano and Sevillano for special trade.

"It is claimed by the best authorities that we have no competition from Spain, Italy or other countries. They cannot produce a good ripe pickled olive as they get too soft, the same as no other country can grow the Washington Navel orange. Another reason is the 'tin can.' Now olives are being canned and are ready for the table the year round in just the right condition, increasing the consumption wonderfully.

"When the rest of this Nation uses as many olives per capita as Los Angeles it will take possibly one thousand times our present production to supply the United States. Growers are now taking much better care of their orchards, having found that olives need to be fertilized and irrigated about the same as oranges, and that then they can be produced for the same cost, which is about $20 per ton or less on the trees.

"This reduced cost on market prices insures far greater profits for the olive than can be made from oranges. With the packers anxious to contract for ten years at $100 to $150 per ton on the trees for olives to pickle, while the orange growers have only averaged from $25 to $40 per ton on the trees, it is self-evident how much more profitable the olive is. We are operating along the lines of planting country acreage to the fruit trees best suited to the soil. The greatest profits are to be made in subdividing land and also in the olive industry."

For the present, subscriptions will be received for cash or upon the monthly payment plan to either preferred or common stock at 11 cents a share. The real money-makers embrace a big business opportunity at the beginning. Get your full share from the profits of the olive industry and the advance of California land values by buying now.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

A STRIKE at Silvertown, Eng., collapsed after twelve weeks' conflict. One thousand of the hands returned to work, but 450 men and women are permanently out of work, practically dependent on the public for support. The Strike Committee, in reporting these facts, flippantly stated that they "looked upon this defeat as a victory"; and so it may have been for them—the committee; but what about their unfortunate dupes? What misery does that twelve weeks' conflict represent if the facts could be known? Was it a victory for the 450 men and women, beggared and thrown out of employment, to say nothing of the children and others dependent upon their earnings.

At the close of the Manchester (Eng.) gas workers' strike the strikers complained that they had been badly advised by their Socialist leaders (as are the strikers in the United States today) and bitter complaints were made; the money support promised had not been forthcoming. How can much strike relief money be forthcoming in England, where the union wage-earners support (salaries and expenses) an army of 10,000 labor agitators? Even in this country, out of $360,000 of union labor's wages money handled by Gompers, Morrison, Mitchell and company in 1911, only $4192 was paid out by that self-seeking firm (American Federation of Labor) for "strike benefits" in that year, and only $6484 out of an equal handling the year before. Doubtless these significant facts are not generally known to the body of American contributing union labor. Where did the other $354,000 go to, and what for each year? Was it another case of:

Received from union labor for MacNamaras' defense, $220,000; sent to Clarence Darrow (Morrison said,) $170,000, without any details as to what Darrow did with the $170,000. How much of it did Job Harriman get? How much of it did Joseph Scott get? You union labor men who pay the piper out to be told what tunes the piper plays.

Following the recent coal strike in England, a union labor Socialist pamphlet, entitled the "Minor's Next Step" urges, as follows:

"That a continual agitation be carried on in favor of continuing the minimum wage and lessening the hours of labor, until we have extracted the whole of the employers' profits.

"That our objective be to build up an organization that will ultimately take over the mining industry, and carry it on in the interest of the workers.

"The irritation strike depends for its successful adoption on men holding clearly the point of view that their interests and those of the employer are necessarily hostile (a monstrous and criminal fallacy, Editor Times;) further, that the employer is only vulnerable in one place—his profits.

"Therefore, if the men wish to bring effective pressure to bear, they must use measures which decrease profits. One way of doing this is to decrease production while continuing at work (and receiving the minimum or larger wage"—robbing the employer, Editor, Times.)

The villainous pamphlet then proceeds to give an example how this has been done:

"The men, instead of coming out on strike reduced their output by half. Instead of sending four trains of coal from a stall, two only were filled, and so on. The management thus saw its output cut in half, while its wages, payments and running expenses remained the same."

In a few days a profitable industry was turned into a losing one, boasts the union labor Socialist pamphlet.

When to the folly of the striker is added dishonest repudiation of his solemn agreement, and the brutality of hounding unfortunate men and women out of house and home, or destroying their lives by dynamite, because they stand up for their liberty to work for their livelihood, the striker is more than a fool—he is a criminal, no matter what Darrow, Harriman, Scott and Co. may say to the contrary. In this connection, the disgrace to Los Angeles is that Joseph Scott, of this dynamite-murderer defense trio, is still a member of its Board of Education.

Striking girl fur workers in New York City, and the girl children of striking male fur workers on the street corners, holding out cigar boxes for charity, for food, from the passers-by pauperising themselves and their cause, in fact. And this while work in plenty and wages are waiting. How would you like your daughters to be doing that on the streets of Los Angeles while you were on a strike, you discontented union labor worker here? Yet that is just what a general strike here would mean, after its first two or three weeks, to say nothing of filling the columns of the Daily Journal with legal notices of foreclosures of mortgages on workers' homes — those homes which you can easily pay for while your weekly pay envelopes are forthcoming regularly.

Baron Devonport, head of the Port of London, whose death was publicly prayed for (with 10,000 cheering,) by Ben Tillett, one of the leaders and most violent one, of the London dock workers strike, is a self-made man. He has worked himself up from his start as a farmer's boy—from nothing to great wealth, by uncommon intelligence and will power. Tillett's blasphemy finally and totally alienated public sympathy (without which no strike can possibly succeed,) stopped relief contributions, and really ended the ten-weeks' starvation strike. "Oh! God," said Ben Tillett, "Strike Lord Devonport dead." By his employees, and they are many, Baron Devonport is esteemed as a just and generous man. In the strike he properly upheld authority so that London might have food.

Intermittent violence continues by those of the London striking dock workers who will not go back to work, though their wives and children are starving in the streets. The docks are still guarded by police and soldiers are in readiness to act if the violence becomes too great. Every man reporting for work is searched for weapons. Strike agitators' harangues continue, inflaming the passions of the men. Food vans are being attacked. Agitators assert that the capitalists have bought the press, Parliament, the pulpit and God—the latter being rank blasphemy. Two hundred and fifty million dollars is a low estimate of the total loss by this strike—all because just one man would not be forced against his will to join a certain labor union, and his employers would not take his work away from him and his family on union labor's outrageous demand.

Striking girl fur workers in New York, (pickets) are attacking those who want to work, in the streets. What a wretched business that, for womanhood to give itself to? They also held up an auto stage and tore off the shirtwaists of women passengers.

The Sun of New York says:

"For the fourth time in about twenty years the Bricklayers and Masons International Union is preparing to take a referendum vote on joining the American Federation of Labor. There are 969 locals of the Bricklayers' International Union with an aggregate membership of about 76,000, of which 11,000 are in Greater New York locals. It was said last evening that the proposition to affiliate with the A. F. of L. will be opposed—by the New York locals, which have opposed it before. The bricklayers of New York have opposed affiliation with any of the local central bodies of unions in the building trades, partly to avoid being entangled in sympathetic strikes. They are the highest paid building mechanics in the United States."

The proposed strike on the street railways of Albany, N. Y., has been voted down in favor of settlement by conference.

A strike of the masters and mates engaged in the Hawaiian inter-island steamship traffic, for a twenty per cent. wage increase is on the cards.

The strike on the French trans-Atlantic steamships' line is ended without result.

The New York theater musicians and stage hands will not strike. Agreement has been made with the managers.

Union labor throughout Australia will unite to fight the bill pending in the Queensland Legislature for compelling industrial peace. If Queensland passes the bill the leaders are afraid other States will copy it. The bill prohibits strikes under a heavy penalty until time has been given for a government arbitration board to attempt an adjustment.

UNIONIZING THE CONSUMERS.

Just as Proper a Movement as Is Being Conducted Now by the Labor Unions of the Country.

[Christian Science Monitor:] It has been said that in one of the great manufacturing cities of the United States, what was needed to insure greater equability in industrial conditions, so far as they express themselves through the relations of employer and employee, was the "union of all unions." From the standpoint of organized labor and of the employers of organized labor, such an opinion is perfectly reasonable and commends itself through a certain compactness of scheme. But it illustrates fairly well the view that organized labor takes of its own free will and is more or less willingly shared by the employers of labor, in that it leaves quite out of view, no doubt through inadvertence, the fact that such a union would be of advantage only to a very small part of the population. By all means, say the employers, form the various unions into a more or less coherent body. By all means, says organized labor, let the unions arrange themselves in any way in which a collective bargain can better be assured. Both sides have at least a common point of understanding; each sees a profitable change of method. In the meantime, what of the remaining 80 or 90 per cent. of the population that does not happen either to be organized in the ranks of labor or to come within the categories of capital?

This portion of the population that we prefer to call the consuming part, instead of by the somewhat overworked title of "the people," is preponderant as always in numbers, but not predominant through organization. It is shuttlecocked between capital and labor until what time it discovers that it can do a little "unionizing" on its own account. When the first timidity and doubt have been overcome, there will burst upon the admiring vision of 'labor" and "capital," a union composed of consumers that will insist upon its very real rights quite as firmly as those that at present constitute themselves at once the wards and the masters of public convenience, public comfort, public necessity. Logic is sometimes a bitter remedy, but the consuming majority will in time learn its stern but kindly uses and then dispense it, to others as well as themselves. This is an age of organization, of intelligent co-operation, at least in limited areas; and though it would not become us to prophesy, we cannot but think that in time the consuming majority will learn not only that they have rights but that those rights can only be enforced by concerted opposition to anything in the community that would prey upon it under the plea of obtaining justice. When this day arrives, we can behold the grateful sight of the insurance of justice to all, even to the innocent.

EASTER ISLAND'S STATUES.

An English Scientist Will Endeavor to Discover the Origin of the Wonderful Archaeological Remains.

[Christian Science Monitor:] One of the most interesting quests which have ever engaged the attention of explorers will shortly be undertaken by W. Scoresby Routledge, the traveler.

During this month Mr. Routledge, with his wife and a small party—including a navigating officer lent by the admiralty, who are taking great interest in the expedition—will leave England in the Mana, a 250-ton motor auxiliary yacht. They will attempt to solve the mystery of the wonderful archaeological remains of Easter Island, in the South Pacific, and to make a complete survey of the island, which is the farthest outpost of the Polynesian race. The expedition was planned by Mr. Routledge in conjunction with the authorities of the British Museum, who regard it as of considerable importance.

On the island, which is about fifty square miles in extent, are immense platforms facing the sea, formed of large stones fitted together with cement. Some of these weigh five tons, and in places the sea walls are nearly thirty feet high and over 200 feet long. On the land side of the platform there are broad terraces on which once stood colossal figures carved out of lava from an extinct crater eight miles away.

On some of the platforms there are upwards of a dozen images now thrown from their pedestals and lying in all directions. The largest are thirty-seven feet high, but the majority vary from fourteen feet to sixteen feet. They are carved in the shape of human beings. Two of the statues were brought to England in 1868, and are now in the British Museum. On the island are also remains of stone houses 100 feet long by about twenty feet high.

It is to discover the origin of these works that Mr. Routledge is going to the Easter Island. The present inhabitants of Easter Island know nothing of their construction. By some the theory is held that Easter Island is part of a submerged continent. If this were so it is thought that possibly sufficient manual labor might have been at hand to carry out the work.

It Is San Jacinto's Turn Now

You have seen valleys, and heard of valleys, but unless you have seen our beautiful San Jacinto Valley you can have but little conception what a real valley is like. It is more than a "level strip of land between hills," it is eighteen thousand acres level as a floor, surrounded by beautiful mountains, and every acre under cultivation, beautiful ranches and orchards of every kind, fine alfalfa farms, great potato fields, in fact most everything that will grow in any country can be grown here to better advantage.

All we want now is a few more good, neighborly settlers to join us in an expansion that we are proud to be able to make, and doubly proud to know that the highest priced acre offered in the valley at this time would still be a bargain at twice the price asked. Heretofore we have had population enough, because of the scarcity of water, but conditions have changed since the great water discovery made recently. We now have more water than we have land, and not quite as many settlers as either, so come right along and bring your friends. You can't beat it for climate, water, fertility, beauty, or a place to accumulate a snug little fortune quick.

We have people with us who have traveled all over the world, and lived in this State for years, and are in a position to judge of the true condition as compared with other localities—they are here to stay. Now is the time to get in right. All we ask is a look. Every one should see the best there is to be had in any line before they decide. It aids the judgment in making comparison, we know if you will become interested enough to make comparison that the jig is up. When this is done, it only remains for us to co-operate with you and you with us in making San Jacinto Valley the most desirable home place on earth. Come over and see us, it won't cost you a cent after you get here, as we have a committee appointed with machines to show everybody around, absolutely free. These machines are at your service every day in the week.

shops to avoid trouble. They must be more ingenious, more tactful, and more resourceful, to meet the present conditions. Their responsibilities are greater, as are all of the responsibilities of the railway man of today, as compared with a few years ago.

How long can present conditions obtain? Can a master mechanic or foreman fear his employees and their power and influence with those in authority and render efficient service? Does he not lose in self-respect when he lets some shiftless agitator tell him who shall do certain work and who shall not; when he is compelled to use as a gang boss, by reason of seniority, a man he knows to be incompetent and disloyal; when he is compelled to not see spoiled work, misused tools, or time-killers? If his energy, ability, and desire for increased responsibility is to be circumscribed by carelessness, disloyalty and ingratitude, is he not apt to degenerate and lose heart?

It is the crime of our industrial life that such conditions obtain, and they do obtain to a greater or less extent in every railway shop in this country, and they are not getting better—on the contrary, they are getting worse. The men are dissatisfied, they are not prosperous, they are full of unrest. They are assessed unmercifully to remedy some far-fetched grievance of which perhaps they have no knowledge. The wives and children suffer, and they are taught by the professional fixer of their wrongs to strike, as the serpent, at the hand that feeds them. The effect of deception, violence and brutality is always a boomerang, but it is deplored that the innocent must suffer while the guilty are for a time, at least, seemingly prosperous.

Not all of the organizations are conducted in this way. Those that are not are making real progress. They have wise leaders who are conservative. They advise and compel their members to keep contracts. They go to the very extreme before breaking with their employers, and seldom does such an event occur; consequently, they are respected. They do not attempt to interfere with the management of the property, therefore they do not become persona non grata with their superiors.

The metal crafts must throw off this yoke of ignorant and corrupt leadership. They are intelligent men. They certainly can be deceived only a part of the time—not all of the time. Let them make an impartial and searching investigation of their affairs and compare them with other organizations working for the same people. Select men who are trustworthy and intelligent to conduct their affairs on the same lines. Make an effort to uplift their organization to the plane of intelligent, reasonable and conservative employees. Concede to the managers an interest in their affairs, instead of imaginary hostility. Give the foreman credit for knowing his business. He should be unrestricted by lodge affiliation—he cannot serve two masters. Remember that there was only one perfect man, and he was crucified 2000 years ago. Give and take. Let the indolent, improvident and unskilled take their proper places in the scale of humanity. Give every man and boy a helping hand, and a good wish that he may become foreman, master mechanic, superintendent of machinery or manager, and help him get there. They will have a friend at court, at least.

The employees should take pride in the railway and resent any interference with its rights, and contend always that it shall have a square deal and living rates. It will then be in a position to give a square deal and good wages.

Labor must be taught how to throw off the yoke of autocratic and arbitrary leadership. The professional labor leader should be relegated to the scrap heap, and only the intelligent, conservative and diplomatic members of the organizations elected to such responsible positions. The tenure of office should be dependent upon the maintenance of harmonious relations with the employer. Those who are contentious and arrogant should be considered unsafe; those who misrepresent facts, deceive their membership and practice dishonorable methods should be gotten rid of absolutely.

When a contract of agreement is made, it should be sacred; no flimsy pretext gotten up to serve a temporary purpose should be permitted to break it. The commercial world is founded upon credit. He who breaks his word is ostracized. It must be so between employee and employers.

Pensions for Clergymen.

[Leslie's:] The most pretentious and far-reaching scheme yet devised for ministerial pensions is that being formulated by the Presbyterian Church. The proposition is to consolidate the sustentation fund, with its small endowment, with the board of ministerial relief, which has a fund of $2,000,000, and then to increase the endowment of the new organization to $10,000,000. The plan will be similar to that of life insurance companies, and the cost to one who begins payments at the opening of his ministry, about his twenty-fifth year, will range from $16 to $20 annually. This, it is expected, will procure him an annuity of $500 in his old age. It is only right that a minister who is certain of being cared for in his old age should pay something toward that end, just as one does for any other form of insurance. Thirty-five cents a week during the working period of life does not seem like a large sum to secure such provision.

NO PROFITS ON INVESTMENT.

sympathy with organized labor, but we do ask whether he is a B.T.W. or an I.W.W. If he is, we have nothing he can do. We recognize his right to join this organization if that is his wish but we claim for ourselves the equal right to protect those in our employ and to guard the industry in which they are engaged. The man who puts force above the Golden Rule, dynamite above the law, and murder above the Christian religion has nothing in common with us, has nothing in common with the law-abiding communities in which our business is conducted, and we do not propose to inflict upon these communities and these people, who have a right to expect us to conduct our affairs in an orderly, law-abiding and civilized way under the tenets of the Golden Rule, any man or set of men who subcribe to the preachings and teachings of the I.W.W. We will close down our mills and retire from activity before we will destroy the peace, safety, order and tranquility of the communities in which we do business and before we will expose our loyal and law-abiding men to personal violence and death."

In justification of his right to use such language against the menace to employees as well as to employers, and in refutation of charges made by the agitators that he has profited at the expense of his employees and that he has been a hard taskmaster, Mr. Kirby said:

"What are the facts? In 11 years, with the bulk of my fortune invested in this enterprise, I have not had a dividend. In the past five years the company has not made a five cent piece in net earnings. By that I mean that every dollar we have received from the sale of the product of our mills, every dollar we could earn in the tie and piling department, every dollar we could earn in the mercantile department, every dollar received from rents or from any other source, was required to meet the payroll and to pay for the raw material, the pine trees, which we are daily consuming and which we do not own.

"It was three years ago last Monday that the receivers, who had held and operated our properties for the previous five years and four months, relinquished their control and restored the property to my management as president of the corporation. During those five years, when I was a lumberman out of a job, I gave active attention to other matters and made some judicious investments in the city of Houston and in timber properties in east Texas wherever I could induce sellers to take my note for such purchases, and which investments turned out to be very profitable. But for this the receivers might have continued until this day or else our properties would have been sold out by the United States Marshal under the hammer and somebody else would have today been undertaking to operate these plants. My business ventures during these five years were so successful that I was able to sell the properties that I had accumulated and turn the money over to the Kirby Lumber Company and take it back into my own hands, turning over to you its management and its destiny. As said before, that was three years ago last Monday and in all that period we have not earned a cent. Our fiscal year is from July to July, that is, our books are written on that basis. During the first two years we broke even in our operations, but then there came an effort on the part of outside loafers to take charge of the management of our plants, and the effort to do so had its resultant confusion and depression, so that from July 1 of last year until May 31 of this year, covering a period of 11 months, instead of earning a dollar we lost exactly $262,686.88. During that period of 11 months we cut up 192,000,000 feet of lumber, log scale. We paid for it, as was our contract obligation to do, at $5 per 1000 feet, log scale. We could have sold it in the market without operating a mill as standing timber for $5 per 1000 feet or more, but I did not choose to do that. I operated these mills during every hour that I could, and found such market as I could for the lumber you produced because I had faith that the conditions under which we were struggling would improve, and that we would ultimately reach the point where we could go forward without embarrassment or loss. In this 11 months we have reduced the lives of these mills to the extent of sacrificing 192,000,000 feet of our raw material, and instead of earning a penny for the stockholders we have injured them to the extent of $262,686.88 and more.

"During that eleven-months' period we made and sold lumber of the value of $5,031,198.97. We hade and sold hewn ties and piling of the value of $661,150.98. Our total business for that eleven-months' period, therefore, reached the enormous aggregate of $5,692,349.95, every penny of which and $262,686.88 additional was paid to the men who run this business and toil about our plants and in the woods and in the tie camps and on tie trains, and to the people who own the logs and the tie timber which we consume. Not a dollar went to anybody else. And yet, in the face of this truth, there are those bawling persons who go about the country proclaiming that I, as your employer, take of your earnings 83 per cent. and permit you to have only a measly 17 per cent. of what you create, while the fact is that you not only in this elevent months got every dollar that the product of your labor sold for, but you got $262,686.88 besides.

"This is an accurate statement of our past year. I have not yet received the for our operations in June, but I think they will show an improvement over anything in the past eleven months. The market for our product is some better than it was, and the failure of the effort of imported loafers from other States to disturb our boys who toil in our mills and camps has been influential in restoring normal conditions about our plants, and it is my hope that the future may bring us some measures of success. Every man within the sound of my voice knows that I am not paying the wage scale I would be pleased to pay, and they also know that I am paying every cent the business will stand. There is no man in our employ who hasn't intelligence enough to know this, and I say to you now, as I have said to you frequently heretofore, that when the time comes that there is a restoration of prosperity in this country, and this enterprise which you are conducting shares in that prosperity to the extent of making earnings, those who toil about thees mills and aid in producing those earnings will have consideration before the stockholders, even after their long wait, receive a cent.

"In refutation of the charges that I am a hard taskmaster and am skinning you out of the proceeds of your toil, I call to your attention that during all of my business life substantially every dollar I could earn and save was employed in giving some other man a chance. Some of you boys have been with me as long as twenty years, and you know that it has always been my ambition to make opportunities for others, and you also know that I have never received one penny or profit from the toil of any man I employed. In the old days of the Texas Pine Land Association no dividends were paid. In the days of the G., B. & K. C. Railroad no dividends were paid. In the eleven years of the Kirby Lumber Company no dividends have been paid. These three have been my leading industrial enterprises, though I have had investments in many others, but when a man tells you that I have ever received a dollar profit from the employment which I gave to another man, bet him all you've got on the proposition, and be sure that the record will enable you to win. I have made my fortune by judicious investment in real estate, with some aid from the construction of the G., B. & K. C. Railroad, which profit arose in the sale of the road, and not in its operation, and no man can point to a penny that I have ever received otherwise. I hope there is coming a change and that the large fortune I have invested in the shares of this company will some day yield me substantial returns. If I did not think so, it would be my duty to the other stockholders of this company to permit the company to be now dissolved and whatever we own distributed to those whose rights it is to receive it.

"They say I have no sympathy with the laboring man, and that I am opposed to labor organizations. My whole life has been a daily refutation to these charges. My sympathy and interest have always been with the laboring masses. My kins-people and close friends, as well as myself, are working folks and have never known anything else but to toil. I am the only one of my family who was ever classed as a rich man, but the property I have accumulated has not made me an idler nor has it made me selfish or ungenerous. I spend more of my earnings to aid widows and orphans and for the education of ambitious boys and girls, the building of schoolhouses and churches and for the promotion of charities than I spend upon my family or upon myself. My misfortune has been for the past eleven years that since my investments were earning nothing I have had little that I could give in aid of others, and by little I mean that my donations have probably not exceeded an average of $25,000 a year in the past ten years."

Wage increase demands under threat of strike by the firemen on fifty eastern railroads are to await decision of the board of arbitration now in session on the demands of the engineers.

Chicago street car men stand ten to one in favor of a strike. It will affect 15,000 men. Their average yearly earnings are $621, the companies say. The men say it costs $1097 a year to keep a man, wife and three children. Many are single men, however.

EXPORT TRADE IS ENORMOUS.

Europe Demands Large Portion of Apricot Crop.

Big Shipments of California Product Made.

Revenue from Output Totals Millions of Dollars.

The dried apricot crop of California, which is now practically harvested and packed, is estimated at 19,000 to 20,000 tons this year, and is valued at about $2,000,000.

Present indications are that the foreign trade in dried apricots is going to be tremendous this season. The crop in Europe is short, owing to especially unfavorable conditions, and has fallen upon California to supply the great demand for dried apricots on the continent, which has been a greater part of the output of this State.

One shipment from San Francisco went via Salina Cruz to New York, 244,591 pounds of dried apricots and to the large countries in Europe. Forty-two thousand pounds destined for New York, nearly 1,000 pounds for Germany; 33,000 pounds for France, and the remainder to Sweden and Denmark. During the past year, the shipments to these countries totaled nearly 110,000 pounds, or only a little short of those for the same month last year.

The apricot has become one of the most export fruits from California, each year sees increasing demands. For the year ending June 30, 1912, when practically the last-ever crop was disposed of, the amount of apricots sent to foreign countries totaled only a little less than 12,500,000 pounds. Germany took in excess of 5,000,000 pounds, and the United Kingdom took over 2,000,000 pounds.

As a result of the shortage in the fruit crop of France it is quite likely that the shipments from this country to the United Kingdom will show a large increase. The shipments from France to the United Kingdom are only amount to about half of those.

In the remaining countries who received apricots for the year ending June 30, last, France got the largest, about 1,200,000.

Nearly 1,000,000 pounds were sent to the Netherlands and other countries receiving over 3,000,000 pounds.

The dried apricots California grows nearly $2,000,000 worth of fruit almost every year. The apricots have been disposed of well this season, and Europe will take a large part of the crop. It is reported that the purchases in this country, who refused to sell extensively in the beginning of the season, are now taking them in large lots.

Europe sent out also nearly 1,000,000 pounds of apricots, and the shipments of these fresh shipments to the United States year by year.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 27.—Despite the fact that Gen. Booth maintains all his old fighting spirit and, indeed, is planning a great tour, which is to include the United States, it cannot be concealed that those in close attendance upon him, are greatly concerned about his condition. Unfortunately he has never fully rallied from the effects of the recent unsuccessful operation upon his eyes, which it was hoped would restore his sight. Two of the leading specialists of England have been in daily attendance upon him, but he is mending only slowly if at all.

Gen. Booth.

...raph of the famous head of the Salvation Army, taken just ...fore he underwent the recent operation upon his eyes. Unfortunately the latter was not successful and his health is now very low.

At the present moment the general is able to leave his rooms and spend part of each day in the gardens of his home. He is troubled by great weakness, as he finds it impossible to sleep at night, and insists upon trying to get out of bed and walk about. In addition he is now absolutely blind and cannot even distinguish between day and night.

There are many evidences that the Salvation Army is preparing for its leader's passing. And it is not at all certain that the wishes of the old general will be carried out. The latter declares that no one knows who will be the next leader, but those now in control seem to be laying their plans to place Bramwell Booth, son and first assistant of Gen. Booth, at the head of things, despite any other intentions the founder may have.

As part and parcel of this effort on Bramwell Booth's behalf, the following letter is being sent out from Salvation Army headquarters to the editors of leading provincial English papers:

To the Editor—Dear Sir:

Doubtless you, in common with other editors of important newspapers, have already prepared for use when required an obituary notice of Gen. Booth. Should this, however, not be so, if you desire I shall be happy to supply you with a suitable biographical sketch. But this letter more immediately concerns what will happen after the general's death. As you are probably aware, no one other than the general himself knows who his successor will be; on the other hand, Mr. Bramwell Booth's name has for a variety of reasons frequently been used in this connection.

Should time prove such a surmise to be correct, you may be glad to have ready for use when the time comes some information about him, and if you desire me to do so I shall be pleased to send you—free of charge—a descriptive article of, say, 1500 words, on the distinct understanding that you regard it as absolutely confidential, and that you undertake not to use it until you learn that the present general has passed away.

This article would be adapted to your columns in the sense that it would be written as from the outside with, inside knowledge, and I need hardly say it would be reliable. What I send you would be for your absolutely exclusive use so far as your city is concerned.

Will you kindly address your reply to me at Ingleton, New Barnet, Herts, England, for which purpose an addressed envelope is enclosed.

Yours faithfully,
THEODORE KITCHING,
Colonel.

WALDO, GENERAL OF POLICE.

When he talks a Celtic note creeps into his voice and only the bare bones of his thoughts are put into words. Clothed in a uniform and given a club, he would be as typical a policeman, physically, at least, as could be found anywhere in the United States. And his language, blunt and gutteral, would tally with his buttons and his face.

Fourteen years ago, having just come of age, he joined the Union Club. "I have all the money I need," he remarked to a banker while discussing his own case. "I want to be useful, but I have no inclination toward business. I can sit in the club, read the newspapers and look out of the window, but no young American of the right sort could tolerate such an existence. The public service, it seems to me, offers an opportunity to detached youngsters like myself."

The Spanish War was then being fought. Waldo enlisted in the National Guard, learned the rudiments of soldiering and early in 1899 was appointed a second lieutenant in the regular army by President McKinley. He served four years in the Philippines under Leonard Wood and "Hell Roaring" Jake Smith, going upward in the service until he was a captain of a company of scouts. He cleaned up, which means that he shot up, several savage and hostile regions. Once he took to a river in a small boat with ten privates. The natives from the jungle and the mud banks opened fire with repeating rifles. Four Americans were killed and two were wounded. Waldo and his three remaining men lay in the bottom of the boat, returned the fire, and, slowly and dangerously drifting down stream, made their escape.

CEASES TO BE A SOLDIER.

At the age of 23 he was sent to Calilao, in North Luzon, with 175 scouts, under instructions to kill or drive away a large number of bandits and to pacify the other 4000 inhabitants, which work he carried out to the satisfaction of his commanding officers, establishing meanwhile the first civil government in the Philippine Islands of the American sort.

But the war was over, he told me when I interviewed him, and there was little chance for promotion or action, and he resigned his commission and returned to New York. Walking in the street on a winter morning, he saw the funeral of the First Deputy Police Commissioner. Before the man was buried, Waldo had begun to plan for the vacant job. He got it. That was six years and a half ago. Later he was Fire Commissioner of this city, and likewise an unsuccessful candidate for Congress. He established a school to teach officers how to fight fires and to prevent them as well. All knowledge as to the best methods of fire-fighting, up to that time, died with the man who possessed it. There was no literature, nor were there records on the subject. Waldo searched the world for new methods and ideas and turned all that he learned over to the fire department. The school for officers, he hopes, will be perpetual, and thus the skill of one generation will be passed along and bettered in the generation that follows.

SCHEME NOT SUCCESSFUL.

In former times the police officers of a precinct visited and regulated or suppressed the gambling places, disorderly houses, and other crime centers within what was known as their own jurisdiction. The arrangement was excellent for lawbreakers and depraved policemen. Negotiations, unfettered, went on between both classes. A price list could be and was adopted. So much for poker, so much for roulette, so much for pocket-picking, and so much for stabbing. Gaynor, coming into the Mayor's office, full of Epictetus and other venerable generalities, saw his police department, or thought he saw it, trading with outlaws and outcasts. He called on Waldo by and by for assistance.

Now, no man, so it is said in New York, ever has been able to measure his wit against the criminal instinct of the police system. Every commissioner trying it has been broken on the rack of personal disaster. Gen. Bingham, once a military figure and a good one, still young and energetic, and sounding roisterous with his "by godfreys" and other camp-fire expletives, did not put an end to the grafting. Waldo, digging right at the root of the evil, under Gaynor's suggestion, ordered precinct men, beat walkers and officers, to guard the streets and watch for thieves, but to keep away from the haunts of sin. He, with a force of 150 specially picked detectives—Lieut. Becker in active command of what was really three separate battalions, operating unconnectedly—would do the regulating and raiding.

On paper the scheme looked cunning and efficient. Thus a system, untested, was matched against another system that had been developed for half a century, and Mayor Gaynor said, while Waldo thought, as he informed me, that persons talked nonsense when they complained that the police were still crooked. "Political and other outside considerations tending to disrupt discipline and demoralize the force have been eliminated," Waldo wrote to the Mayor, in happy and mistaken confidence.

WALDO VITALIZES DETECTIVES.

Nevertheless, though Becker is in the Tombs, the police of New York is one of the finest bodies of men in the world. Its villainy is sporadic and not general. And the Mayor, a shrewd, seasoned and exacting person, publicly asserts that Waldo has done "splendid work," and that he is "unimpeachably honest." After studying police methods in Europe with a soldier's skill and enthusiasm, Waldo returned with new conceptions and some that he borrowed. The detective bureau was reorganized. More than 500 detectives had been reporting daily at headquarters where, with masked faces, they lined up in a large room and watched the newly-arrested culprits march past them for identification. After that performance was over, the detectives went out for luncheon, and then scattered in all directions. Waldo broke up that hit or miss practice, and assigned them to the various police stations, where they become acquainted with their territory and its inhabitants, and work under the direction of chiefs, who in turn are subordinate to still other and higher officials.

A school was opened to teach detectives the latest methods of recognizing and catching criminals. Types of human faces were drawn on blackboards, and noses, ears, mouths and chins classified. There are straight noses, concave noses and convex noses; also, there are several shapes of mouths, ears, cheeks and chins. Bertillon, the famous French anthropologist, devised a scheme for measuring the bodies, heads and limbs of men arrested for crime, and likewise the descriptive portrait scheme adopted by Waldo for use in New York. "A trained man, verbally, or with chalk and a blackboard," Commissioner Waldo says, "can describe a face in a few words with such accuracy as to enable a detective to identify the subject in a large crowd, though the detective has never seen him."

The 500 detectives under Waldo have been kept in motion with the result that the number of their arrests for felony has been doubled. There are Jewish detectives for work among the Jews, and Italian detectives for work among the Italians. "A few men," Waldo says, "are maintained in various sections to live and associate with persons who may be suspected of criminal tendencies. These men do not make arrests or appear in court. Their identity is known only to the official to whom they give their confidential information."

THE STRONG ARM SQUAD.

Besides, there is a school for recruits, where young men soon to be policemen learn about fire and other alarms, are taught how to write reports of accidents and arrests, and are drilled in a knowledge of laws and ordinances. Wrestlers show them how to defend themselves and subdue pugnacious prisoners without breaking the skin or drawing blood. "Brutality in making arrests has ceased," Waldo declares. A recruit must attend the school for thirty days. Then he is tried on the street for six months before he is admitted to regular membership on the force.

Men belonging to what is known as the "strong arm squad," and dressed like the other male passengers, ride on steamboats and street cars returning from public gardens and summer resorts. Rowdies and gangsters, starting fights, insulting women and doing a little stealing on the side, are promptly collared and given a rough dose of their own medicine. The squad was organized in July, last year. It made 3641 arrests the first six months and 3158 of the persons taken into custody were convicted on a trial of their cases in Police Court.

The 8589 patrolmen, constituting the total active force, are divided into twelve main squads. Three squads are on duty from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.; three squads from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m., and six squads, or one-half of all the men, from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. This three-platoon system, military in character, was worked out by Commissioner Waldo, as was the fixed post system by which a part of the patrolmen on duty at night stand at the intersection of two streets, out in the middle of the road, where they can look a thousand feet in four different directions and can easily be found when wanted. Ordinarily, they remain at their stationary posts for an hour, when they are relieved by the men who have been walking about meanwhile in the old fashion. So they walk and so they stand, alternately from 11 o'clock until 7 o'clock the next morning. Therefore, "crime of violence at night and on public highways," said the vigorous and optimistic Mr. Waldo, before Rosenthal was murdered on a sidewalk glittering with electric light, the neighborhood, "have been almost entirely eliminated."

Just the same Rhinelander Waldo has done much for New York, the city of his birth and upbringing. "What kind of criminals give you the most trouble?" I asked him, blasting once more in the caverns of his silence, and he replied, talking from the roof of his mouth and in his best art of saying nothing: "All criminals give us trouble."

Wherefore, it will again be perceived, that R. Waldo is a personality as well as a man of action.

PASSING OF THE SOU.

The French Coin Is to Be Replaced With a Piece of Nickel With a Hole In It.

[Boston Transcript:] The sou, about to die, salutes you. Look sharp at the sou while you may; observe its size, equaling that of your "quarter;" note the redness of its bronze; see the head of Marianne on one surface, the emblematic group ("Liberty and Justice," or some such fancy) on the other; read the inscription, "Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite," which promises to supplant "Defense d'Afficher" as the national device; lift the sou in your hand, to remind yourself how heavy it is; indulge your etymological passions, if you must, and recall that the sou takes its name from the old Roman solidus; in short, consider the sou every way you can, and be quick about it. Pretty soon, the sou will have vanished. By order of the third republic, it is to be replaced by a nickel coin with a hole in it—a coin of the sort we have talked of here at home and which the Belgians adopted long ago.

All this, though trival in appearance, is downright portentous and revolutionary in fact. It means that the French, who are the bankers of Europe, have at last begun to notice that inconvenience is not necessarily the chief requisite in money matters. What?—you thought Frenchmen clever and ingenious and methodical and adroit? If so, it is a sign that you gave your sous to the Paris beggars, instead of letting them accumulate, and it is a sign that you have never had dealings with a French bank. Incidentally, it shows that ever so many "chinoiseries" of French finance escaped your attention—the use of foreign money, for instance, and the prevalence of counterfeit coins and bills, and the abhorrence of checks, to say nothing of red tape and its manifold intricacies and absurdities. Doubtless, Frenchmen attend to money matters for a third of Christendom, but doubtless they are the very last boys for the job. If they have risen up against the sou, denouncing it as weighty and bulky and inconvenient, behold the exception that proves the rule.

W WELLS FOR FULLERTON.

halt to the refineries at Hadley. d this has been shipped to the rthwest, and used with great suc-

TO PROSPECT.

It is announced that R. J. Tarbell d associates will begin to drill this l between this city and the old rn of Wilmington on the A. J. rge ranch. Extensive drilling was rried on in the vicinity on the Bix- ranch a few years ago, but some hculties were encountered in drill- g, and financial troubles. It is id, also helped to cause the cessa- n of these operations. Reports are the effect that one hole was sunk this section to the depth of nearly 00 feet at one time, and that there re some promising indications. owever, it is doubtful if these were fficient to warrant extensive ex- itation. There are many indica- ns that successful operations might carried on in this locality, for ere is a large quantity of natural s which has been used for fuel, as ell as traces of oil in some of the ater wells which have been drilled

A GIANT GUSHER.

One of the most important devel- ments of the past week was the inging in of the great Standard ushar on section 26, 21-25. This well s been flowing an output varying tween 5000 to 7000 barrels a day, ecording to latest reports, and the oduction is said to have been even reater at times. The flow is accom- anied by a tremendous gas pres- re which makes it rather unsteady, nd the roaring of the well can be eard several miles off, while the shing oil is also visible at quite a stance. Every effort is being made control the well and to take care f the production. It is reported that wo large sump holes have been dug, nd that pipe lines are being built. At latest advices the flow has shown no ttention of abating.

HAWAIIAN SHIPMENTS LARGER.

It is reported that during eleven onths ending May 31, 1912, 53,580,- 58 gallons of petroleum products orth $1,586,670 were shipped to Ha- aii from Los Angeles and San Fran- sco, the only ports which send oil roducts to these islands. For the ame length of time in 1911 the ship- ents were 47,955,470 gallons, valued t $1,424,636, and a greater increase n the worth of the shipments for 912 might have been apparent if here had not been some variation in he value of residuum. The ship- ents of that product amounted to early nine times as much in the 912 period as in the 1911 period, while their value was less than three imes as great. The shipments of the ther products were all in favor of he 1912 period, both in size and in alue.

MONTEREY COUNTY STRIKE.

It is reported that at Thomson's amp, on section 18, 22-14, Monterey ounty, well No. 2, which was drilled o a little over 200 feet, has entered il sand of about 28 gravity, and looks ood at this depth for twenty barrels a day. Well No. 1 has also encoun- ered the same sand.

It has been found unnecessary to se a casing in either well, as the ormation is hard and stands up irmly. Under these conditions, the ioneering work in this part of the arkfield district is inexpensive. It s said that this district has a large umber of seepages, and that, in fact, o district in California has so many ndications of oil in seepages. Consid- erable prospecting has been done in his region during the past few years, ut it is thought that the pitch of the il formation has not been well un- derstood.

In the case of these two wells ad- vantage has been taken of past mis- takes, and it is said that this is the ioneer success in securing produc- ion from shallow wells in the dis- rict. It is reported that some deeper wells will be drilled soon to de- ermine the value of the lower sands.

FLOW FROM PARAFFINE SAND.

Some reports are to the effect that he Standard Oil Company has a flow of 500 barrels a day in well No. 81, on section 28, 19-15, which was finished up at 2260 feet in paraffine oil sand. One thing has been pretty well ascertained, and that is that the well is making considerable oil, although reliable estimates of the quantity have not been secured. This is the second well on the Standard prop- erty that has been drilled into the paraffine sand, which fact strength- ens the belief that a good sand un- derlies all of the old sand, and may reach back to the west, as the Oil- fields Limited has entered light-oil sand on section 31, 19-15, at about 1100 feet. The Standard well No. 80 entered oil sand at 1166, and had twenty feet of it, but this was not tested. It may be the same sand now being tested by the Limited on section 31, 19-15. This last well has added value to considerable territory, and, it is believed, opens a new field of light-oil sand under that which, it is said, will soon be exhausted.

LOST HILLS ACTIVITIES.

The Baker and Borst Oil Com- pany, section 27, 26-20, in the Lost Hills district, has well No. 1 down 634 feet, with a nine and five-eighths- inch casing, and the water will be shut off with this string. It is said that the company is to receive a deed of eighty acres for developing the property, which will include the well now drilling. A contract has been made to drill this well to 1350 feet with a well-known oil man, unless oil should be struck at a lesser depth. It is stated that the oil in- dications through the hills suggest that the field extends to the south and east, as developed by the wells drilling.

The Associated Oil Company, at a short distance from the Baker-Borst well, is developing section 3, 26-20, and has drilled well No. 1 to 1504 feet. It has passed through three oil sands, the first of which was about forty feet, while the second was about thirty feet thick. Reports are to the effect that when the third sand was entered a good showing was had, and that considerable oil has come up in the casing. Now, however, it is said that the well is temporarily shut down.

DRILLS AND DERRICKS.

Work has been started on well No. 6 of the Alaska Pioneer Oil Company on section 22, 31-23. This is in the vicinity of the Buick and Pacific Crude gushers, and is attracting considerable interest.

The Petroleum Company, which has deepened its well in the Fuller- ton district, where trouble with water was encountered, according to latest reports, pumped a hundred barrels of oil during one day. Very little water showed, and there seems to be very little in the well.

A well of the C. C. M. Oil Com- pany, on section 16, 32-23, along the county road near Fellows, which is said to have given considerable trouble to the drillers, is now down 275 feet. Preparations are being made to set the six-inch casing within another hundred feet.

Panama well No. 2, which was cleaned out to increase production, has at latest advices been flowing 800 barrels a day.

The Midway Northern Oil Com- pany, which has had a very difficult formation to deal with in well No. 3, now drilling to completion, has succeeded in getting past the trouble, it is believed, and will probably bring in the well within the next hundred feet or so.

The Maricopa Northern well No. 2, which has had some trouble with sand recently, is again pumping and doing very well, according to latest reports.

The M. J. & M. M. well No. 8, on section 36, 12-24, came in last week with a 1000-barrel production, and after a day's gushing sanded up. Two thousand barrels a day is being se- cured from well No. 10.

A dividend of 12 per cent. has been declared by the Republic Oil Com- pany, upon a capitalization issue of $500,000. It is reported that the dividend has been declared as a re- sult of selling the company's holding to English capitalists.

A big territory may be brought into the limelight as a result of oil sand encountered in a well being drilled in the Lost Hills district, on section 28, 26-21, by Dan Evinger. The hole is being cemented off, ac- cording to the latest information.

It is reported that the Home Oil Company has reached the greatest depth ever attained in the Whittier district at 4780 feet. The well is said to be deeper than the Murphy well No. 26.

The Edmonds Midway Oil Com- pany is running two strings of tools on section 32, 32-24, and expects to finish up the wells next month. Ac- cording to the annual report of the company recently issued, well No. 1 has produced from January 2, 1912, to the first of July 245,402.77 barrels of oil, which was sold under con- tract. This is the only producing well that the company has.

The company is capitalized at 1,- 500,000 shares of stock at a par value of $1 a share, and the directors are J. H. Edmonds, A. B. Barret, H. Jevne, James Mills, H. C. Beville, G. D. Edmonds and F. L. Eldridge. The management is in the hands of J. H. Edmonds.

ARMY WALKING TESTS.

Lawn Tennis and Ten-Mile Walks Keep the Officers in Good Condition at Newport.

[New York Herald:] The "walking tests for physical condition" have be- come a regular feature of the army and navy life. There are few places near governmental stations where both scenery and local conditions are more ideal for these tests than Newport. The Ocean Drive is the route most frequented by the officers, for there they not only have the exact distance of ten miles now prescribed, but also that exhilaration that comes with the bracing air of the sea.

The tests of today are not so drastic as they were even two years ago, when an officer had the option of walking fifty miles during three con- secutive days, riding horseback ninety miles in the same time or covering a distance of 100 miles in three consecu- tive days on a bicycle.

It is also the duty of the command- ing officer to see that preliminary ex- ercise is provided, and lawn tennis is the prevailing method at Newport. Some of the tennis players in the navy have become so expert that they have been asked to enter some of the tennis tournaments on the courts of the Newport Casino and the Miane- tuck Tennis Club, one of Newport's many social organizations devoted to outdoor sports.

In providing for the preliminary ex- ercise two new tennis courts have been added to the torpedo station. Lieu- tenant-Commander Rufus Z. Johnston is one of the most expert of the navy's tennis players here, and Surgeon Wil- liam D. Owens and Lieut. Frederick V. McNair are close behind him.

Preparations for the test walks are made with great care. In knapsacks are frequently carried various neces- saries for the first aid to injured or blistered feet. Some of the executive officers are frequently so busy that they cannot find time for the preli- minary practice and, rather than devote a subsequent three days to nursing of bothersome extremities, they coat their feet with vaseline, put on two pairs of woolen socks, their heaviest boots and then hike it.

Attractive West End Dwelling.

House at No. 307 Manhattan Place,

Sold by John B. Althouse to Adolph M. Becker of Spokane, through Frank D. Tatum & Co.

COMBATS THE CURRENT IDEA.

Bisbee Commercial Club Wants World to Know that Unclaimed Wealth Awaits.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Aug. 16.—The Bis- bee Commercial Club is combatting the idea that all the good ground in this vicinity has been taken up by a few big mining companies and is gath- ering a list of mining properties around about, as a basis for investi- gation by prospective investors. It is agreed locally that near Bisbee are scores of properties well worthy of development, with all indications of real value and still outside the owner- ship of the Copper Queen and Calumet and Arizona companies. So there is to be started a campaign of exploita- tion of the mineral resources of the region, in the hope that thereby may be induced the coming of capital for the development of many of the smaller properties.

MINE BREVITIES.

Ore shipments to the two big Doug- las smelters continue to practically smelter capacity, the Calumet and Arizona having run up production to about 1500 tons a day. More men are being employed constantly, though the percentage of increase is not large.

Work is being prosecuted vigorously on the new Calumet and Arizona smel- ter, adjoining the present plant at Douglas. Much of the foundation work has been completed and a start has been made upon the 305-foot stack for the furnaces. Another smaller stack will be built for the roasting plant, which will embrace twelve Mc- Dougals.

PREFERS SOUTHLAND.

Frank D. Tatum & Co. have sold for John B. Althouse to Adolph M. Becker, a recent arrival from Spo- kane, the two-story, thirteen-room residence at No. 307 Manhattan place. The house has just been completed and Becker purchases it for a per- manent home. The interior is fin- ished in mahogany and quartered oak, the walls being paneled and the ceil- ings beamed. There are three baths. The garage is in keeping with the house. The lot, which is high and sightly, is 60x150 feet in size. The consideration is given at $15,000.

Home Building

Profits and Dividends

Are you one of those who don't understand why money in- vested in home building earns such large dividends and why the shares increase in value so rapidly? Investigate this won- derful money-making possibilities of this most profitable, safest and permanent Los Angeles business, and you will un- derstand why this is possible.

You think it cannot be done and that money will not grow so fast. This is why you are not a Commonwealth shareholder today, and the only reason why your money is not earning the large profits and quarterly dividends that the money of our thousands of shareholders earns.

Practical and Easily Understood

Call and we will explain the Commonwealth Home Builders' plan, and you will admit that it is practical and easily under- stood. You will no longer wonder how it is possible to earn money invested in home building to earn such large profits.

The foundation of our plan is very simple. It is the combin- ing of various small sums of money of thousands of salaried men, business and professional men in a co-operative home- building fund. This money is invested in first-class acreage which we subdivide into building lots—all improvements are put in and the lots are then sold at a handsome profit. Homes are built on some of these lots and another handsome profit is made and yet they are sold at a very reasonable price. Our big profits are the result of buying land wholesale and build- ing homes in quantities. We buy all materials in large lots for best cash prices, then we have our own architects, con- struction department, etc.—as a result we earn all possible home-building profits.

Here Is An Example

Take one of our latest tracts for example. We recently bought a choice piece of Los Angeles acreage at a very reasonable price. It was surrounded by fine residences, all new and up-to-date. We put in all improvements, wide streets, wide parkings, trees, cement walks and curbings, making it one of the select residential tracts of the city. Artistic bungalows and houses are now under construction and finished and in six months this tract will be covered with homes. Do you realize what these lots are worth today, compared with the price we paid for the acreage and what they will be worth in six months, and what our total profits will be on the lots and homes? This is only one of four tracts which we own, all of which we are improving the same way.

Call on us. Don't put it off—do it now. There are thousands of Los Angeles people who would become Commonwealth shareholders today if they understood the Commonwealth Home Builders' system. You should have our book on Co-operative Home Building and co-operative investment at once. Also Commonwealth monthly (free).

If you have not, you had better do so before the Lone Pine Utilities Company completes its trackless trol- ley, which is to connect The Big Pines with Gravs Station, on the Santa Fe, for thereafter the additional demand for homesites will not alone dispose of the limited supply, but will like- wise force an appreciable advance in their prices.

The Big Pines is an exclusive sum- mer home colony, designed to meet the requirements of the business and professional men of Los Angeles, Redlands, San Bernardino, Pasadena and other Southern California cities. It is located at the head of Swarthout Canyon, in the heart of the Sierra Madre Mountains, and occupies a well-wooded elevation that commands an unsurpassed panoramic view.

The Big Pines summer home col- ony combines the natural charms of mountain life with the delights of hunting and fishing, thereby afford- ing the head of the family the double pleasures of week-end relaxation from business cares, and the sports of forest and stream. The near- by streams are filled with trout, the woods resound with the chatter of squirrels, and the more open vistas beneath the arching boughs show deer tracks in abundance.

One of the many picturesque half-acre homesites in the Big Pines Summer Home Colony.

Why don't you take that cherished old 12-bore out of its case and slip a couple of cartridges into its breech, or else fill the magazine of that beloved old rifle and take a run up to The Big Pines for a week or two of sport, now that the deer season has opened?

Before you do so come in and talk the summer home-site question over with us. We will sell you a half-acre, well-wooded lot for $300 and up, and will give you with the deed a guarantee that but a single house will be erected on a site. Also, we will guarantee you against the encroachments of campers with their wagons and equipage.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Geschitte.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Q.: En- closed find samples of ore from Live Oak mine, near Barnwell, Cal., which is said to contain zinc, silver, copper and some gold. Another metal has been discovered in recent develop- ment. Can you tell what it is?

J. A. G.

A.: Mineralogically, the sample carries hydrous sesquioxide of iron (geschitte,) with hematite, copper (chalcopyrite,) pyrite, trace of cop- per and trace of nickel.

Notwithstanding the fact that chemical reaction shows nickel pres- ent in the copper salt at one corner of the sample, we could not report on the ore as nickeliferous without further specimens.

Carbonates.

PICACHO (Cal.) July 21.—Q.: Find herewith three samples. Please name and test them? MRS. B. L. H.

A.: No. 1 is composed of copper carbonates (malachite and azurite) and not tested for silver. No. 2 is composed chiefly, with low percentage of copper and of iron oxide. Nickel present. No. 3 is made up of three different specimens of impure lime- stone. Potash present approximately 1.16 per cent.

Sulphides.

JOHANNESBURG, July 22.—Q.: Inclosed please find two pieces of ore of the same kind, and from fifty-foot level in this vicinity. What do the sulphides consist of? Is there any cobalt, nickel or tellurium traces? The sulphide seams are in a large vein of quartz, and along with same are found values in gold.

J. Y. A.

A.: We tested the samples with great care, and failed to find cobalt, nickel or tellurium present.

Under the glass appears pyrite (iron disulphide,) chalcopyrite (yel- low copper ore,) stibnite (antimony sulphide,) arsenopyrite (arsenical py- rite) and galenite (lead sulphide.) The mineralized sample panned (con- centrated) by wet method, shows iron, copper, arsenic, titanium, anti- mony, lead and copper present. The tailings tested (wet method) show tungstic acid present in low readings, with iron oxides, trace of copper and no further elements were looked for.

Carbonates.

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—Q.: En- closed find samples marked Nos. 1 and 2, from a place near Paris, Cal. Will you kindly state what each one is? Your some from different ledges. Does it is molybdenite. Is it of commercial value? E. D. H.

A.: The plain truth is that even of high-grade value, there is a very uncertain price in the market, and the demand for it is but little, indeed.

Sample No. 1 is ilmenitic lime- stone with quartz on one side of the specimen. Molybdenite present in (microscopical) forms, and that. No. 2 is calciferous, and quartzitic; biotite and pyrite present, each in small amount with iron oxides.

Vanadium Present.

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—Q.: In- closed find sample from mines in county, New Mexico. Please and state results in vanadium, silver.

R. T. O'D.

For gold and silver values consult reputable assayers. Assay taken from the specimen gives 2.44 per cent. vanadium. Assay of the entire sample ap- proximates one-half of the percent- age. Iron and lead present.

Fluorite.

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—Q.: Be kind enough to oblige me with the min- eral name of the crystallized stone you will find herein? It is a claim in which I am interested and located in Arizona.

Red Wolframite.

LAS VEGAS (Nev.) July 24.—Q.: Inclosed is a strange specimen. I was told in the Lee district and that it is a wolframite through lime. If it is I will go back and locate some. Kindly advise, please tell a "min- er" all about it.

P. K.

A.: We are very sorry, for your sake, that your specimen is not wolframite. It is a ferruginous iron ore with hema- tite and magnetic iron ore, and is somewhat like the deceptive ore found at Twin Buttes, fourteen miles from Black Rock (a station on the S. P. & S.L.R.R.) Utah.

Albite.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Cuprite.

LOS ANGELES, July 21.—Q.: Enclosed samples of ore from Live Oak, near Barnwell, Cal., are said to contain zinc, silver, lead and some gold. Another metal is discovered in recent development. Can you tell what it is?

J. A. G.

A.: Mineralogically, the sample is hydrous sesquioxide of iron (limonite) with hematite, copper carbonate, pyrite, traces of copper and traces of nickel.

Considering the fact that chemical reaction shows nickel present as the copper salt at one corner of the sample, we could not report it as nickeliferous without further confirmation.

Carborundum.

RIALTO (Cal.) July 21.—Q.: Find enclosed three samples. Please name each and state from different ledges.

MRS. B. L. H.

A.: No. 1 is composed of copper carbonate (malachite and azurite) and is not worth testing for silver. No. 2 is a quartz vein, with low percentage of copper and of iron oxide. Nickel is absent. No. 3 is made up of three different varieties of impure limestone. Traces of copper present approximately 1 per cent.

Sulphides.

REDLANDS, July 22.—Q.: Enclosed find two pieces of ore from my claim, and from fifty-foot tunnel on the vicinity. What do the samples show? Is there any gold or tellurium traces? Which seems are in a large quartz vein, and along with same there is gold. J. Y. A.

A.: Mineralogically, the samples are alike, and fail to find cobalt, nickel or gold present. The ore appears pyrite (iron disulphide) chalcopyrite (yellow copper ore), stibnite (antimony sulphide), arsenopyrite (arsenical pyrite) and galenite (lead sulphide.) Assay of polished sample stained (concentrated nitric acid method), shows traces of copper, titanium, antimony and copper present.

Gersdorffite.

SAN DIEGO (Cal.) July 21.—Q.: Enclosed sample marked Nos. 1 and 2 is from a place near Paris, Cal. Is there any value? What each one is? Please name from different ledges.

E. D. H.

A.: No. 1 is composed of copper carbonate (malachite and azurite) and is not worth testing for silver. No. 2 is gersdorffite. Is it of any value? The plain truth is that gersdorffite is of high-grade value, and has a very uncertain price in the market; and the demand is not little, indeed.

No. 1 is limonitic limestone, and contains on one side of the specimen molybdenite present in (crystallized) forms, and chalcopyrite. No. 2 is calciferous, with pyrite and pentlandite; biotite and chlorite present, each in small amounts, with iron oxides.

Indium Present.

SAN DIEGO, July 24.—Q.: Inclosed find sample from mines near Silver City, New Mexico. Please state what results in vanadium, U, R, T, OYD.

Gold and silver values are reported, assayers. Also from the specimen sent, 1 per cent. vanadium. Is the entire sample approximately half of the percentage of iron and lead present.

Fluorite.

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—Q.: Be kind enough to advise me with the mineral of the crystallized specimen found herein? It is from a claim in which I am interested in Arizona.

Arsenopyrite.

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—Q.: Please find in this letter some samples of ore that I believe is white tellurium. If it is not tellurium, will you please give me a little information as to its component parts, etc.? The ore comes from a narrow ledge near Mineral Park, Ariz. H. P.

A.: The sample is arsenical pyrite in part. There is one section of the mass which is in right rhombic prisms, with perfect cleavage at right angles to the axis. "Generally occurs in masses of a color between silver-white and steel-gray, with a yellow tarnish." Of metallic luster. Streak blackish-gray. Brittle. Of uneven fracture. Hardness 5.5. Specific gravity, 7.2. Composition iron arsenide. Fuses to a black magnetic mass on charcoal before the blowpipe, with evolution of arsenical fumes (garlic-like odor.) In nitric acid the mineral is soluble, with separation of arsenious acid. The mineral, when in sufficient quantities, can be utilized in the manufacture of "white arsenic," and artificial orpiment can be obtained from it also.

Magnetic Iron Ore.

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—Q.: Herein please find some ore from croppings about eight feet wide and taken from Mohave county, Arizona, near Yucca. I think it is tungsten ore. MRS. H. L. C.

A.: The magnetite does not carry a trace of tungstic acid.

Anthraconite.

SAN DIEGO, July 26.—Q.: Once again I trouble you. Enclosed, find two samples for identification, etc., and kindly state if there are any commercial values attached thereto? What causes the black sample, when struck, to smell so? If it is valuable as it smells it should be worth something. Is it phosphate or ammonia? Is the other sample potash? E. M.

A.: It is a very great pleasure to hear from you again. The yellowish granular matter is probably an altered dolomite (magnesium limestone.) The blackish sample carries no phosphates or ammonium, and the "smell" to which you refer, as one of the characters of the mineral—"when struck"—is due to the presence of hydrogen sulphide gas, which is released from its native lair when struck with steel. The sample is an impure limestone, known as anthraconite and stinkstone, and it will make cement material. No sample is of any great value on the commercial scale. We note the part of sentence: "if it is as valuable as it smells." Kind of a new rating to values, as it were.

Some Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—Q.: I have a sample of some soil taken from the edges of an old lake bed in the Mojave desert. There is some alkali in the old bed, and the water lies at from seven to ten feet from the surface. Does this sample contain potash in any large percentage? What would be the general farming possibilities of this soil, for alfalfa and orchard? C. L. W.

A.: The sample represents a "soil" that will grow alfalfa and probably answer for orchard purposes if water is at hand. Nearly 80 per cent. of the sample is sand (quartz) with iron oxides to a low per cent., some lime carbonate, traces of magnesium; trace of soda; alumina present; gypsum small per cent., and nitrates not in the mass. Potash approximately 2 per cent.

Boron Traces Only.

BAKERSFIELD, July 27. — Q.: Samples Nos. 1 and 2. Please test for borax. F. H. B.

A.: The five samples of soda, lime, magnesia, alumina, quartz and iron were tested together for borax, with result as appears by reference to the sub-heading.

Sulphides Present.

ASHLAND (Or.) July 28.—Q.: Today I send you small sack of ore taken from a ledge in Siskiyou county, Cal., which you will please analyze. C. H. H.

A.: The rock carries traces of graphite and iron oxides. Antimony, arsenic, pyrite (iron disulphide) traces of copper and lead. No sample was tested for gold or silver. Glad to hear from you.

Scheelite Present.

JOHANNESBURG, July 28.—Q.: I am mailing a sack of gravel taken from a dry-wash in this mining district. I have made careful tests on this, and am of opinion that a valuable rare mineral is mixed (in some shape) with the gravel. Will you please test it for what you believe it contains or what you find by qualitative analysis? B. P. T.

A.: The sample is a very interesting one. Under the glass we find quartz, garnet, feldspar, topaz, magnetite, hematite, ilmenite, baryte, stibnite (antimony sulphide) pyrite, aluminum silicate and grains of calcite with some not identified pebbles of microscopical size, and of great specific gravity.

We separated these heavy particles by water, the pan, and gravity. The test thereon was further as follows: With a powerful microscope we detect that the "pebbles," in primary form, are of right square prisms and in four-sided pyramids. Sp. gr., slightly over 6, and in hardness 4.2. Some of the pebbles were pulverized in the laboratory and subjected to the action of nitric acid. We then observed that a yellow powder separated from the nitric acid solution, which on further test proved to be tungstic acid of commerce. All of the remaining tailings were subject to wet analysis and tungstic acid we found present therein. We regard your find as a most important one; provided, nevertheless, that you have gravel in good supply, otherwise the "sand" would be of passing interest only.

Siderite.

TUCSON (Ariz.) July 28.—Q.: Is this lot of samples of any commercial values? Locality near Big William's. Uranium or tungsten? MAC.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The samples carry no uranium or tungsten. Siderite is iron carbonate, and a steel ore. It is also known as "sparry" or "spathose iron." Some authors refer to it as chalybite. The sample is in obtuse rhombohedrons, with faces curvilinear. Of a yellow-red color. "Externally shining, internally with a pearl luster. Partly translucent. Streak yellow-brown. Brittle. Of uneven fracture and slightly affects the magnet. Hardness and sp. gr., 3.9 each. Approximately 62 per cent. of iron is in the mass, with 38 per cent. carbonic acid.

Tungsten Traces.

PALMS (Cal.) July 29.—Q.: Am leaving two rock samples which I would like tested for their tungstic acid qualities. No. 1 I call scheelite, and No. 2 (or the black ore) wolframite. They came from State line between California and Oregon. Can such ores be sold in the commercial field? J. M'C.

A.: Such ores have a very low value in commercial industries. No. 1 "scheelite?" In the mass of gravel we find hematite, magnetite, quartz, feldspar and two small pebbles of scheelite (calcium tungstate.) In No. 2 (chiefly magnetite and hematite) tungstic acid is present—trace only.

Yes.

LOS ANGELES, July 29.—Q.: Herein find some amalgam in small vial wrapped in cotton. This represents a day's work along a creek near San Gabriel Canyon. Be kind enough to test if not too much trouble, and tell in The Times what the result is. T. T.

A.: We placed the minute quantity of amalgam on a small Russian-iron pan and drove off the mercury. A metal was obtained which on further testing proved to be impure gold. Impurities not tested, but probably consist of lead, silver and copper.

Peculiar Water.

LOS ANGELES, July 29.—Q.: Will you kindly advise me as to the composition of the inclosed sample? It was found in Northern California and taken from the hot water boiler of a wood stove. It collects in such quantities, and has for thirty years, that it is necessary often to remove it. The water used is taken from a spring in a canyon. The stove is an old-fashioned water-back reservoir. Will you please return sample if for any reason it is not analyzed? H. B. K.

A.: Very odd and unique! The metal you submit for test is chiefly lead, and were it not for the thirty years' "output" the metallic matter could probably be accounted for by the use of certain solder in the manufacture of the boiler in question. Water yielding metal as represented by the sample would make a rather doubtful and unsafe liquid for use as a beverage. Why not run the boiler to its full capacity and find whether the metal still continues its deposition? At all events, give that water a run for its money, as it were. Samples not used in qualitative analysis have been returned.

growing as work advances, so the size cannot be determined. In the shaft vein on the 1100 level five feet of excellent ore has been proved for a length of seventy-five feet and is still extending, with every indication that it will extend upward to the tenth level and down to the twelfth. Below this a heavy flow of water reaching 130,000 gallons a day has been encountered, requiring the installing of a pump at the collar of the shaft, where the water is raised to the tanks on the hill above for use in the mill, the saving on water tolls more than compensating for the cost of pumping.

MANAGER'S TRIP.

John G. Kirchen, manager of the Tonopah Merger, has run down to the coast for a brief respite from business cares but while there, it is currently reported that he will look after the purchase of a new plant equal to the demand which he hopes the Merger will make on the hoisting machinery of that corporation as soon as the ledge is developed into a shipping proposition.

This may take ninety days, or possibly less. A new compresser plant was installed last Monday and ten drills were started drifting and crosscutting where the rock had almost defied the efforts of the single jacks to make an impression. Conditions are the same identically as were found in the shaft.

The main quartz ore body near the foot wall is of milling grade and the face of the drift is looking good, showing occasional seams and small bodies of ore. The sinking of the shaft is being continued and now has reached a depth of sixty feet below the 880-foot level and in very hard formation.

Enjoyed Grief All Through.

[Benton (Ark.) Times-Courier:] James Caldwell had a customer one day this week that had bereavement pictured on her Ethiopian countenance that was painful to behold. She had tried hard to obtain suitable apparel in other stores that she might show the deep grief and anguish that throbbed in her womanly bosom for her beloved husband who had recently departed from this world's joys and cares. She wanted a suit of black union underwear to match her cambric waist and skirt. And nothing else would answer the purpose. Caldwell attempted to convince her that black underwear is not fashionable, but all talk was in vain, and she informed him that when she moaned she moaned right.

"The Times" Special.

BATTLE-SCARRED OCEAN-TO-OCEAN ORGANIZING AUTO BACK FROM NATION-WIDE PACIFIC-ATLANTIC TOUR.

Fifteen Great States Linked in Mighty Chain and Half a Million National Highway Boosters Ready to March Into Congress With Plan for Sea-to-Sea Turnpike on Which Work Is to Be Commenced at Once—Great Ovation Marks the Finish.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Welcome Home to "The Times" Special.

At the wheel is William La Casse and with him Bert Smith, who made the trip. In the tonneau on the right Mrs. Bert C. Smith and with her Mrs. Harry C. Carr. The two men smiling are E. Rober Stearns and Don Lee. Below is the man who traveled across the continent in the old road-scarred battleship.

Day by Day.

STIRRING NARRATIVE OF OCEAN-TO-OCEAN JOURNEY.

WHEN The Times Special, with its coat of battleship gray, was started over the desert on its long ocean-to-ocean tour Wednesday, May 15, not a member of the crew had even the faintest idea of the great success which awaited the organizers. Only an inkling of the welcome in store for the workers was given at Yuma after the Colorado River had been crossed. Here the red fires in the streets, and the crowds that greeted the crew, helped to send the men away with a determination to make this the greatest trip ever undertaken in the history of the national highway movement.

The Times ocean-to-ocean tour was epoch-making. It was the first undertaking of the kind ever attempted and was a complete success. With a half a million people boosting for a national highway the project now has enough good-roads boosters behind it to make success in Congress certain.

The ovation at the finish of the transcontinental journey was enough to satisfy the most exacting. The trip is over, but the national highway is to be built and the hard work is about to be begun. With thousands cheering the sun-browned crew on the sands of the Atlantic the men who had fought their way across more than 3000 miles of road were satisfied with the victory won on this great trip.

President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Governors of States and Mayors of cities greeted The Times Special. Everyody boosted for the great proposition. The work of organizing fifteen States was not easy. When the whole

THE TIMES CAR BROUGHT RESULTS.

In this issue of The Times Pink sheet is presented the report of Bert C. Smith, automobile editor of this journal who has returned from his epoch-making trip across the continent.

This long and difficult journey was undertaken for the purpose of stirring up interest in a national highway to be constructed across this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The trip made by The Times car was in no sense an "automobile stunt." The car used for the purpose was purchased by The Times and no one outside this office knows its make. There was no pretense of "finding paths" across a country settled by 92,000,000 persons; the path across the continent was found fifty years ago. Neither was it a race, although it may be remarked that this car made the trip on its own wheels instead of in freight cars as some "pathfinders" have done.

The sending of this car was in the nature of an industrial crusade. It was the hope of The Times that its journey would result in creating an earnest, determined movement in favor of a national boulevard; replace vague sentiment in favor of such a road with a concrete, definite call for work.

To what extent this hope has been realized is shown by the great Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association that has sprung up in the path of The Times ocean-to-ocean car, pledged to work for the great road. Dell M. Potter, vice-president and official organizer of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, was in the car throughout the journey and the works of organization will therefore stand as official.

ANGELENO HAVING MUCH ANGLING JOY.

H. F. Cole of Los Angeles, together with a gay party of cronies from San Francisco, has been having some luxurious sport of a piscatorial variety. With Hotel Del Monte for their headquarters and a specially-devised fishing launch, they set sail in the bay in the chilly dawn each morning. The launch is a gem of modern invention and equipment, with every conceivable device for making sea angling a joy. Their record catch ran to 300 pounds with rod and line in a few hours.

Laden with their spoils it is their wont to return to the hotel with royal orders for the chef, sending off large packages to their inland friends as well.

In fact, Del Monte has become quite a smart fishing center, and many a fair society mondaine has been shedding her frills and laces, donning workmanlike serges and entering very enthusiastically into the joys of legitimate fishing.

SPIDE BAUM STILL AS GOOD AS EVER.

"Baum's been pitchin' a long time in baseball," remarked a fan yesterday, "and it seems that he is just about as good as he ever was. I remember well when he jumped out of the bushes in San Francisco in 1904 and when he came to this city and pitched for the Angels the next year.

"After the earthquake here, when Morley threw up the team, he went back to Altoona in the Tri-State outlaw league and pitched for $350 per month. In 1907 he was sold to the Philadelphia Nationals and not liking the salary offered, jumped to the outlaw Fresno team.

"In 1910 he joined the Sacramento team and remained there until Hogan bought him some weeks ago. He always was a hard man for any team to beat and his beautiful game last Wednesday showed that he is right there as strong now as he ever was."

KELLY SCHOLARSHIP TO BE PERMANENT AFFAIR

Olympic Victor Will Receive First Benefit from Thousand-Dollar Fund — After Fred's Graduation Some Other Deserving Athlete Will Be Selected to Fill the Vacancy—Project Joins Brain and Brawn.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

FRED KELLY has received word of the Olympic scholarship being raised by his friends at U. S. C., and in the city, and writes that he never expected to have so much done in return for his efforts at the Olympic games.

For the benefit of those who as yet are not familiar with the terms of the scholarship, a few words of explanation will be in order. The friends of the Olympic star are raising $1000 to be turned over to the endowment fund of the University of Southern California by October 1. In return for this, the university will give a perpetual scholarship, which will be known as the "Fred Kelly Olympic Scholarship."

During the remainder of his college course, Kelly will receive his tuition free, and on his graduation the Athletic Committee of the university will select an athlete from one of the Southern California prep schools, who would otherwise be unable to enter and finish a college course.

This is the first time in the history of Southern California that a scholarship will be given requiring athletic ability as one of the assets. The student chosen to follow Kelly, however, must have a good standard in his studies, as mere athletic ability will not be enough. In short, the man who fills Kelly's shoes must be an all-round man.

"IT PAYS TO STAY HOME."

Kelly says that he is firmly convinced that to stay at home and represent the native section is by far the best policy, and advises all young athletes who are about to enter college this fall, to look around home before leaving for other institutions of learning.

Before the final heat at Stockholm, Kelly was looked upon as a rank outsider by the other members of the Olympic team, though when he breezed home yards in front, in the trial heat, the ban was lifted a little. After the race, Fred says, that he began to receive offers almost before he had his bathrobe on.

On returning to the United States he was beset by scouts from all the large eastern universities with rosy offers. He says that he has simply had to fight for air, they have been coming so fast, but the fact that he was looked on as one of those "fresh westerners" before he came through has not been forgotten, and when college opens at the University of Southern California, he will be on the job, and will stay there until he graduates.

With Kelly's victory the amateur South seems to have at last awakened, and the followers of the sport here have stopped wondering why we cannot make a better showing in the games and have started something of practical use, which will show the athletes of the South that their efforts are no longer without notice.

SCHOLARSHIP PRACTICAL.

Medals and cups have been given before, but the founding of this scholarship shows that the men of the older generation realize what our men can do if given a chance, and it also shows that the athletic and educational factors of the South have at last joined hands.

To qualify for this scholarship a man must be a student and an athlete as well, and that is what is to be striven for among the colleges. We want typical and representative men on the teams sent out from Southern California.

Epoch-making Tour.

STIRRING NARRATIVE OF OCEAN TO OCEAN JOURNEY.

trip is summarized it was worth all that it cost. The story of the transcontinental journey reads like a romance.

Though the terrors of the desert have formed the setting for many thrilling stories, The Times car was given no special overhauling before it was sent out into the wastes of Arizona. Two big African water bottles were the chief part of the equipment, however, and it was fortunate these were taken. On the white, blistering sands, eighty miles from the nearest water, A. E. Weeks of Whittier was found dying from thirst.

Those African water bottles proved a welcome sight to the thoroughly frightened motorcycle rider. The old gray car looked even better, and though it was necessary to leave the machine out on the desert, Weeks was more than thankful to be given a ride into Phoenix where a doctor could be found. Never will I forget the look of thankfulness which crept into the face of the almost delirious man as he sank back into the tonneau of the car.

Gov. Hunt welcomed the organizers in Phoenix. The rousing meeting held in that city gave confidence to the men who had undertaken such a severe task. Col. Dell M. Potter, in a rousing address, outlined the work proposed and the project was given a great send-off. Such a send-off, indeed, that the following morning thousands crowded around the car as it left the city for the run to Globe. Up into the mountains of the Roosevelt Dam country The Times car was driven. Then after reaching the great reservoir over good roads the descent was made to Globe. Bill Shanley, in his own car, piloted the organizers all the way. It was a long run of 110 miles, but Shanley was not daunted. He had made the drive into Phoenix to meet the organizers and he determined to stay with them.

Everything was arranged in Globe. The programme moved like clockwork. There was a dinner at the hotel. Harry Thompson, a brother-in-law of Attorney Earl Rogers, had ridden all the way from Phoenix in The Times car to point out items of interest to the members of the crew. Thompson is making a business success in Phoenix, but he was willing to give his time and money to help boost the national highway movement. He proved one of the many jolly good fellows along the route.

The evening meeting proved a rousing success. As if the dinner had not been enough, a banquet was later spread in Elks Hall at Globe. Though it was prophesied by some that labor-unionists in Globe would give a scant greeting to The Times car, we found everybody boosting and shouting a welcome, and the meeting there was a grand success.

Then came the run from Globe to Safford. Oh, what a grand country that was! The first real joke of the tour came at Safford. That the evening meeting might be as successful as possible Bishop Birdno endeavored to hire the Town Hall, but was unsuccessful. The Roosevelt faction had jumped in ahead and the Town Hall was gone. Worried for fear the organizers would not be given the right kind of a reception Birdno arranged an open-air meeting in the park. This was a wise move.

FIRST VICTORY.

Imagine a political meeting with only the manager and the speaker present! Place yourself in the position of the man in charge who could hear the village band playing its welcome to The Times organizing crew while he stood in the empty auditorium. Then came a proposition from the Roosevelt management to give us the hall provided a little boost for Teddy could be sounded from the platform. There was nothing doing. No compromise was possible. The meeting proceeded and $2000 was raised, and the shouts of the enthusiastic national highway boosters echoed through the empty hall where the political campaign manager waited for the crowd that never came.

From Safford to Clifton automobiles were used to pilot the organizers all the way. Bishop Birdno was a passenger in The Times car. He took the machine over the historic old roads where the Indians fought and died and where Gen. Miles and others drove the red men to cover. At Clifton, the whole town turned out to greet us. Why not? This is the home of Col. Dell M. Potter, national organizer of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, under whose auspices the tour was undertaken.

When Col. Potter told the people of his home town that Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, owner of The Times, had given The Times Special to the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association to be used in organizing divisions across the continent the Clifton people joined the movement and another $2000 was raised in the town from which Col. Potter comes.

DIRECT ROUTE.

Then the hard work commenced. The highway out of Clifton is not built. In fact, there is practically no highway over the hills 115 miles away to Springerville on the border line of Arizona and New Mexico. The Times car was sent over the hills and reached an elevation of 10,500 feet. For the first time since an ocean-to-ocean highway was proposed the direct route from the Pacific to the Atlantic was selected. In order to do this it was necessary to choose the shortest and the best course from ocean to ocean. The road was found and the route was chosen. The distance is 3433 miles, the shortest distance ever found from the sands of the Pacific to the waters of the Atlantic.

Far up in the highlands among the whispering pines of the Rocky Mountains the first real hardships of the tour were endured. While dropping down the sides of the mighty mountains some idea was had of the dangers yet to come. At Cooley's ranch the roads were fierce. Here the fight with the rocks was begun. The hard winter had made the going particularly bad.

Imagine the surprise of The Times ocean-to-ocean organizers when the car was met by two automobiles. The road out of Cooley's was hard to find. The pilot cars were more than welcome. Within thirty miles of Springerville Herman Becker, one of the wealthiest merchants of New Mexico, met The Times car, and the old machine went swinging into the border city. There a rousing meeting was held and 1000 members were swung into line, making the total for Arizona 10,656. This was a good beginning.

From Springerville to Magdalena the roads are splendid. It was not a hard road to locate, but a pilot was ready and we were shown the route every foot of the way from Springerville to Magdalena. Here The Times car was let out on a fast run. The shades of night were falling when we were forty miles from Magdalena. Leaving our pilot, who told us to press on, we shot away for the little city in New Mexico and reached there at 11 o'clock at night, not too late to be greeted by a bunch of good-roads boosters who had waited.

MIDNIGHT GREETING.

Though it was almost midnight and we were hungry, the request for a meeting sounded too good to be overlooked, and those who had waited gath-

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

The Times Special is here. The ocean-to-ocean tour is over. Every automobile dealer along automobile row has shown his sincerity and has made the welcome of the automobile editor of The Times warm enough to suit him perfectly.

One of the best places to learn all about the automobile dealers of Los Angeles is Detroit.

Don Lee has that new hat set right for a new building. He seems just aching to get into handsomer and more spacious quarters. Well, he must be prepared for big business this coming season. It is already coming his way.

E. Roger Stearns has a host of friends at the Ford factory in Detroit. Though he is no longer the Ford agent he has many who wish him well in the little twenty-horse-power storehouse. He also has a great many boosters in Dayton.

Frank Howard had a close call while playing handball on Tuesday. Could not see the young Buick man, but he is certainly ace-high at the factory in Flint, where he is counted one of the big little men of the West.

While the automobile highway is not for the automobile men any more than for the farmers, it is the automobile men who have made the great undertaking possible. Hats off to the dealers and owners.

Earle Y. Boothe is in favor of a national highway across the continent, but what he most favors is action in this A.A.A. matter. He is ready to demand the rights of the westerners. He has on his fighting togs and will be heard. Watch the smoke of the man who won the last Phoenix road race.

H. O. Harrison is here from San Francisco. He has things his own way at the Peerless factory, where he is chalked up as the greatest dealer of the West or Middle West, if not in the entire United States. He also has a friend in W. E. Flanders who counts on Harrison to make a great hit this season.

Johnny Widrin is pluming his feathers for a great campaign. He seems to be the right little man in the right place. The Overland line this year is particularly fine and Johnny is just the man to pass them out speedily.

Things look about the same as when The Times car was driven away from Los Angeles. Business is booming. Great things must be accomplished this year, but more cars than ever will be sold and still it will be a question of deliveries.

If you are worried about a market for automobiles make a trip across the United States. You will see stretching before you many square miles of country where automobiles are wanted and wanted badly. The entire output of any of the large factories could be sold in a two-months' trip across the continent, provided you could make deliveries as you tour.

For fear W. E. Bush—I mean Bill Bush—might become conceited, I refuse to say the nice things I heard about him at the Pierce-Arrow factory. He is the high-class man of the high-grade line and can have almost anything he asks for in Buffalo.

Another man who has made a hit in the East is A. M. Young, but whether it is the right kind of a hit only time will tell. Certain it is that he is one of the best-known automobile dealers at A.A.A. headquarters, No. 437 Fifth avenue, New York. Young has got in wrong right but he is fighting along the right line to get out on the safe and sound side, no matter how the battle goes. If we have a new contest board he will be the real goods, and if the same old board remains in power Young is almost certain to be exonerated.

William Howard has a line to brag about in the Winton this year. The factory at Cleveland is a great place. Only enough cars to supply the trade will be turned out and these only after a most severe test. The Winton this year looks particularly fine.

Bill La Casse is as handsome as ever. The way he has been passing out those Studebaker cars is a wonder. He is making a clean that is seen and a noise that is heard clear across this continent. Willie is a good boy and we all wish him well.

C. Fred Grundy is right in also. He has some cars to handle but the line promised him this year is a particularly handsome one and he has no cause to worry.

Earle C. Anthony is the big man at the Packard plant. He will receive some of the handsomest cars ever turned out when the new models arrive. They will certainly have a great home to dwell in but of course will remain there for only a short time.

With the Dorris and the Abbott young Carpenter has been doing things since I've been gone. He is taking the front rank in the motor car business.

P. H. Greer was at the Mitchell factory with his entire family. He is not hurrying home because of that peculiar scare that made the editor of the automobile section hurry. He has a line of new cars this year that are so good that many of them will go as far as the lower countries of South America.

Saw Clarence Smith in Detroit. Learned many things from him but it was hard to keep him from telling the many fine points of those Knight cars. Don't blame him a bit. They are great.

A. J. Lamme was one of the first to greet us on our arrival. He is still pounding away with the Penn "Thirty," but is having a hard time to get deliveries. He is a real hustler and ready for business all the time.

E. E. Hewlett continues his winning habit and has been basking in the spotlight considerably of late. He seems to be lined up for a possible victory in that Phoenix race. Why of course, he'll enter.

W. K. Cowan has some cars at the Rambler plant that will surprise you when you see them. Great changes? Yes, and then some. This dealer must be watched carefully this year. Not that you need be afraid of him only he must be eyed closely or you will lose him in his own dust. He is a winner and will prove it this season.

The Newest HAYNES Model 22

Electric Starting and Electric Lighting

FOR the twentieth year of the Haynes Automobile, we announce the complete, perfect motor car. Haynes Model 22 every mark of the fine construction that has distinguished the Haynes car so many years; it has all the beauty of that has made Model 21 so popular; it has such roominess as you never saw in any other automobile; comfort to those who seek luxury; and an electric starting and electric lighting equipment of utmost simplicity and absolute reliability to give efficiency.

No one will deny that the Haynes Model 22 stands by itself as the superior automobile, the ultimate car—the supreme nineteen years of motor car development. It is fitting that America's first car—in point of years—should now be America's questioned first car in point of perfect, efficient completeness. The touring car models sell for $2400 f.o.b. Los Angeles. We hope we shall be able to build enough cars to fill our orders.

This photograph shows starting motor simple gear shifting device and wiring plan. Note that only two wires run from battery to starting motor, through the drum switch, which is operated when the starting gears are engaged. Gear shifting lever is used for engaging starting gears, making it impossible to engage the starting gears when transmission lever is released, automatically returning to neutral position, ready for shifting transmission gears. Quadrant is equipped with device for locking gear shifting and starting lever in neutral.

A Starting Device That Is NOT An Experiment

When so many manufacturers were loudly announcing "self-starters" last year, some people wondered that we said nothing about self-starters. But Haynes owners and Haynes dealers and everyone else who knew Haynes history did not wonder. They knew that when a real starting device was perfected, one that would start a car every time and never allow any possibility of injury to the motor—the Haynes would have it. We were working toward such a device then, an electric cranking device. It was perfected six months ago. But still we waited. We wanted to be very sure. That's Haynes policy. In these six months the first Model 22 test cars, equipped with this device, have been put through thousands of tests in the shops and on the road, and the starter has never failed.

This photograph shows the [illegible] motor mounted on the [illegible] battery through switch [illegible] cut-out is automatic [illegible] thereby disengaging the [illegible] generator armature when the motor is running. The generator is driven from battery by [illegible] the battery and [illegible]

Hundreds of these tests have been made under unfavorable conditions which could not arise in an owner's experience, and we couldn't make the starter fail. It cannot fail. And the equipment is so free from complications, so very simple, that if any trouble ever should appear the car would not have to be sent back to the factory. Any electrician in America could make wiring repairs on either the motor (starting device) or the dynamo (lighting device). Consider that point carefully. The average time of 10,000 Model 22 starts has been 5 seconds.

Need We Speak of Haynes General Construction? Everyone who knows automobiles at all knows that the Haynes name is a synonym for the best materials, correct design, excellent workmanship. Other data for the Haynes Model 22 and lighting equipment, Model 22 does not differ greatly from construction of recent Haynes models. The car is roomier. Upholstery twelve inches deep. Motor 4½x5½ inches, 40 h.p.; wheelbase 120 inches; tires 36x4½ inches. Equipment complete, including Eisemann dual magneto, Stromberg carburetor, meter, demountable rims, top, windshield, bumper, electric horn, tire irons on rear, extra rim and number holders, etc.

Everitt People Decide.

FLANDERS AND CHURCH DEAL IS CALLED OFF.

WALTER E. FLANDERS of Detroit and Norman W. Church of Los Angeles will not enter the giant combine which promised to make history in the automobile world. The deal in connection with the Atlas Engine Works of Indianapolis has been called off. The plan included a big factory to be known as the Flanders Motor Car Company. A car to cost $1000 and a higher-priced car were to be turned out.

When information reached Church about May 1 that it would be impossible to gain control of the Atlas Motor Works, Church at once got busy. In less than a week he had associated himself with about a dozen of the more prominent automobile manufacturers, and conferences after conference was held.

The bright star in the motor firmament at present is W. E. Flanders. His name is worth a fortune and when applied to a car it means the machine will gain a ready market. The Flanders prestige was to be used by Church and the others to market the car, and the proposition looked so good to a great many that some of the most prominent manufacturers considered the proposition.

After investigating affairs at the Atlas factory it was found that it would be necessary to put the plant through a friendly bankruptcy. This was accomplished, and Church was prepared to close the deal at the receiver's sale.

There is no contract that prevents Flanders from using his name in any other business. All of his connection with the Studebaker Corporation has been severed. In fact, the Studebaker people have decided to drop the name Flanders and E.M.F., and to continue to market their cars as the Studebaker "20" and the Studebaker "30." This seemed to coincide with all the plans of the men back of the giant combine.

That the plan would have meant much to the automobile industry goes without saying. A new, low-priced car, built by men who have had years of experience, should be a winner. The Flanders Motor Car Company would have been able to turn out just such a car.

The Everitt Motor Company, according to the plan of the men who were working in Detroit, was to be included in the deal. This proposition did not look good to Church, but he agreed to withdraw with the capital he controlled and leave the field to the Everitt people.

Flanders is one of the most fair men who ever conducted business negotiations. He is a personal friend of Church and refused to see the Los Angeles man eliminated from the deal if negotiations could be brought to a successful climax with Church. Then negotiations were on again, and it was not until weeks of figuring that the matter was finally dropped.

This does not mean, however, that the affair is dead. It may be brought up at another hearing and the original Church-McGuire and Flanders combination may be a possibility. At the present hearing the entire deal is off, according to Church.

The plan whereby the Atlas plant was to be sold fell through. Church, after weeks spent in Indianapolis and Detroit, returned to Los Angeles and is here now. He is one of the men who is best known to the automobile fraternity in the West, and has the habit of never quitting until he gets what he goes after.

The inside facts in connection with the matter read like the chapter in a novel. The biggest men in the automobile business were the actors, and there was not a moment during the conference that a bombshell might not have been exploded in motor circles. Flanders is out of the Studebaker Corporation. Church has severed all his automobile interests. Both are ready for something new. Flanders has the Everitt Motor Car Company interests to watch, but is this enough? Time alone will tell.

Watt Moreland has been cutting a wide swath with the Moreland truck. In the East he is recognized as one of our prominent western manufacturers, but to tell you the truth, he comes pretty nearly being the most prominent.

P. A. Renton is preparing for a campaign that should put him into the front rank. He is carefully mapping out a schedule and will do some consistent advertising along the lines which he has proved are right. He has $600 worth of work ahead in the paint shop alone.

Charles Rand is one of the younger dealers who is in line for a large business this season. With the Alco line, and the powerful Alco truck he will be kept busy hustling out the cars.

Louis Benton is still sure that the Mercer is the best car on earth. Well if you visit Trenton, N. J., you may have the same idea as this year's car is a hummer.

Roger Miller is in San Diego. The genial and hard-working Pullman agent has his hands full with the outside business this season, but he will find time to spend at least a part of each week in this city looking after his Pullman boosters.

H. K. Butterfield takes three hours of steady work at the plant each morning and then takes to the tall timber for a much needed rest. He is preparing to make his 1913 announcement in about two weeks.

Walter Brown of the Brown-Symonds company, agents for the Stutz, is away in the hills hunting for deer. He may get one and then again he may not.

W. J. Neuls is the power behind the throne at the Leon T. Shettler company. While his partner is taking the place of salesmanager, Neuls is entertaining the many visitors. The new Appersons have not arrived.

J. W. Wilcox, formerly the Maxwell agent, has decided to handle the Henderson car. He has a machine that will give a great account of itself.

Norman W. Church is home from the battle ground. He had it out with the big fellows in Detroit, and has returned looking as well as ever. That deal would have been a wonder if it had been sent through. Personally I'm sorry it was turned down.

Oscar Werner looks well in his handsome new home. It was time the Simplex was given a real mansion. This great car is coming into its own all over the country and it is only fitting that Werner should have the right kind of a garage and salesroom.

PEERLESS MEN ARE HONORED.

SERVICES IN IMPROVING METAL FOR AUTOS RECOGNIZED.

Abbott and Ammond of Metallurgical Department of Big Company Have Honorary Degree Conferred Upon Them by Case Scientific School. Their Alma Mater.

Robert Abbott and Mark Ammond had the degree of metallurgical engineer conferred upon them by the Case Scientific School of Cleveland recently. This was the result of academic recognition of the contributions made by the heat treating department of the Peerless Motor Car Company to the improvement of metals for use in motor cars. Abbott is the chief metallurgist of the Peerless Company and Ammond is his assistant. Both are graduates of the Case School, having finished with a degree of B. S., in 1902. Abbott secured the degree of mining engineer from Harvard in 1904.

Under the direction of these able men, the metallurgical department of the Peerless factory has done much valuable original work which has resulted in the production of materials for many parts of a motor which are far superior to any that were previously known. They have applied to the purchase of materials for the Peerless Company a new standard of specifications so exacting that steel makers first refused to accept it, but which is now being used by many of the leading steel plants.

"By the pioneering work they have done in the metallurgical field, the motor car makers have had a very important influence on all makers of machinery," said Engineer Abbott. "Within the past two or three years, the makers of axles, shafts and railroad rail fish plates have followed the motor car makers in the application of heat treating and are using it upon the material they supply for railroad work.

"This is only a beginning of what promises to be a broad movement which will affect the makers of all machinery and will in the end bring about an important improvement in its quality."

JOHN L.'S BACKER.

Jim Wakely, the Old New York Sporting Man, Put Up His Wad for Sullivan to Win.

The announcement that Jim Wakely, the old-time New York sporting man, was dying in New York last week recalled the fact that he was one of the first men to back the redoubtable John L. Sullivan in the palmy days of that noted fighter, and also to call attention to the difference in handling pugilists in those days and at the present time. Boxing had not then become the pleasing amusement spectacle which it is at present. The fighters had to battle for purses subscribed by friends of the two contestants or for stakes wagered by sporting men, generally saloon keepers or gambling-house proprietors, who took a fancy to a fighter and decided to give him a lift in the world by staking him for a fight. It was the usual custom for the backer to pay the board and lodging of a fighter while training and also to stand for the expenses of the trainer, and to supply the stakes or wager which the man was to pay over to the conqueror if beaten. The backer would generally stand for the expenses out of half the winnings, although if he were a generous fellow and in addition to the actual stake money had won a number of wagers, he would give the pugilist all of the stake money, feeling satisfied with his winnings from other sources. Of course, if the fighter lost it was an entirely different story. Then the backer was out not only all the stake money he had put up, but the expense money and the money he lost in outside wagers. The money as a general thing all went to the winner. The loser was never considered, for there was no such thing as a division of the money, so much for the winner and so much for the loser, as came into fashion with the glove-fighting game. In arranging a fight a sporting man did not expect to back a loser. He was looking for a victory. If his protege lost, the backer was all out and there was nothing to give the defeated pugilist. But it was often the case that when a man lost his victor would have a lot of sympathy for him and would give him a small part of the winnings. If the beaten man was game and put up a stiff fight then the spectators would take up a collection for his benefit.

Fixing a Funeral.

A shining example of commercial judgment of almost incredible stupidity may be found, Louis Viereck, the special correspondent of the International, writes in the August International, in the interesting city of Stassfurt, famous for its mineral wealth. The estimable Mayor of Stassfurt recently conceived the ingenious idea of levying a tax on the dead of the community. According to the latest degree issued by his honor, a funeral is to be considered an amusement and taxed as such. The widow of a citizen, applying for a funeral permit, received the following document: "Five marks. Permit to arrange a festival. Herewith permission is granted the Widow Liedke, of this city, to hold a funeral parade with music on the 5th inst., the procession to march through the Wachtel, Rosmarin, Prinsen, Brucken, Stein, Fursten and Hacklinger streets to the outskirts of the town."

Beware the Arkansas Razorback.

[Rogers Co-operative Press:] It is high time the Pleasant Valley Vigilance Committee did something about the Stimson sow. Her snoot is so long and strong that she can lift a ten-rail fence off the ground and throw it over her shoulder. She has already done great damage to crops about the neighborhood. She is especially destructive in the orchards. She leans up against the trees to scratch her back and her sharp spine saws them down. Simp Summers says he has only managed to save his trees by wrapping them with barbed wire. He says even that has its disadvantages, as it makes an excellent place for her to scratch, and it only takes about a week for her to wear the wire off.

The Boy Knew.

[Harper's Bazar:] The owners of a certain farm had butter and eggs brought them daily by the daughter of the farmer. A trained nurse had a case at the owner's home. One day the farmer's wife and daughter were discussing this, when the little boy, who had been listening, said: "Rita, if I go with you tomorrow, will you show me the trained nurse?" The girl said she would, and the next day he accompanied her. The nurse came into the kitchen, said a few words to him, and went out. He ran home at once, and arrived breathless. "Mother," he cried, "the trained nurse is nothing but a girl!"

STIRRING NARRATIVE OF OCEAN TO OCEAN JOURNEY.

Divide in New Mexico, we get up to 9000 feet and then the drop down into Colorado was commenced.

At the New Mexico-Colorado line a party of real boosters met us with E. J. McMahon, a prominent business man and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Trinidad, at their head. These men had driven far away from their city to welcome The Times car in the high hills and the crew was piloted into Trinidad, where a surprise awaited him.

There have been successes. The tour itself was remarkable, but the meeting in Trinidad proved one of the most sensational ever. While it was estimated that 2000 members might be secured the record for that gathering eclipsed all marks that had ever been set and Trinidad came into line with 5000 members. This was the high tide notch for the tour and made Trinidad the banner city.

BUFFALO WALLOWS.

From Trinidad we toured across to La Junta and there we were escorted to Rocky Ford, where William Jennings Bryan spoke. This was arranged as a special attraction for us and we were given seats where we could hear the Commoner. Then La Junta came into line with 2000 members and we wer escorted on to Las Animas, where the total of Colorado was increased until we were able to approach the Colorado-Kansas line with 11,500 members. This made Colorado the banner State.

Facing the wild wastes of Kansas, where the buffalo wallows proved dangerous for our heavy car, we entered the Sunflower State with only hope to key us up to concert pitch. At the first meeting in the busy State we secured 700 members and the whirlwind campaign, which resulted in breaking all records up to that point was on. We had reached a high mark in Colorado but we had not the slightest idea of what was in store for the members of The Times crew in Kansas.

Urged to route the car over the new Santa Fe trail a problem presented itself. The pathfinders had followed this trail, but it was not the route chosen by the Phoenix convention and also was not the route selected by the Kansas City convention. The answer came when National Organizer Potter decided to follow the old Santa Fe trail.

It remained for McPherson, Kan., to set the pace, with a membership of 6000. It was at this meeting, in the main street of the city, that the record was made. Thousands of people thronged around the car. The success of the movement was proved when it was impossible for the car to have been driven a foot beyond the spot chosen for the open-air demonstration. McPherson, Kan., became the banner city of the banner State on a banner tour with the proposed national highway being routed over the famous old Santa Fe trail replete with thrilling incidents of the early pioneers who were true patriots to the cause of an ocean-to-ocean highway.

GALA DAY.

It would be impossible to be too extravagant when speaking about the reception to The Times Special in McPherson, Kan.' The whole city literally turned out to greet the ocean-to-ocean tourers. The main street was blocked, farmers in their wagons drove in to be at the reception. The meeting was held in the center of the city, and there was too many people to make a hall meeting possible.

Crowding around the car the throng heard the gospel of good roads preached and endorsed the plan for a national turnpike. Then McPherson citizens joined the movement with a mighty cheer and another link was forged in the chain that now stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It was a heart-warming, blood-stirring meeting that was held that memorable afternoon in the main streets.

From McPherson the route was blazed so plainly that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not have erred. For many miles it was marked with flags. Then we found what Judge J. M. Lowe had done. In his zeal he had sent the markers out and the route had been signed all the way. The red, white and blue signals were painted on the telegraph posts and we followed them every step of the way across Kansas, and at St. Louis the work was outlined and continued on through that State and our task was more than half-accomplished. How miss the proposed national highway when it had been signed by one of the greatest adherents of the good-roads movement?

Never will I forget the triumphant tour through Kansas. It was one of the shining spots of a great trip which was marked with a series of successes. It was not The Times, not the men in the car, not the people, but the project itself, that made the undertaking such a signal success.

The route was not being built for the autoists, but for the farmers, and the men of the soil realised this when Judge Lowe told them how much easier their products could be hauled to market over a good highway than over the rough roads of the present day. He promised to give them a road as good as the European highways where the farmers haul their goods at an expense of 7 cents per ton for each mile covered. Now it costs our farmers 23 cents per ton for each mile.

KANSAS AHEAD.

Forty-three thousand three hundred members was the total for the Sunflower State, and this remarkable record was celebrated in just the way that seemed right by the people of Overland Park. There Mr. Ryan took charge of a meeting that was novel and interesting. Just a short distance outside of her home town Mrs. W. E. Strang met The Times car. She was waving an immense silk flag, the Stars and Stripes, and we literally followed the flag into Overland Park.

The setting for the meeting in that city was pleasing. The Times car reached there late at night, but not too late for the enthusiasts. On a raised rostrum, with Chairman Ryan to introduce each of the speakers, the people swung into line and finished the Kansas organization tour with a resounding cheer that made the meeting memorable to every person gathered on the green. The mark was a high one, but it was to be beaten by the Puke State boosters in Missouri.

Judge J. M. Lowe, president of the National Old Trails Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, greeted The Times car with its crew of organizers in Kansas City, Mo. The man who has taken the front rank in the task of molding public sentiment in favor of a national highway was on fire with zeal for the cause. He outlined a plan whereby Col. Potter and the automobile editor of The Times should go to Chicago to attend the Republican national convention.

What was to be done? The plan included a request for a good-roads plank in the platform to be hammered together in Chicago. It semed audacious to ask the men there to listen to the story of a national highway, but when the records of the tour were examined nothing seemed impossible. We left for Chicago, but not in The Times car. That old battle-scarred machine was not to leave the old Santa Fe trail.

The story of what was done in Chicago is well known to those who followed the battle there. With the nomination of President Taft the battle was over and it was time then to return to the dun-colored road runner at Kansas. There another welcome surprise awaited us. President Lowe, in a wire, said he was thinking of making the tour in The Times car. When we returned to Kansas City the venerable jurist decided to make the trip. He proved one of the greatest good-roads boosters that ever rode in an automobile.

OUR PLAN.

It was at Independence, Mo., that President Lowe made one of the most remarkable addresses ever given on the national highway topic. He outlined the plan of battle and then told of the work this government has done in building national roads. He swept all opposition away by proving that it is

NATIONAL SHOOT AT SACRAMENTO

Crack Blue Rock Artists to Have Innings.

Big Prizes to Be Given in Numerous Events.

Three Days' Programme Has Been Arranged.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The official programme for the national trapshoot to be held at the State Fair grounds in Sacramento, during the State Fair, has just been issued by the committee in charge. It shows a busy three days' session with the blue rock traps, as well as offering a run of prizes, which will reach $4000 or $5000. The meet will give a crack blue-rock shot a chance to make some good money, as well as gathering a string of valuable trophies, such as shotguns and silver cups.

In addition to the individual trophies, which are valued from $10 to $150 or more, there will be the entrance fees and $30 added money for the victorious marksmen. After the programme is gone through and the individual trophies and prizes awarded, the ten highest shots will shoot for ten other trophies and the highest of these will be awarded the Sacramento Hotel trophy, for the best shot of the meet, as well as a shotgun, valued at $110, which is being put up by one of the arms manufacturing concerns.

CHANCE ONLY FOR CRACKS.

The class of shooting at this tournament will bring out the finest shots in the country, and at the present rate of entries, it looks as if only such marksmen as can score in the neighborhood of 92 will have any chance to get away with the honors. The meet will be open to amateurs only, but the class of amateurs will have to be pretty high. There will be a number of professional shots take part in the shooting, but they will not be allowed to compete for prizes. They will be sent here by the powder and arms manufacturing concerns and give exhibition shooting only.

The blue-rock meet will begin on Sunday, September 15, and continue for three days, closing on Tuesday, September 17, when the diamond watch fob trophy will be shot for, as well as the other high trophies, which are held up to the crack shots of the meet. The shooting will be held from the traps on the infield of the race track during the morning. The official programme is as follows:

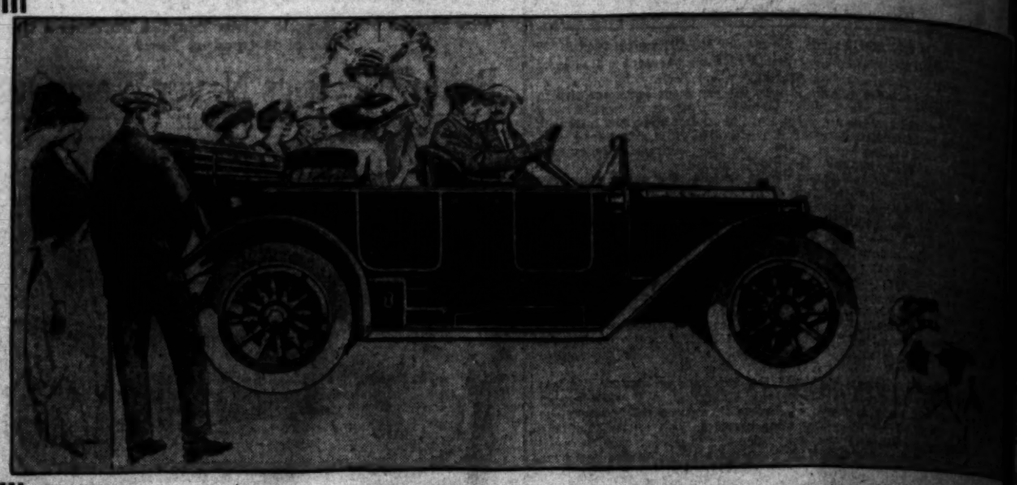
1913—ANNOUNCEMENT—1913



SIX NEW STYLES, ranging in price from $1700 to $3050, all well equipped, composed the Abbott-Detroit line for 1913. Two models of 34-40, have a 116-inch wheelbase while the other four models, the 44-50, are built upon a 121-inch wheelbase chassis.

The motors, of the latest Continental, long stroke type, have enclosed valves and many other desirable features; the 34x40 motors are 4⅛-inch bore x 5¼-inch stroke, while those of the 44-50 are 4½-inch x 5½-inch.

All of the models have an underslung spring construction which lowers the center of gravity and in addition to allowing the use of a very pleasing design of body tends to eliminate side-swaying and excessive skidding, making it safer to drive the car at high speed. Other important features to which your special attention is called are: Dry Plate, Multiple Disc Clutches; Strong, compact nickel steel Transmissions; enclosed Unit Power Plants; full floating type Rear Axles of nickel steel construction, the housings of which are so designed as to form complete double trusses of great strength and extreme rigidity; Timken Roller and imported Schafer make Bearings; oil tempered Springs; large Artillery Wheels, made of selected hickory; Special Steels; heavy duty Forgings, double heat treated; ventilated fore-door Bodies; Inside Control; 10-inch upholstering; two-coat painting operations on body; Equipment includes black enamel, nickel trimmed Electric Headlights; electric Side and Tail Lamps with Tungsten globes; very complete Electric Lighting System with Dynamo; large capacity Lighting Battery; Extension Auxiliary Light; Dash Light; Splitdorf Dual Ignition System; specially designed self-contained Electric Self-Starter; Rear mountable Rims; Horn; complete set of Tools; Tire Repair Outfit; Jack; Tire Irons; Robe Rail; Tool Box and Foot Rest.

One that He Missed.

[Boston Traveler:] The colony of artists living in St. Botolph street are having a laugh on a man who has been considerable of a nuisance to them the past few months. This man prides himself on a brusqueness that he mistakes for wit. The other night he was introduced to a young sculptor whose fame is getting beyond the confines of Boston.

"So you are the chap that makes mud heads, are you?" asked the witty man.

"Not all of them," the sculptor replied, quietly.

Bennie McGovern of St. Louis is outboxing, outhitting and outgeneraling everybody and everything that comes his way.

BEAUTIFUL SALESROOM FOR PACKARD BUILDING.

EARLE C. ANTHONY is anxiously watching the work on the beautiful salesroom in the new Packard building. Every other part of the new building is being occupied excepting the room where the latest Packard models are to be exhibited.

This room is artistically finished in dark brown and rose gold. The effect is highly artistic, but at the same time subdued and in harmony with the elegance of the cars to be shown within its walls. The decorators have finished their work on the ceiling and walls and during the next week the chandeliers will be hung, and work started on the tile flooring.

The offices of the sales force will be on the main floor. A passenger elevator will take people to the other floors from the salesroom.

The salesroom should be entirely occupied within the next two weeks and Anthony is considering a formal opening for the purpose of showing people about the most perfectly equipped automobile establishment in the West.

The Boston Braves are the derelicts of the National League, following no particular course and being knocked about by any and all clubs. The Braves have on their roster some of the best-known players in the game, cast-offs of some of the best clubs of both leagues, destined to finish their careers in the scrap heap of baseball.

All About "The Times" Tour.

GOOD, BAD, INDIFFERENT QUESTIONS ABOUT TOUR.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

QUESTIONS I have been asked on the ocean-to-ocean tour, and the answers.

How many States did you cross?

We started in California, crossed the Colorado River into Arizona, then toured New Mexico, climbed the Raton Pass into Colorado. We passed through Kansas and then Missouri. Our next triumph came in Illinois, then Indiana, then Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and New York. Count: just fifteen States.

What is the distance you traveled from Los Angeles to New York?

The shortest ever routed by an automobile—3433 miles.

Did you find the roads very bad?

They were fierce in some places, but not as bad as we anticipated.

Would you advise a man who has driven a car only a short distance to make the trip?

Yes, if he follows the route selected by The Times Special.

Where did you find the worst roads?

In California and in Maryland.

How long ought it take to make the trip?

Thirty days.

"Why were you so long?"

We left California May 15 and reached New York City July 15. We organized all the way.

Did you have any tire trouble?

We changed four casings, but carried Los Angeles air in one front tire entirely across the continent.

Did you really find everybody in favor of building a national highway? Was your account of the great crowds the truth?

The pictures will answer this question.

Would you make the trip again if you had the chance? This is the eternal question.

Yes, but I would prefer to make my second transcontinental journey over a new macadam highway.

Are those the original tires you started with?

This question comes when the "extras" we carry are looked over carefully. Well we carried Los Angeles air from Los Angeles to New York in one front tire and lost the air on Staten Island, and lost it while on the way to pay our respects to Gov. Wilson.

How did the farmers treat you?

One man at Baldwin, Kan., came to town primed for bear and ready to kill us. He returned with five memberships which he proposed to distribute among his friends in the little town of Savonberg.

How are you going to build this highway?

The government will pay half the cost and each State, through which the highway passes, the other half.

Which is the banner State?

Indiana, with 50,950 members.

Which is the banner city?

This question must be settled according to the population. I think Highland, Ill., has the honors.

How old a man is Judge J. M. Lowe?

He is about 60 years young, a Civil War bugler and the best national highwayman I've ever met.

What kind of a man is Col. Dell M. Potter?

One of the best fellows on earth, a great orator and just the kind of organizer we needed to make the trip a grand success. I'll get it for this.

From the dealers?

How do the farmers seem to take to the idea?

They were the best of all and helped us all the way.

How much does it cost to make a trip across the continent in an automobile?

Well we estimated that for a touring car with five passengers, the cost would be $50 a day. This is excessive. The trip can be easily made at a cost of $5 per day for each person. If you wish to be luxurious a cost of $10 per person will give you the fat of the land and at the same time pay the expense of gasoline and upkeep of car.

How large a gasoline tank would you use?

Thirty gallons.

Which route do you prefer?

The route of The Times special. The old Santa Fe trail, the Boone-Lick road and the Cumberland pike.

How much will is cost to build the national highway?

This is a question for expert engineers to answer. It will not cost one-third as much as we appropriate in one year for our rivers and harbors improvements.

Do you prefer the southern route? Why that is the Santa Fe trail.

Listens Good.

FOR THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN.

TIRE MAN HAS SAFE AND SANE VACATION IDEAS.

Ijams Recommends Auto Camping Trip Into Unfrequented Places, and Practices What He Preaches. Will Hit the Untraveled Paths Next Week With Camping Outfit.

R. L. Ijams of the United States Tire Company claims to have discovered the only way for the tired business man to take a vacation, and it is not at the ball park on the installment plan, either.

Into the open country without a definite schedule, with a full camping outfit strapped to an automobile, is the suggestion of the tire man for the tired man. He says to get away from the idea that it is necessary to reach certain points at certain times. Have for the one object fun and enjoyment. Stop and go when and where you please. Camp in the mountains, fish, hunt and visit the little towns along the way as it pleases your fancy.

Ijams believes in this theory himself, and is planning to start on a trip next week which will take him out of the traveled ways. The back of the car will carry his camping outfit, consisting of everything from a pneumatic bed to a frying pan.

Last year Ijams took a trip of this kind, traveling 1400 miles in a leisurely fashion, and never spending a night in a hotel.

Accompanied by J. W. Whitehead, he drove from San Francisco to Sacramento, then on to Tahoe, around the lake to Carson City and Reno. Returning by way of the Yuba Pass to Sierraville, they went north to Shasta Springs. From there they went into the Cloud River country and returned down the west side of the Sacramento River.

TOURIST'S OUTFIT DESIGNED BY MOORE.

C. J. Moore of the Packard Motor Car Company has designed an automobile tourist's outfit which includes twelve pieces of luggage.

A lunch kit, hat box, two trunks, seven suitcases and an ice box make up the equipment. This outfit is so arranged that it does not in any way interfere with the carrying capacity of the standard touring car.

The designer has spent much time in developing this luggage equipment, which is said to answer every requirement of the motor car traveler. He has toured Europe as well as the United States and has gained a thorough knowledge of just what is needed by careful observation.

Apply the Acid Test To Our Tires

Drive over rocks and ruts, through sand and mud, over torn up streets and boulevards, out on the desert. Drive hard and fast.
Make us show you that there is a big value in any standard make we sell, because they are as fresh and tough as the day they were made. Manufacturers ship to us immediately and tires don't harden or deteriorate in the time it takes to get them here, but they do if they are left long in stock.
Whoever you buy from, ask how long the tires have been on their racks.

The Hundred Mark.

PACKARD TRUCKS ARE DOING HEAVY WORK.

THE hundred mark in Packard trucks was passed last week by the California Motor Company and they are confident that they will top 200 before the end of the 1913 season.

These trucks are being used for every kind of work from hauling asphalt, sand and crushed rock, to fruit and furniture. They are seen daily on the city streets and twenty are doing the heaviest of work in the Southern California oil fields.

The heaviest work is being done by those which carry sand and crushed rock. These loads average from four and a half to five tons. The large trucks are supposed to have a three-ton capacity, and the Packard company does not encourage overloading. But when a firm has a truck that stands up and does the extra work, tire wear and overloading are not generally considered.

The Packard trucks come in three sizes, two, three and five tons. From the very first day the Packard truck was put on the market it was a success.

Many of the grading companies are now using trucks instead of the horse-drawn wagons, and considerable more work is being done at less expense. It is the same story in almost every line of business where the trucks have replaced the horse-drawn wagons. They will haul a greater load and make faster time.

The Prince's Triple Ban.

[Pall Mall Gazette:] In according a "triple ban" to the Prince of Wales on his recent visit to their clubhouse the Paris students paid the royal guest the highest honor which is in their power to bestow, and one which the wayward denizens of the Quartier Latin have been known to withhold from Kings and Emperors. No official hint will bring it forth, and it is the students' proud boast that the "ban" has never yet been "made to order."

In the French Chamber of Deputies, most of the members of which have been through the university course in Paris, and occasionally remember their student days, the "ban" has sometimes been given as a signal mark of approval. A ban at the Palais Bourbon is even more deafening than in the Quartier Latin, as it is executed with desk lids and paper cutters instead of the bare hands.

The Marquis de Villavieja, who has done a great deal to promote polo in Spain, has just presented to the Hurlingham Club of London, a new polo trophy, to be known as the "Century Challenge Cup." Its conditions are unique, being as follows: "Teams must be composed of players whose total age must either be below 100 years or above 200 years. Cup to remain the property of the Hurlingham Club and the names of the winners to be

AUTO POLICE PATROLS DO EFFICIENT WORK.

The excellent service rendered by the three auto patrols, which were purchased by the city of New York has resulted in an order for a similar machine to be used in the police department of Newark, N. J.

It is stated by officials that the three patrols in the service of the city of New York have covered more territory than that covered by ten patrol wagons drawn by horses, and as they are able to travel more rapidly and reach the scene of a fire or disturbance in much less time, a more efficient police service has resulted.

The Garford ordered by the Newark officials is a 40-horse-power machine and has a seating capacity of twelve. It is fitted with a heavy body, but is abloe to maintain an average speed of forty or forty-five miles to the hour, while carrying several passengers.

What the Maid Found.

[Philadelphia Telegraph:] When Mrs. Mulligatawny arrived at her holiday haunt, to her dismay she found that her watch was missing. Thinking that she probably had dropped it on the thick, soft dining-room carpet, she wired to the maid at home.

"Let me know if you find anything on the carpet in the dining-room."

A few days later she received a letter from the maid as follows:

"Dear Madam: I was to let you know if I found anything on the dining-room carpet. This is what I found this morning: Three champagne corks, eighteen cigar ends, five cigaret ends, thirty-six burnt matches and one pink satin slipper."

Picked to Pieces.

THOMAS EASILY BEATS FRANKIE.

Gets Decision After Leading All the Way.

Conley Takes Bad Drubbing, but Is Game.

'Arry Refuses to Weigh in and Loses Forfeit.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

Harry Thomas won a twenty-round decision over Frankie Conley yesterday afternoon at Vernon after one of the toughest fights he ever had. He was quite a few pounds over weight, and it was a lucky thing for him that he was. This advantage was a handicap to Conley and a great advantage to Harry.

Thomas proved all that Jimmy Johnson claimed for him. He held his punches back for a number of rounds, then let them go good and hard and nearly finished Frankie several times. Thomas is a good hitter, fast on his feet and clever with his hands, and will make any featherweight in the country extend himself to the limit to beat him. He looked a little fat, but seemed to be in good condition.

Conley fought in his usual way of rushing, always carrying the fight along, and set a fast pace for the entire distance. He had the crowd with him, as usual, and they yelled for him for the last few rounds. Many would like to have seen Eyton give Frankie the decision for his gameness.

'ARRY HAS BIG LEAD.

But it was Thomas's fight from the start. Thomas did not hit Frankie as often as he has been hit in other fights. Conley has improved his defense, but he could do little with Harry. Eyton warned Frankie several times for using his head in the clinches, but it is hardly probable that he butted intentionally. Thomas was warned several times for holding, but on the whole it was a clean, fair contest.

When Eyton entered the ring he immediately declared all bets off. It was rumored in the morning that Jimmy Johnson had Thomas come in over weight intentionally, and it was also reported that Harry had hurt his ankle in getting off a street car. This was supposed to be done to influence the betting. But Eyton sensibly stopped any chance for a frame-up by declaring the bets off and was roundly applauded by the crowd for doing so. Thomas forfeited $250 for being over weight.

These reports no doubt hurt the house. There was a fair crowd on hand and all fights started promptly. After Joe Mandot and Tommy McFarland were introduced to the crowd, Thomas and Conley entered the ring. Thomas was seconded by his manager, Jimmy Johnson, Abdul the Turk and "Blackie" Mitchell. Conley had Charlie Dalton, his manager, Brent, Battling Chico and Nick Lewis, his trainer, to look after him. Thomas looked to weigh about 128.

Round 1. Conley rushes Harry and they meet in the center of the ring and fight at close quarters. Harry hits a straight left to Frankie's face and he rushes Harry to the ropes and they hit fast at close quarters. Thomas is fast on his feet. Harry hits two straight lefts to Frankie's face. They clinch and, after the break, Harry lands another straight left to Conley's face, just before the bell rings.

Round 3. Thomas lands a straight left to Frankie's face, then danced around Frankie and hit him several light left hand punches in the face. Conley was after him all the time, but Harry would feint and keep out of danger. Thomas hooks a left and right to Conley's face and the referee warns Frankie for using his head in the clinches. Conley rushes again near the end of the round, but no damage.

Round 4. Thomas lands a left and right to Frankie's face, then they both land lefts to the face. Frankie lands a right to Harry's body, then rushes him to the corner and hits him with both hands on the body. Harry lands a left to Frankie's face and a right to his ear, Thomas another straight left to the face and a left swing in the same place. They clinch and Frankie lands a right to Harry's body.

Round 6. Thomas looks fat and the pace seems to be telling on him. Frankie starts the round with a rush and they slug hard at close quarters. Harry lands a left hook to Frankie's ear and Frankie lands a right uppercut to Harry's chin in a clinch. Frankie lands a right to Harry's ear and, as he tries to slip out of a corner, Frankie nails him with a couple of good ones on his body. Harry lands a straight left to Frankie's face. They clinch and rough it and slug hard and the crowd cheers Frankie as he goes to his corner.

Round 7. Conley is blocking better than he ever did and many of Harry's blows are landing on his gloves and arms. Frankie lands a left to Harry's face and roughs him around the ring and pays little attention to Harry's blows. Frankie is after him all the time. Thomas lands a left to Frankie's face and they both land lefts to the fact. Referee warns Frankie again for using his head. They both land good body blows with rights and the pace is a hot one for both boys.

Round 8. Harry lands two left swings to the face and a right uppercut to the jaw. Then they slug again in the center of the ring. Frankie rushes Harry around again and lands a right to Harry's face as he goes away. Harry lands a left to the fact and two good straight uppercuts to Frankie's face at close quarters. Frankie lands a left swing to Harry's face. Thomas lands a left and right to Frankie's face and a right to his body at the end of the round.

Round 10. Harry jabs a couple of lefts to Frankie's face, then feints and lands six more to the same place without a return. Then he lands two rights to Frankie's jaw and a right uppercut to his jaw. Frankie rushes and lands a left to Harry's face and a right to his body. They clinch and Frankie gets to his body with a right. Harry lands a hard right uppercut to Frankie's face and a good left swing to his jaw.

Round 11. Harry lands three left straight upcuts to Frankie's face, following it with a left swing to his face and a right to his body. Frankie rushes Harry to the ropes. Harry lands two left swings to Frankie's face. Frankie puts a left swing to Harry's face and Harry came back with a right to his body. Harry lands a left and right to Frankie's face and they both land lefts to the body as they came into a clinch. Frankie has Harry running around the ring, but cannot land effectively.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Come See Them

Come here and see these patent tires, or go to any Goodyear dealer.

See why they can't rim-cut. See what oversize means. One glance shows their advantage.

If you wish to cut tire upkeep in two, let us show you how to do it.

So many tire users have found this out that the monthly sales of Goodyear tires exceed 100,000. Come and learn why.

$10 a Minute Saved

It takes but a few minutes to learn the facts. And the facts will save you, in the long run, fully $10 a minute.

For they mean that rim-cutting is ended forever. And rim-cutting occurs on 23 per cent of all the old-type tires.

And they mean, with the average car, 25 per cent additional mileage, through the 10 per cent oversize.

Add that 23 per cent to that 25 per cent, and judge for yourself if such results are worth while.

They are buying now about three times as many as they bought a year ago. Twelve times as many as three years ago.

You are bound to join them soon or late. You want what they want —tires that can't rim-cut, tires that are oversize.

The sooner you come to see them, the sooner you'll lessen your tire expense.

Go where you can judge them when you next buy tires.

The Doom of the Old-Type Tire

Hundreds of thousands of motorists are finding out these facts.

They are quitting tires which rim-cut—tires just rated size.

In the first six months of 1912 they bought 485,983 of the Goodyear tires.

The Goodyear Tire Book—based on 13 years of tire making—is filled with facts you should know. Ask us to mail it to you.

Goodyear pneumatic tires are guaranteed when filled with air at the recommended pressure. When filled with any substitute for air our guarantee is withdrawn.

A Real Battle.

'ARRY'S SCIENCE TURNS TRICK.

Thomas Is in Bad Shape, but Pluckily Keeps Going.

Fans Yell Frantically in the Closing Rounds.

Frankie Outclassed, but Puts Up Gallant Fight.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

Two desperate little men did mighty battle yesterday afternoon at Vernon, but science was not to be denied, so after twenty rounds of mad fighting, Harry Thomas was given the decision over that grand little pocket edition of Jim Flynn, Frankie Conley. Harry did about everything that is ever done in the prize ring to Conley and when the bell rang at the end of the twentieth round, Conley was one mass of bruises, while Thomas was so weary he could hardy stand on his feet.

From the very first it was seen that both lads had a great deal at stake. Copley was fighting for his lost reputation, while Thomas had to make good for the Johnson stable. Thomas was overweight in the morning, having about three and a half extra pounds above the 122 limit.

'Arry was not in shape, as was shown by his leg weariness after the twelfth round, but he kept jabbing and hooking at Frankie's sore face and by sheer dogged pluck stuck out the limit. After the battle he was one of the most exhausted little fellows I have ever seen,—not from any blows received in the fight, but from the pace. He said he thought they would never get over the time limit.

THOMAS UNDER WRAPS.

In the first round Thomas drew blood on Frankie's mouth, but the latter seemed faster and better than when he last fought here and the cry went around that Frankie had come back at last. Thomas spent four rounds feeling his opponent out, under the orders of Jimmie Johnson, although all the time he was wild to sail in and end the battle.

"Now you listen to me Harry," said Jimmy between rounds. "If you tear in now, we will be packing you out of the ring about the fifteenth round. This guy can take everything you've got and then more. Just mark him up, that's all."

Harry heeded the warning and was afterwards glad he did, as Conley uncorked several spurts that would have been bad for Harry had he been more tired than he was, but he was able to get out of the way.

In the twelfth round the blood started to flow from Conley's right eye. Harry stood off and measured him and waited until he pulled his hand away from a crack, then, bang! bang! two lefts on the eyebrow and the stream was started. Conley stuck his thumb into the sore member to wipe the blood out and while he was doing this Thomas let go a series of rights and lefts to the face that did all the damage.

After this spasm, Thomas spent all his time keeping away from Frankie and cutting up his face. Then the sixteenth round rolled around. Frankie's jaw was sticking out as he left his corner and his seconds were leaning through the ropes with drawn faces. The boy was in trouble and in the last minute of rest had not had enough time to dam up the stream of blood with the caustic. Thomas came to life here and stepped out with several feints. Then before the twinkling of an eye, his right hand crashed against Frankie's jaw, a left followed to the clot of blood over his right eye. Thomas shoved Conley over with his left hand and then tore another right against his jaw. The little iron man reeled. Thomas ripped in a body punch; then another to the eye and mouth. A thin stream of blood started to spatter on the canvas of the ring and Frankie shook his sorely battered head and ducked into a clinch.

CONLEY'S NERVOUS SYSTEM.

In this round he took enough punishment to put out any other featherweight in the game. I think he was out, but only stayed because the connection between his brain and his nervous system has something wrong with it. Frankie walked around during the last minute and a half of this round like a man in a trance, but still kept his hands over his face by some blind instinct. Like a poisoned animal will seek water when almost dead, so Frankie kept walking into Thomas. Somewhere back in his head, there was a little germ of thought which kept saying: "I must stand up, somehow." He pulled through the round somehow and when the bell rang shambled to his corner.

At the end of this round, Thomas stood back and looked Conley over for full ten seconds, then nodded his head and sat down.

In the next round, Thomas waited until he could again start that stream of blood from the mouth and eye, only it was not a tiny one this time. Conley had stopped wiping the blood from his eye now and when a sheet of red covered the right side of his face, merely shook his head, covering the floor with crimson. Nothing daunted by the awful round before, he put his battered head down and rushed Thomas, and rushed him with all his might and main. The Conley seconds rose as one man and began to hammer on the floor, yelling for him to "come on now." Thomas was surprised and while recovering from this surprise, ran into a stiff stomach punch and one on the jaw, which slowed him up a little. With the crack of the glove on Harry's jaw, Jimmy Johnson was half way through the ropes.

"Toes, Harry, toes! On your toes!" yelled Johnson, and Harry began to dance around and was out of danger at once.

Conley went mad in the eighteenth and nineteenth. Charlie Dalton was yelling for him to "show now." Dimly he realized that he was being battered to a pulp and to win must paralyze Thomas. He jumped at him, hammered at him, but did not hurt him. Jimmie was yelling for Harry to cover and not take a chance yet.

They hardly shook hands in the twentieth, but charged each other. "Keep those mitts closed now," Jimmy Johnson kept calling to Harry. Thomas doubled up his fists and began punching. When a man is tired to keep the hands closed lends a little more force to his blows. Harry scored at once and all through the round.

to have all their contests registered in the A.A.U. As the work broadened out and the field became too large for one man to handle, I had Bernal Dyas and George W. Braden appointed to associate with me, and in 1906 we held the first A.A.U. meet in Southern California, which I am pleased to say was a success, having entries from every institution in the South. I was also appointed on the Games Committee of the Lewis and Clark exposition, but unfortunately was unable to attend, but latter went to Berkeley as an official at the P.A.A. meet, taking with me Charles Parson, who afterwards contested in the national championships.

"I also had the pleasure of being elected president of the first Southern California baseball league, then composed of the Hoegee Flays, Tufts-Lyons, Hamburgers, Santa Barbara, Ventura and later San Diego, but there have been many changes since then, and one would hardly recognise the old stamping ground. The enthusiasm for out-of-door sports has grown tremendously."

What Would Nolan Do?

An interesting conversation was started on Spring street one day last week when some of the old-time fight fans got tangled up in an argument as to what Billy Nolan would do if he ever started out with Willie Ritchie. Ed Martin said that after what Billy pulled off with Bat Nelson at Goldfield the time he fought Gans there, it would not be a surprise to hear of Billy getting the other fellow to fight for pleasure alone.

In the fight mentioned Nolan got a purse of $30,000, two round trip tickets from New York to San Francisco and $2500 for training expenses. Then on top of all this, Nolan got half of all the ring-side concessions.

"Wow," said Ed, "what would this guy do with a boy like Ritchie in tow?"

Well if the above line of dope can be taken as any criterion, Nolan and Ritchie would about own the arena after the fight, besides all the extra peanuts.

If Nolan and Wolgast should cross wires it would be a battle royal, as Wolgast is another fellow who likes to eat his cake and have it. But I wonder where our little friend Willie would get off? Probably with a great reputation, that's all.

Oak Pitchers Have Goods.

I do not wonder Oakland has been making such a fight for first place in the Coast League. With the pitchers under Sharpe's command, the Oaks should be even, farther along than they are. Killilay, Ables and Malarkey have pitched some great ball this series, but have not been backed up with the same kind of fight that Hogan gets out of his Tigers.

In this series, the Oaks are a little shot up as about every game shows a new line-up, and it is almost impossible to get concentrated action when the infield is broken up in a different way each game. But these Oaks are not out of the running yet as there is a long way to go before the bacon is brought home.

Levy Gets on the Job.

Joe Levy says that he will get busy with Rivers next Sunday at Venice. With the start of the training campaign for the Labor Day battle between Mandot and Joe, lively interest in the fistic game will be renewed, as on the outcome of this fight rests the next battle for the lightweight throne. There are many who think Mandot has too much class for Rivers and that after September 2, Wolgast will be faced by Mandot and Ritchie for his title.

Returning to Old Game.

The change in the football rules this season seem to point to the old game of six years ago. Four downs to make ten yards and a shortening of the field, with additional points for the touchdown and field goal, will make the intercollegiate game one of big scores this season.

It was thought that the game as played last season was about right, but recently the powers that be in the East have discovered a way to make the play more exciting than before.

Rugby Free From Rule Changes.

Rugby is about the only game that seems free of rule changing and that will be one of the reasons for its popularity in the future on the Coast. Constant change takes away from the possibility of high-class play, as the players have to reconstruct methods and form to meet the new conditions each season, while with Rugby it is a case of the same thing over and over, and after a man has played the game for two years he is sure to become more or less of a veteran.

Olympic Club Stars Enter Meet.

The Olympic Club of San Francisco will have two representatives in the open-water race at Ocean Park on August 25. Walter Pomeroy and George Bond both sent in entry blanks yesterday, and will arrive here next Thursday. These were the two swimmers who first crossed the Golden Gate. About a couple of weeks ago they had a second race across the Gate, which was won by Pomeroy, with Bond third. It will be Bond's first appearance in the South since the Coast championships were decided at Naples five years ago, when he took second in the five-twenty. Pomerey won the 880 in the same meet.

Reseleure to Enter Leipsic.

J. F. Reseleure, the crack swimmer who represented the University of California and the Olympic Club in a number of meets during the last few years, has left for Leipsic, Germany, where he will enter the university.

Reseleure, although he had only one leg, was the peer of any man on the Coast for 220 yards. He defeated Lincoln Johnson, the wonder from the San Francisco Y.M.C.A., in a match race in June over that distance, making the remarkable time of 2m. 37 4-5s. We will probably hear from him soon, as he will compete in all the races held on the other side.

The All Important Question of Up-Keep Cost

More important even than the question of car price is the question of up-keep cost. Car price is at least known and definite, but up-keep leads into the trackless and unknown.

Foreknowledge on this important item means either a profitable car investment or a steady financial drain that makes car-ownership an expensive and exasperating luxury.

Studebaker cars have not only successfully solved the question of a high-quality car at a low price, but at a cost for maintenance and operation that puts them within comfortable reach of everyone.

The light-running car was the first step in solving this problem of up-keep cost and the success of the Studebaker cars—realized after years of testing and experiment — has revolutionized car building.

Into these cars have been put the same quality of material and workmanship, the same beauty of design, the same comfort, the same service as in the high-priced heavy touring cars whose cost for operation limits them to wealthy owners.

The light-running car is the car of today and of the future, and is in demand by wealthy owners as well as those of moderate incomes.

The wonderful serviceability of the Studebaker cars, their low running cost and ease of operation have endeared them to seventy-five thousand owners.

Up-keep cost is a big selling argument, and this great factor in the selling strength of these cars should not be overlooked either by dealers or owners.

PRESENT DAY BALL TAME BESIDE OLD-TIME GAMES.

BY GREY OLIVER.

"TALK about any rough stuff," murmured Charley Reilly as he watched Tuesday's incident between Bill Tiedemann and Johnny Kane, "why I've seen a lot of it right here in this town. I'll never forget one hot Sunday morning game we had here about ten years ago.

"It was in 1902 when the Los Angeles team was playing Oakland. The score was 0 to 0 in the sixth or seventh inning, and you can guess there was some light hitting and some very good baseball to make that kind of a score, or no-score.

"In the sixth inning Eddie Householder, who was playing center-field for Los Angeles, ran to first on what was an infield out, and when he got to the bag, bumped into Truck Eagan, who was playing first for Oakland.

"The bump knocked Truck down, and when he got up he slugged Householder in the left eye and knocked him flat. Eddie jumped up in an instant and floored Eagan with a punch on the neck and when the other players got to first, there was a general mix, but no further damage was done. Eddie was a strong fellow those days and some slugger, believe me.

"Well, the game continued 0 to 0 into the ninth, and in the last half when we were at bat and two men out and the bases empty, it came my turn to go to bat.

"Old Bill Devereaux was pitching for Oakland, and after he had two strikes on me, I happened to get one just where I wanted it and slammed the ball over the fence for a home run. I wish you could have seen Bill. He rushed at me from the pitcher's box as I rounded first base on the circuit, and ran with me all around the bases, calling me almost every name he could think of, merely because I had won a game from his team and off him by hitting a home run in the last of the ninth.

"Them were the good old days," as the poet says, "and there were so many fans in the ground that afternoon as the result of the fight in the morning that you could not count them.

"Speaking about that game makes me think of the men we had on our team. The catchers were Heine Spies, now a contracting carpenter in this city, and Mike Roach, well-known to the old-time fans. The pitchers were McPartland, Oscar Jones, Nick Altrock and Hartwell, for those were the days when we were outlaws.

"Dummy Kihm was on first base, Fred Raymer on second, Russ Hall played short, and I was at third. Charley Atherton was the left-fielder, Householder was in center and Pat Dougherty played right. This was a pretty good team, and we used to have some fine ball."

George Gane and Minor Heir will try to annex the world's record for a mile to pole at the opening of the Minnesota State Fair races in September in Minneapolis.

Yale football candidates will begin practice on September 22.

Sticky Pathfinding.

FLANDERS ELECTRIC WINS BOUT WITH SOUTHERN MUD

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) Aug. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the pathfinding Flanders Electric coupe, which is laying out the route for the national tour of the American Automobile Association from Detroit to the city of New Orleans, the tour known as the "Lakes to the Gulf" tour, reached Memphis, it had covered 973.9 miles of the 1600-mile route, and had before it problems that appeared just as insurmountable as did those of the second week of the journey.

From Mammoth Cave to Memphis, a distance of 400 miles, was pronounced an impossible route, owing to the heavy rains which have prevailed all through the present year, but the pathfinders, being set to a certain task, undertook the journey and as is the case generally, found that the opinions regarding road conditions and the passability of roads were at fault. Many of the opinions were based on the fact that an electric car was laying out the route, but as a matter of fact, the electric took hills, heavy sands, rough washouts and the newly-laid roads with the utmost ease, with one or two exceptions.

Along Muddy Creek bottom, passing along the bank of the creek of that name, the farmers had started to rebuild a levee which had been washed away by the spring freshets, and for a height of six and a half feet had been thrown up the water-soaked earth from the side of the road.

Along the top of this pile of mud the roadway ran, and the pathfinders had to cross to secure the distances for the route maps being prepared by Pathfinder W. O. Westgard. Inch by inch the electric worked its way through, taking eight hours for the seemingly impossible task. This brought over the pathfinders into pitch darkness, and as the map maker cannot work at night and indicate cross roads and landmarks, the party took the tip of some kindly natives and slept in a church on the hard side of hard planks. The inside of the church was in course of construction.

In the journey the pathfinders have reached towns regularly with this one exception. From Mammoth Cave to Nashville is 108 miles and the tourers will stop at Bowling Green, 62.5 miles, for dinner. From Nashville to Sheffield, Ala., is 124 miles and the tourists will stop at Columbia, 42½ miles, for dinner. This will allow a start from Nashville as the pike to Columbia is one of the finest roads on the trip to drive over.

From Sheffield to Memphis, one day's run on the Glidden tour of two years ago will be divided into two days' running this year, the night stop out of Sheffield being at Rodgers Spring, with Corinth, 62.4 miles, as the noon stop. Rodgers Spring is a delightfully located health resort, with a rustic hotel which is a paradise. This point is 98.8 miles from Sheffield.

Delays have been caused in the pathfinding trip by errors in the route as laid down two years ago when the tour went to Dallas, Tex. Through much of this route, there is necessity of corrections and of arranging for stopping places, noon stops and for gasoline and other supplies for the tourists.

Much Activity.

OCEAN SWIM NEXT SUNDAY.

Rough Water Sprint Drawing Many Entries.

L.A.A.C. Aquatics on Tap Friday Night.

Interest in Damp Sport Is Growing Rapidly.

Two big swimming events are on for this coming week. On Friday night the L.A.A.C. will hold its second monthly club swimming tournament, which among many other things, will decide the club championships for 50, 100 and 440 yards. Next Sunday afternoon the Los Angeles Swimming Association will hold the first annual rough-water swimming championship of Southern California over a course of three-quarters of a mile off Ocean Park.

Both of these events, but especially the latter, are of special interest. The meet at the athletic club shows the renewed interest which is being taken in swimming at that institution. There was a time when the athletic club held the lead in swimming, but the interest dwindled until it practically died out a couple of years ago. Then the club appointed a Swimming Committee for the purpose of boosting the sport, and with the donation of the McDonald-Cornell cup for the 440 yards championship, the interest has grown tremendously. In addition to the three-club championship events there will be the usual novelty races, riding the push ball for distance and for time, springboard and high diving, blindfold races and clown stunts.

At the present time the club champion for springboard diving is Wilfiaf H. Barker, and he will defend his title against all comers, Friday night. Harold Harrell is club champion for 440 yards, but will be unable to defend his title owing to the opening of college this week. The McDonald-Cornell cup will go to the winner of the 440.

THE OCEAN SPRINT.

The big rough-water championship is the first thing of its kind in Southern California. A few years ago a race from Venice to Ocean Park was promoted but there were no amateur rules, and no sanction, the competitors being the life guards of the different beaches.

This time the race is on an entirely different basis. It will be sanctioned by the A.A.U., and nobody will be allowed to compete who is not the holder of an A.A.U. card. The course has also been altered. It will be from Fraser's pier to Ocean avenue, and return to the pier, the competitors rounding a buoy anchored off Ocean avenue.

The very pick of the coast swimmers will compete. Walter Pomeroy, who has never been defeated by anyone in the north in a rough-water race, will represent the Olympic Club of San Francisco. He is the only certainty from the north, but there is a good chance of a couple of other well-known swimmers coming south for the race.

According to the dope books the race seems to lie between him and three southern swimmers, Lady Langer, Ben Watlington and Pete Towne. Langer has been cleaning up the best the Coast could offer for several years and claims to be swimming better than ever before. He is training at Redondo, with Cliff Bowes, and the two lads hope to get away with the prizes.

Ben Watlington and Pete Towne will represent the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Watlington is an old-timer at the game. He held the Coast record and the Coast championship several years ago. He has been out of the game for some time, but is choosing this race as his attempt to come back because he likes the rough-water swimming.

Towne is a newcomer in southern swimming circles, but his performances up to date rank him among the best that the north has ever sent down here. He has not had much experience, but has a fine stroke and demonstrated at the last A.A.C. Club meet that he could start from scratch and catch about anybody who happened to be put in front of him.

Towne has been showing great form in practice and will have to be reckoned with in the picking of winners. George McManus, the old war horse from Venice, is another well-known water dog, who will compete. McManus always puts up a good scrap when he swims and the rough water is to his liking.

There are more than thirty entries in now and Les Henry is expecting that the lists will be swelled to fifty before the race starts. There are several prizes and a good chance for everybody. A women's race over a distance of 300 yards, will be held at 2:30, an hour before the men's race. A cup and a gold medal are offered for the first two places in the women's race.

The Negro's Curiosity.

[Evening Post:] Bob Hull, the champion story teller of Savannah, had occasion lately to take a business trip into interior Georgia. He took his golf clubs with him, intending to stop off upon his way back for a match on the famous links at Augusta.

He dropped off the train at his business destination—a small town on a branch road—and, carrying his luggage, climbed into an ancient hack and bade the driver, who was an old negro man, take him to the local hotel.

The negro eyed the queer looking leather bag that his passenger carried with the peculiar-looking sticks in it.

His curiosity got the best of him finally.

"Boss," he said, "please, suh, scuse me—but mout I ax you a question?"

"Go ahead and ask," said Mr. Hull.

"What kind of a lodge is you institutin'?"

The international rifle matches to be held at Camp Perry, O., next summer, promises to be the greatest shooting tournament ever held. Practically every nation of the world has indicated its intention of sending a team to the match. The recent victory of the American team at Buenos Aires and at Stockholm in the Olympic games, has convinced the military authorities of other nations that the marksmen of this country lead the world. One of the mysteries to foreign riflemen is how the American gunners have been able to use peep sights in rapid firing.

To Compete in the Ocean Swim

From Venice to Ocean Park, which is to be held next Sunday. The event will be the first of its kind ever held here.

Another star golfer in the person of Humphrey Nevill Howard Woodcock (imagine the meanness of the Chicago magazine that could call him H.M.H. Woodstock—and this is fame!) will grace the Del Monte meeting which begins September 7 and closes September 21.

This will make the sixth member of the San Gabriel Country Club to take part, and he will probably go up in Conde Jones's car on the 5th. E. H. Wilkes, A. T. Jergens, P. A. Coon and Robert Tatum are all going.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Keller will go up on the golfers' train on the night of September 4, when most of the Los Angeles Country Club men go.

Morris Phillips of Redlands, whose fame as a long driver precedes him wherever he goes, should find the Del Monte course as re-arranged exactly suited to his style of play. It is longer altogether than the old course and there is positively no excuse for him not showing off what he can do.

There has been a feud of the Montague and Capulet order between the houses of Braly and Jevne during the last few weeks—ever since Jack Jevne defeated Prince Arthur in that fateful match about two weeks ago.

On Wednesday afternoon the brothers-in-law met once again with grim battle in their eyes—and once more the noble Prince fell in deadly combat by 9 down. Nine down. It was an insult that could only be wiped out—well at Annandale next morning. So the Prince hurled forth his challenge.

'Twas Thursday. And now there is joy and jubilation in the house of Jevne. The redoubtable Jack once again vanquished the enemy, this time by 2 up. How well we can picture his wicked laugh as he peered maliciously at his fallen foe at the sixteenth.

Campbell White has been in Los Angeles again this week and played over the Country Club links. He has been at Riverside looking after "that ranch business, you know," and if he makes a poor showing at Del Monte you will know he has been having a worrying time.

There are to be some very interesting changes on the San Gabriel links and work has already commenced. You will recall the fourteenth, where poor Hugo Johnstone met his doom in his team match with Woodcock. Too long for the short player and too short for the long, it has long been felt that a change for the better was not impossible.

The short player always got in the wash and the long player invariably over-drove the green, so a new green is now to be built and one or two other little improvements will be introduced.

The thirteenth—the long sandy hole—is also to have a new green and other transformations, while both the first and third greens will be changed.

The work is being hastened on so that everything will be ready before the fall rains, and the course should be as near perfection as this world offers for the winter play.

The Del Monte team matches between North and South, for both men and women, promise to be very exciting, and really the cup put up for the women's event taking place during the week of the 15th to the 21st, while the men's championship tournament is on, is one of the handsomest of its kind. There are disheartening rumors to the effect that Mrs. Frank Griffith may be unable to go to Del Monte after all, in which case the Los Angeles women players will find it hard to secure a better captain.

The Lengthening List.

H. C. Dutton of Santa Barbara, H. H. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Stephens, the Rev. W. H. Cornett of Pasadena, Maj. Miner—just as though any golf tournament could take place without him—Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Tisdale of Riverside, are all going to the Del Monte golf meeting.

A special train will leave on September 4, with a large contingent of golfers from the Los Angeles Country Club; E. Conde Jones and the other San Gabriel Country Club men go up on the 5th, the Rev. Cornett and Dr. Charles A. Miner and other Annandalers also go on the 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Eliot are already established in a cottage at Carmel-by-the-Sea and give the links daily attention. Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Armstrong are likewise on the scene.

Mrs. Hugh L. MacNeil and Dr. and Mrs. Bertrand Smith went up in Mrs. MacNeil's Locomobile last week, but whether they intend staying over the tournament is another matter. Mrs. MacNeil plays golf, but I fear she is but a dilettante and I rather imagine nine holes sees her enthusiasm satisfied as a rule. But she does wear such becoming golf clothes—I recall a corduroy skirt that aroused keen envy at Annandale in the spring—and an example of this sort of perfection could do nothing but good.

H. G. Pattee of Riverside is still cogitating and one pictures him wistfully picking petals off a flower, "shall I? Shan't I?" which of course isn't really grammar but who cares. Still since he did the fourteenth hole at the Victoria Club in one last week—yes, really—he naturally begins to feel that golf is, after all, his great vocation and I feel sure the Del Monte meeting will see him yet. Besides that black and gold striped blazer was so very fetching, and I am awaiting an opportunity of christening him Chicken Pattee, when he wins the qualifying round.

Eddie Hasha of Dallas, Tex., who won the ten-mile race for professional riders at the tenth annual federation of American Motorcyclists' meet at Columbus, is anxious to meet anybody who thinks he can beat the record established by Hasha—6.40.

The English Football Association, which has charge of the soccer game in the British Isles, has decided that an extra thirty-minute half must be played in future finals for the English cup, if the matches are drawn at full time.

Hampden Park, Glasgow, has a soccer field that will accommodate 150,000 spectators, and which is a fine tribute to the great kicking style of football.

HOW JACK M'CARTHY TREATED HIS ARM.

"Looking at Jack McCarthy on the field today," said Umpire Casey, "makes me think that he was fired from an Eastern League team eleven years ago because his throwing arm was too strong. Can you beat that?

"He sure was a bear to throw from the outfield to the plate and was so proud of his arm that he got all swelled up about it. The boys used to brag about it in the clubhouse and one day after the game Jack put his arm up against the wall and said that it was so strong that he could hold five men on it.

"He dared them to hang on it and they did, but just then the manager came in the door and taking in the situation at a glance, bawled Jack out before the crowd.

"Here, you, your arm is too strong for this league and you are fired from this team.

"Guess he must have been joking for he hired Jack again the next day."

"This makes me think of another yarn just as good that I once heard about Jack.

"He was playing the outfield for Denver and threw so much that he lost his arm. The other boys on the team framed up something on him and putting a doctor in the town wise, sent Jack to the physician's office. The doctor looked him over very carefully and very solemnly informed Jack that he could get that arm back into place without much effort but that his instructions would have to be followed.

"Accordingly he gave Jack about two dozen powders and told him that he had to take one before breakfast and one after and several during the day and if he did this faithfully his arm would come back all right again in several weeks.

"Just imagine some cheap powder bringing a ball player's arm back! Jack took the powders all right and did not get onto the joke for a week when some of the boys let it out. Then the gang had the big laugh on him."

Chicago won the United States hurling championship at Chicago recently by defeating the Detroit fifteen by a score of 10 to 5. The game was witnessed by 12,000 persons.

Ran Van Orman has been selected as one of the assistant coaches of the Cornell football team next fall.

"CONLEY COVERED WITH GREASE?"

"They had Conley covered with grease after the tenth round," said Harry Thomas after the fight in his dressing-rooms, "so, how could you expect me to do anything with him, then?"

In Conley's room there was a wild argument going on as to whether it was the rosin on Thomas's gloves or the shoe strings on his wrists that cut Conley to ribbons.

"Shut up; its all over, ain't it?" said Conley, and then he sank back on the bench. Battered and bruised he was willing to stop up all the attempted excuses and take his beating.

THOMAS BEATS FRANKIE.

Round 20. They rush to a clinch. Harry lands right to the ear and they clinch. Both land body blows. Harry lands left and right to the face, another left and right to the face and they clinch. Both land lefts to the face and clinch again. Thomas lands a left to the face. Another left and right swing to the face and a right to the body by Thomas. Thomas lands right uppercut to the chin and they clinch. Harry scores a left to the jaw and a right to the body. Frankie lands a hard right to the body. Frankie rushes Harry to the ropes and they slug hard. Thomas wins.

AZUSA, Aug. 17.—The deer season has opened well in the San Gabriel Canyon. Game is plentiful and so are the hunters. Among the Azusa men who brought down fine bucks on the morning of the 15th were John Remaley, Joe Doris and Roger Dalton.

WARREN VANCE BUSY BEE.

Warren Vance, of the Vance-Canavan Motor Company, is in Buffalo, Wyo., negotiating for the sale of his 7000-acre cattle and sheep ranch. He expects to close a deal for the property before returning to Los Angeles. In a letter to his partner, J. J. Canavan, he says that it is his intention to visit the Case, Cartercar and Knox automobile factories, and it will probably be several weeks before he returns to the West.

"FRANNIE" Baer and Thod Jones, the two Occidental boys who went up north in June to spend the summer with Sir Wilfred Grenfell in Labrador, have been having some mighty fine times, if their letters are to be believed, and their experiences read like the "Rollo" books we used to read at the tender age of seven.

The trip alone to Labrador was quite an experience, but they had some real times there after they arrived that were far more interesting than spending the summer in Southern California, even if the climate in Labrador is not all that it might be.

CITY BOYS HAVE BIG TIME IN LABRADOR.

"Frannie" Baer and "Tad" Jones, Who Have Just Finished an Outing With Sir Wilfred Grenfell in the Northern Wilds, Have Exciting Tales to Tell—Frannie Has Pet White Seal.

BY WILLIAM HENRY.

"FRANNIE" Baer and Thod Jones, the two Occidental boys who went up north in June to spend the summer with Sir Wilfred Grenfell in Labrador, have been having some good times, if their letters are to be believed, and their experiences with the "huskies" and "dogies" books we used at the border age of seven.

The trip down to Labrador was not all experience, but they had fun all along there after they arrived and were far more interesting than reading the summer in Southern California, even if the climate in Labrador is not all that it might be. They left Boston on Sunday, June 2, after spending the last evening seeing the moving picture show and the last signs of civilization. While at one of the theaters they saw a biograph film showing some pictures of Foothill scenes pictured in Pasadena and they nearly decided their passage to Halifax was one of the sudden spasm of homesickness.

They went to dinner from Boston harbor, arriving there about 6:30 o'clock, and the morning of the next day the first took a train from Halifax to Sydney. From Sydney to Port au Basque the boys had a ride of sixty-five miles on the Grand Narrows. Another ride on the train took them to Port aux Basques, where they were taken in the good ship "Prospero" to St. Anthony, the metropolis of the NORTHERN PEOPLE.

Here Baldwin, Baer and Jones left the boat and went to the home of a fisherman and got their first insight into the life of the people along the coast. Many of these were apparently very poor, all of them had to work hard and long at the hardest of labor. The little girl of the house did all the work around the place and had to undergo all kinds of hardships.

After they sailed up the bay to St. Anthony, which is the home of Dr. Grenfell. They arrived in an unearthly hour of the morning and received a welcome from the town band, which was there to meet them. They went up the town to Battle Harbor, where they were to stay for a few days, but not to disturb the household as peacefully as possible. Battle Harbor, the scene of the famous Battle Harbor Hospital, is a little village built up around the hospital founded by Dr. Grenfell. The harbor, almost completely landlocked and even the most adventurous failed to do more than dip the surface of the water in it.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

After their arrival there the boys were from the north and south and from off from outside world for some time. The only whales, harvest, drove in and from that time on in the direction of clear blue water of Davis.

Soon after the life of a fisherman proved a job as deckhand on this, a little schooner that was to the hospital at Battle Harbor. Finding that he was not on the boat, he went to work for his board and other delicacies and was transferred to the pilothouse of the steamer. Here he got a job as cook on the Strathcona, the steamer of Dr. Grenfell. At Battle Harbor the boys met Dr. Grenfell, who held a reception for them.

HOSPITAL WORK.

Here they were put to work at the hospital, Baer being put in charge of the dispensary and Jones being assigned to the carpenter shop. Baer was also given charge of the boys' dormitory, where he had about fifteen boys under his charge. Jones was put in charge of the carpenter shop, where he had about fifteen years old, and he fell in with Baer and he, by reason of his heart, was a favorite with the younger boys. He was the youngest's favorite of the kind and Frannie's mouth from that time on was never saw the gum that he had to go without at meal times. Jones says it will be a big loss when he has to give up the habit, but it is a sick one, says Frannie.

STIRRING NARRATIVE OF OCEAN TO OCEAN JOURNEY.

the Los Angeles Times and the secretary of the divisions formed in each city has been authorized to write a report of the doings of his division and these reports will be printed in the Los Angeles Times.

Now is the time to win this great fight. The men of Indiana are in the van. They have captured the honors. The men of Ohio plan to give them a good run for first place. While they are fighting for State honors the good roads boosters all over the country must make a united effort to win for a transcontinental route.

This gives to Indiana the honors which were never taken from her. The extra fifty members were added as a matter of precaution, and it was well that this was done, as Ohio might have gathered the honors unto herself during the campaign which followed in the Buckeye State.

At the Indiana-Ohio line The Times organizers were met by Archie Huston and Jesse Taylor and W. Marker, three of the best road boosters in the Buckeye State. These men, with the aid of W. Matthews, undertook to pilot The Times car entirely across the great State and though their task was a big one they succeeded and remained with the organizers until Wheeling, W. V., was reached.

The organization of Ohio proved novel. Before The Times car entered the State the men at the helm had made the task easy. They had secured enough pledges to make certain the total of 50,000 members for the Buckeye State. Then with a bond issue of $50,000 as an incentive the crew of The Times car was given a great reception and at Cambridge, the last town to be organized, the work was cinched and clinched by telling arguments and by men who prophesied that we shall have a national highway within five years.

The work at Columbus, O., proved especially interesting. The organizers were shown the city in the right way. Their headquarters were at the Automobile Club. The Ohio Good Roads Association opened its doors to The Times men and the stay in the city proved especially valuable, as a plan of campaign was outlined for the remaining States and some of the most prominent good roads workers were enlisted in the cause of a national highway which shall send the great boulevard directly through the most prosperous section of the entire United States.

One of the pleasing facts noted in Ohio is the few grade crossings which remain. Every effort is being put forth to make touring enjoyable. As a result the ban has been placed on grade crossings and they are being removed as fast as possible. We went over many viaducts and it was not as necessary to keep a sharp lookout for trains as it had been in other States.

PERILS NEAR.

Though perils were near us and death stalked in our midst, not a member of the party was injured in the slightest. Twenty-seven poor victims lost their lives in a tempest and tornado that swept through the Middle West, but the crew of The Times car escaped. Four people who were touring in an automobile across the continent with us, lost their lives when an express train struck their automobile, killing each instantly.

The Times car was sent over that crossing. How thankful each man on that car should be for the escape from death on the hill overlooking the spot where Col. McCulloch made his famous leap when pursued by the Indians long ago. We were about to take a picture of the place when the brakes gave out and our car started to rush backward. Rare presence of mind saved us and the machine hung on the brink of the precipice but we were not harmed. The thought then came to us.

"A thousand shall fall at thy side, and 10,000 at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee."

The heat was intense at Wheeling. We were greeted there by many business men. The newspapers were more than kind to us. The project was given a great boost and the work of organization was taken up in earnest by the leading men of West Virginia. The work in the South was started right. The roads there are not good. They will be better. With some of the biggest men in the country boosting for the highway it is certain to be built.

At this point Judge Lowe was forced to return. It was with great sorrow that we saw the great man go back to his home in Kansas City, but the work was almost accomplished. It was all over but the shouting and why need Judge Lowe remain? He is not a man who seeks honor. It was thrust upon him, however, and he accepted the plaudits gracefully. He deserved all that was said about him. He went back home to work harder for the great movement.

IN POLICE COURT.

"Maryland My Maryland." This was the song with which The Times car was greeted into Baltimore, Md. It seemed fitting that this song should be played by the band. It seemed more fitting also that the theme of a national highway should be told to the great men of a great State, each one of whom was ready to listen and help.

There in the city of Baltimore, only forty miles from Washington, we found thousands eager to listen to the story of the trip across the continent. There was only one man who was not anxious. He was a patrolman who arrested us for not carrying a number. We took the fat policeman into the car and carried him to the police station. There we were treated to a novelty. Instead of listening to the story of our heinous crime the police justice asked about the trip and drank in the tale of the cross-continental run and then refused to impose a fine of any kind. Instead, he instructed the patrolman to see that we were given the right kind of a number and were told just how to avoid trouble.

Our run to Washington was one of the remarkable trips of the tour. One of the first men to meet us in the great and beautiful city, where people do not vote, was Congressman Borland of Missouri. He had heard the good roads slogan sounded in his State. The man from the houn' dog country was more than anxious to help. So anxious was he that he waited at the Hotel Raleigh until we arrived in Washington. Then he outlined a plan whereby it became easy for us to meet the great man of this great nation.

Moving pictures were taken of The Times car as the old battleship was driven up the main streets of Washington. Then, as Senators and Congressmen crowded about the car, the moving-picture machine was put into action and Senator Root was one of the first men to be snapped as he climbed into the car. Here we received a great ovation. It proved the climax of a trip which was marked with triumphs. We found the well known legislators ready to listen to our good roads story.

NEAR FINISH.

Early in the morning we started from Washington with C. Francis Jenkins as our pilot. He took us far out on the road to Wilmington. We reached the Delaware boundary line with the motor chugging merrily and with every man of the crew looking forward to the finish of the great ocean-to-ocean trip.

We reached Philadelphia at noon of the last day of our tour. We saw the statue of William Penn and realized that big things were ahead of us. We must make a finish that would be in keeping with the other successes of the tour. We were worried until we reached Newark, N. J., and there we received a long wire from George W. Wilder, one of the big men of the East and the West, and he settled matters for us. The reception he arranged was unique and was in keeping with the other triumphs of the tour.

We were piloted to the ferry and then across the water to New York, where we mingled with a throng of autoists. To say the reception in New York was great is putting it mildly. We reached the metropolis late in the afternoon, but not too late to be able to drive down to the shores of the Atlantic Ocean where the wheels of the old car were dipped in the brine. Thousands crowded around the car. So many people took part in that demonstration that we were asked to repeat the trip on the following day and we agreed to postpone the bottle of water ceremony until Tuesday.

THOUSANDS CHEER.

Then while other thousands watched us we sent the old car once more into the Atlantic Ocean and the waters of the Pacific were mingled with those of the Atlantic and for the first time in the history, at least of the ocean-to-ocean highway movement, water carried across the continent in an automobile was poured into the Atlantic and the two great bodies of water were joined before the Panama Canal was finished. The sentiment showed by the throngs proved the value of the undertaking. A vast throng of holiday seekers were enlisted in a movement which has caught the nation in a whirlwind of enthusiasm.

The ocean-to-ocean highway will be built. The project is greater than any man. Yet to the Los Angeles Times must be given the honor of making the ocean-to-ocean trip possible. There are those who would build a monument to the editor of The Times. The building of the national highway will be the greatest monument that can be built to any man in this day and age.

This highway will be built. You ask me how I know. This is the answer: Col. Potter, national organizer for the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, succeeded in enlisting 178 Congressmen and twenty-eight Senators in the States traversed by The Times car. These men will vote at the next session of Congress to pass a bill which shall read that the government shall pay half the cost of a national highway from Los Angeles to New York and each State through which the highway passes shall pay the other half. This will mean an appropriation for a turnpike from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and this bill is possible because the great tour has been such a signal success.

FREIGHT TO LOS ANGELES EXTRA

California Motor Company, Tenth and Hope Sts., Los Angeles

FIELD PARAGRAPHS, SEVENTH REGIMENT

Motts Blair of Co. A, student athletic manager of the University of Southern California, will be in the pink of condition when he returns from the maneuvers.

The popular boy has been on the wood pile, making little ones out of big ones, under the direction of Mistah Shaw, the company's cook, several times already, and, from appearances, the college boy is slated for the hard-service act several times yet before he pays the penalty inflicted by his company commander for running a two-cylinder poker game in his tent and keeping the boys of the battalion out after the silencing call, "Taps," had sounded.

Sergt. Ewald Selph of Co. B, well known as one of the greatest fullbacks U.S.C. ever had, is a real soldier. The rising young attorney from Los Angeles is always on hand when there is hard work to be done, and is usually picked for the hardest of the hard graft. His size gives cause for the remark that he must be a truckman or the driver of a brewery wagon in civil life, by the regulars, when he is seen deliberately packing a field chest off on his broad back and setting an example for his men.

They tell a good one on Sergt. Phil Couterier of Co. F.

This big lad of Southern California football fame is one of the most popular enlisted men in the regiment, and is known to be a good soldier, but he has one failing—a desire to keep himself looking like a "fusser" on a Sunday afternoon.

It is strange that he ever consented to be mussed in a football game, but he did, and was a star on the line in the great game with the Navy last Christmas Day.

It happens that the road from Salinas to the camp, five miles out, is a bit dusty, and the boy carried a lot of dust with him. The camp was made in a hurry and the men were put to pitching the officers' tents.

In the thick of battle Phil disappeared, and a search was instituted. He was found in his tent, primping. As soon as his locks were combed back into place, and his shirt changed, he went into the tent-pitching racket with a will and established a record for the game which will stand for a long time.

"The first duty of a good soldier is to keep clean, and that was what I was doing, and I made up for lost time," said the sergeant, later.

Sergt. Edward Baldridge of Co. C, one of the strongest Vernon rooters of the regiment, solicited the names of a half-hundred Vernon rooters of the other companies of the command to a personal letter to Happy Hogan, last night, and now the faithful ones are awaiting a reply from the Vernon chief.

"Bud" Rose, the biggest private in the regiment, has lost ten pounds since leaving Los Angeles, and will lose more if he keeps up the pace he is now following. Two days ago the boys were out on the roads for a long hike and the big fellow stayed with the game till the finish. It was no easy matter to carry his 238 pounds of potato chips over the rough roads at the regulation pace, and it must be remembered that "Bud" has not walked as far as the corner grocery for over two years, as he has the famous "Night Hawk" Chalmers "40," but it was the spirit of the Seventh that kept him in the ranks, even after he was "all in."

Dr. Louis Felzenthal, who in the service is a mounted scout for Co. A, is taking on one of those attractive tans like the boys bring back from Catalina every year. The doctor is a clever rider and has one of the best, if not the best, horse in the regiment. He stands a lot of kidding from his comrades, but is the real goods in the scouting line. He brings in the battles.

If Sergt. Tracey of Co. F, were to go back to his desk at the Los Angeles Investment Company with the red growth he now has the office force would turn in a fire alarm.

Corp. Frank Holmes of Co. A, well known in Southern California semi-professional baseball circles, is a poor judge of apples. The company cook was preparing mess, which consisted chiefly of onions, potatoes and bacon. Rushing up, Holmes mistook the onions for apples and spread the report through the camp that Co. A was to have baked apples for dinner.

Sergt. Herbert Simon is standing the hard work of the maneuvers in elegant style. It was thought that the local lad would not be able to stand the strain of the long marches and work of making and unmaking camp, having been out of the hospital for only a month, after having been operated upon for hernia, but he is in the game every minute and his company is keeping pace with any in the regiment.

COLD-BLOODED M'GRAW.

Baseball a Business Proposition With Him—Sentiment Is Not Allowed to Influence Him.

McGraw looks upon baseball in a cold, shrewd and crafty manner. It is purely a business proposition with him, and so he informs his players. Unlike most old players, McGraw does not cherish feelings of sympathy for the veterans in his heart. He knows that to be successful a ball team must win and that it cannot win by playing favorites or by sticking to men who have seen their best days. McGraw had no better friends on the New York team than Al Bridwell and Arthur Devlin. Some sentimental managers would have kept them on the Giant pay roll after they were through their usefulness, just for the sake of good friendship and old times and what they had done for the team in years past. But McGraw never thought of any such thing. The moment he saw that Brid's legs were going bad and that Devlin was slowing up, he began to plan to fill their places and to get them out of his line-up. Sympathy and sentiment cut absolutely no figure with him. McGraw makes no bones about this attitude. He does not four-flush along with an old friend and then alibi the necessity of trading him off onto President Brush. He tells his men frankly that he will treat them liberally and generously so long as they are winning games and delivering the goods for him, but that then he will be through with them. They know this, respect his attitude and go out and play their heads off every day, knowing they will continue to draw high salaries as long as they make good and not an instant longer. McGraw is a separate entity from his team. He does not mingle freely with his players off the field and never becomes familiar with them. He is like an army officer, who is supreme over the rank and file, but does not associate with them off the parade ground. McGraw is the general and his players are the subordinates. He has full and absolute control and exercises it without fear or favor. He has been the most successful of all managers in either league in getting championship ball playing out of a team composed of ordinary players, some of them ragged in their defensive work and white bone buttons as a stylish contrast. Lace collar and cuffs give a charming relief and freshness.

In the black afternoon gown of mousseline de soie and satin the pleated idea is beautifully exploited. Over a bodice of heavy lace and white chiffon cloth there is a pleated drapery of black mousseline. A satin vest and underskirt are trimmed with buttons in front. Below the satin girdle is a long tunic, slashed in front, combining pleated mousseline with satin in an unusually graceful way. A deep band at the bottom is finished with a puffing of pleated material. The whole effect is soft, full yet slender, and stands as a lovely example of a new mode.

Taffeta is accordion pleated to form the little afternoon dress that is not too ornate for street wear. The bodice has pleats on each side of the fronts, which are plain bands under the shadow lace fichu. This is bound with silk and trimmed with tiny buttons.

Below the girdle is a pointed apron tunic that reminds us of the Puritan maids in their attractive frocks of long ago.

Striped voile in black and white is the important part of the last dress in our collection. There is a front shield of black mousseline embroidered with white silk. Sleeves are elbow length, the stripes running horizontally. There is a wide girdle of black satin. From this the tunic of voile hangs in decided fullness. Deep pleats are laid at the waist line, and the overskirt is draped up, showing a white satin skirt with wide black velvet folds. These are four in number, by the way; the width is graduated, as the bands are placed above the hem, the widest one at the bottom.

The incorporation of pleatings with other material gives a bright prospect to women who would combine practicality with style by giving a new touch to an old gown. Pleatings are the thing in the world of fashion. If possible, let the pleated gown play a prominent part in your wardrobe.

Any material can be pleated. Makers of silks have given a charming suppleness to their fabrics that will insure easy pleating, while mousselines de soie, chiffons, voiles, grenadines and mulls are, from their characteristic filminess, adapted to the pleating that is playing an important part in the great play of dress.

It would be disappointing in this interesting story not to find a coatee in the new pleated form—and here it is. The sleeves have a cord through the center which is quite prominent in the finished form. Over the bodice is a soft fichu of shadow lace. The peplum is pleated, its fullness being held in by a puffing of silk. This chiffon coat shows the brilliant color of the silk beneath. Around the silk skirt is a pleating, which gives a deep band of soft fabric. Cords are again used on the edges. Here is an excellent way to change entirely the old silk or satin dress.

Flowered mull is shown in accordion pleats on the skirt that has a circular yoke to give slenderness at the hips. A puffed band heads the pleated skirt. The silk underdress brings out the daintiness of the bouquets scattered on the mull. A shirred lace chemisette is a contrasting note in the draped bodice.

Voile is pleated in the figured Russian blouse worn with the soft taffeta skirt. There is a taffeta hem on the bottom of the blouse and a straight strip of silk defines the front fastening, with

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

CONCERNING COVERS AND LIDS.

THE savory odors and steams of the kitchen play a distinguished part in stories of domestic life. Readers of Dickens will at once recall the method of the landlord in "The Old Curiosity Shop" who, hearing the arrival of a belated party of travelers upon a stormy night, rushed into the kitchen and took the cover from the pot in which game, oysters, and divers other toothsome ingredients enumerated with watering mouth by the host were "all cooking together in one delicious gravy." This with a final smack of the appreciative lips.

He gained his end, for the first remark of the chilled and dismalled wayfarers, who entered smiling despite discomfort, was, "What a good smell!"

Up to the beginning of the last century the goodly smell from the kitchen was allowed to wander freely and unctuously through the dwelling. As lately as 1870 I read a sharp criticism in an English cook book of American forms of roasting:

"Which is, in fact, not roasting at all, but baking. Roasting is not done in the oven, but in the open air upon a spit or, as it is sometimes called, a 'jack.'"

New System of Cookery.

I think it was early in the 60s that Edward Atkinson introduced a new system of cookery that should retain juices and flavoring by preparing hot foods for the table in covered "cookers." Working along in the same lines we have dozens of fireless cookers contending for precedence in favor of intelligent and frugal housemothers.

With the advance of scientific discovery the most stupid of cooks cannot fail, if she reads the newspapers, to comprehend that the fragrance which titillates the nostrils and stimulates the salivary glands of prospective eaters is made up of particles of the expressed essence of the substance under fire. If a piece of meat were weighed before and then after it is cooked, it would be seen that it has lost weight in the process. Some of the loss has gone into the gravy. As much, if not more, is distributed through the air. This last is, of course, a dead one.

She is the wisest cook who has a cover or a lid for every utensil designed for cooking over an open fire or upon the range or in the oven. If I insist upon the use of the covered roaster again and again in writing recipes, it is because a deep sense of the importance of the method is bound upon my mind. Meats roasted [or, if our English critics be heeded, baked] under cover, are more tender, more nutritious and more palatable than those committed to the oven with no such protection and conserver.

Use Tightly Fitting Cover.

True, the oven door is closed—shut all the time the roast is inside. But the rising steam, freighted with savory particles, has more room in which to disperse the essence than when a tightly fitting cover retains and at once returns them to the meat.

Compare the joint or fowl cooked in the covered roaster with one laid in the dripping pan, with nothing to intercept the vapors until they settle upon the roof and sides of the oven, and note at once the absence of the thick brown crust which encases food baked in the usual way. The outer covering is delicately colored, but like a soft skin bound about the meat, keeping in the juices but yielding readily to the carver's knife and as eatable as the flesh it encases.

It is not one person in twenty who carves for the outside slice of a roast. Unless it be asked for particularly the carver cuts it off and lays it aside upon the platter. Offense than not he continues to cut into the meat until the gravy follows the knife. The outer slices are the second best. Whereas, if the cover had held the juices at an even temperature and as the heat drew them toward the surface shed them back as the clouds return the moisture drawn by the sun from the teeming earth, every flesh of the meat is palatable. There are no desiccated "outside cuts."

In Cooking Pot Roast.

So much for the advantage of the cover in roasting within the oven. A close lid should be clamped down over the pot roast and kept there except when it is lifted quickly to allow the cook to turn over the meat in the pot and to make sure there is no danger of burning or adhesion to the bottom and side.

The variest tyro in culinary matters does not need to be reminded how much more rapidly liquids come to the bubbling boil when the lid is on the saucepan than in an open vessel. The same in which the latter may be used to equal purpose are so rare as to be hardly worth our notice. In picking it is imperative that the kettle should remain tightly covered after the vinegar is added or the best part of the flavor will escape. The same is true when wine or brandy is used in the preparation of cooked foods.

The most serious branch of our subject has to do with the protection of foods of all kinds cold, or in cooling, against the "floating matter in the air," analyzed by the prince of modern scientists, Tyndale, and branded as perilous to human health and life. The function of the cover is to keep in that which is good. That of the lid is to exclude that which is evil.

Heat Keeps Bacteria at Bay.

Heat keeps at bay the swarms of malevolent bacteria invisible to the naked eye but present under the microscope in numbers that defy calculation. With the cooling of food they rally for the onslaught. The prevailing faith in the conserving powers of the refrigerator is based upon a half truth. Bacteria do not multiply when the object to be preserved is set upon or in the ice. The cold makes them torpid. We all know that foods which have been kept in cold storage spoil more quickly when they are removed to the outer air than if they had never been kept in the lower temperature. The evil germs awaken to more vigorous life for the temporary inaction.

Your merchant warns you as you buy from wagon or counter that "the fish have been in the ice and must be put directly in the refrigerator when you get them home or they will spoil—sure!" He never troubles his brain with explanations of the reason for haste. It is your business as a wise twentieth century householder and keeper to know why and to guard against the certain danger.

Real Meaning of Decomposition.

You let your "leftovers" of flesh, fowl, and fish, of puddings, pies, and jellies, of vegetables and biscuits, muffins, etc. get dead cold before putting them into the refrigerator, as is but right and proper. But said invisible hordes of depredators whose favorite haunts are composite garbage cans, and kitchens?

While they are in cooling who thinks of covering them? Who reflects upon the tempting repast she is offering to the afore-

By the time the provisions are cold enough to be set in the cold closet or larder they are covered with the germs of incipient decomposition, which means nothing to life rather than decaying, according to the scientific interpretation put upon it.

One substance is a joy to the unseen and insatiable raiders. Gelatin is a most approved medium of "culture." Bacteria burrow and breed in it with wicked glee that makes "culture" an easy task in the microscopics. One may fancy the hot haste with which they settle upon the mold of jelly—wine, aspic, blanc mange, or snow pudding—set in the window to "firm" by the maker, who is careful to fit screens in every door and window to keep safe flies that everybody is learning now bring filth and disease into the home.

A pot of honey left in the outer air would not attract flies as soon and in such numbers as the mold or bowl of amber or snow while jelly wooes to itself. By the time the uncovered delicacy is firm enough to turn out it is heavily "charged" with organisms that will awaken in good trim and in due time when deep and warm in the human stomach. As we have seen, burial in ice does not kill them.

Experiment in Melting Ice.

Years ago I had an illustration of this scientific truth in experiments made upon melted ice we suspected to have been taken from a tainted pond. The ice was melted slowly under glass, that no new dampness might get at it. Then the microscope was set over the water. It was full of wriggling things, rejoicing in their freedom from the temporary bondage of cold.

Some one to whom I talked the other day upon this matter of covering foods remarked philosophically:

"You leave out of sight the prominent fact that there are benevolent as well as malevolent bacteria, and that we owe what measure of health we enjoy largely to their continual fight with and repeated victories over our enemies. Why not let them fight it out and abide by the result?"

I answered then what I say now, that we cannot depend with any degree of certainty upon being always in the perfect physical condition that makes probable, much less sure, the victory of the benignant germs. Moreover, why oblige our allies in the fight for health to do double duty?

Coming down to things more commonplace, it is good housekeeping to keep all of all kinds covered instead of exposing them to the action of the air and the germs of unclean influences that it may carry. Apart from the fear, inseparable from the ever present in it, there is no denying the fact that living organisms and [illegible] who covers.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Column, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. Marion Harland.

"SOME time ago I saw in the Helping hand a request for tomato wine. I inclose, with pleasure, directions for making it.

"Would some one be good enough to tell me now to make tomato butter? Also the best way of removing vaseline from bed linen? I have washed mine well, but the stains are still there.

"TOMATO WINE—Press the juice from clean ripe tomatoes after peeling them, using for the purpose a cheese press and cloth. Add no water to the liquid, and allow to each gallon four pounds of sugar. Wait until fermentation begins before mixing in the sugar. Stir all well and put the wine into a keg or barrel, covering the bunghole with nothing to exclude insects. Leave it thus for two months or more, then draw off into bottles carefully, making sure you do not disturb the sediment.

"Mrs. F. S. T."

The request for a recipe for making tomato butter is referred. I have never seen or heard of the product. Thank you for tomato wine formula.

If the vaseline were pure I cannot see why the stain did not wash out readily. The oily part must have yielded to soap and water. Therefore treat the stain as you would any other. Rub into it all the lemon juice it will take up, and into this work a teaspoonful of salt to the juice of each lemon. Next, lay it in the hottest sunlight you can find and leave it there all day, wetting hourly with lemon juice. At night soak in water made sour with cream of tartar. Rinse in the morning. The linen should be white after this process. If not, repeat. It will surely do the work in time.

Recipe for Quince Marmalade.

"I wish more of the members of the Helping Hand would give their good ideas and recipes more frequently to you for publication for the benefit of those of us who are always willing and glad to learn from the experience of others. Almost every housekeeper knows at least some one thing that might be useful to her neighbor.

"Mrs. O."

As if in direct reply to the eminently sensible suggestion, there have come to us a dozen or more practical hints and formulas from some of our most capable housemothers. I please myself and edify readers by inserting a few specimen articles:

"The season for putting up that excellent and wholesome fruit, the quince, is at hand. Here is a recipe for a conserve that everybody likes:

"QUINCE MARMALADE—Pare, quarter, and core firm, ripe quinces and cut into small pieces. Weigh them and allow an equal quantity of sugar. Put the fruit into a porcelain lined kettle with barely enough water to cover it. Cook slowly until the fruit is tender and [illegible]. Stir frequently. Take out the fruit with a perforated skimmer and spread upon dishes. Now add the sugar to the water in which the fruit was boiled. Bring to a fast boil and remove the scum. Drop in the quinces. Boil steadily fifteen minutes after the bubble has fairly begun; remove from the fire and put into small jars or jelly glasses that have been rolled in hot water to prevent breaking.

"I cut the quinces into small bits of uniform size and put on in tumblers, as the syrup makes a firm jelly about the fruit. When you wish to use it, dip the tumbler into hot water, and the contents will turn out in a solid mass.

"Quinces that are too small and speckled to be made into preserves in the usual way may be utilized as marmalade and are nice.

Mrs. MAMT MC."

Quince marmalade, as our correspondent remarks, is both delicious and wholesome. It has likewise slightly medicinal qualities, soothing sore throats and allaying coughs. The recipe before us is easy to make and promises much in the way of palatableness. The jellied juices encasing the crimson cubes are flavorous and pleasing to the eye when served with the nursery supper.

Hint for Home Nurse.

"May I step in with one or more hints to mothers and elder sisters to whom home nursing is committed?

"A FEATHER BED MATTRESS.—Certain old persons, when ill, cannot be induced to part with their beloved and indispensable (?) feather beds. Years of experience as a nurse have taught me the solution of the problem thus presented to those in charge of the protesting parties.

"Needed: two or three dozen stout safety pins and a strong muslin sheet—preferably unbleached and not too large.

"Make up the feather bed carefully, shoving plenty of feathers toward the top which is to lie at the bedhead. Beginning at one corner, pin the strong sheet to the mattress snugly, setting the safety pins only a few inches apart. One end and side finished, pin the other end and side in the same way, drawing the strong sheet tightly over the feathers. Now, make up the bed in the usual way, and you will be surprised at its firmness and at the time it will stay in place and keep its shape.

"If the patient be helplessly bedridden, you may follow the same plan by arranging one-half of the bed at a time, and drawing the sheets tightly in a roll toward the middle of the bed before shifting the invalid. A certain degree of skill is required of course in 'rolling the patient over' and in adjusting the rubber sheet, etc., since a feather bed put to hospital use must be well protected in order to be sanitary.

"Better indulge an elderly patient's whims when they are not actually harmful than excite him into feverish irritability by opposition. L. H. T."

I take it for granted that few housewives who read our corner have feather beds upon their premises. For many years one or two were tolerated in the maid's room out of consideration to rooted prejudices imported from the old country, where feather mattresses and duvets were esteemed as necessaries of a reasonably comfortable existence. Even these have been swept away by the march of sanitary improvement. Bridget and Thekla no longer stipulate for the soft bed in which the mistress would feel that she was suffocating and useless. Yet, as our intelligent nurse reminds us, here and there survives a human being of the old school who speaks of a hair mattress as a "hard bed" and insists that "old heads need feathers."

To the families that cherish distilled them relics of bygone times the suggestion of our ex-nurse will be acceptable and useful.

Concerning "Borrowing Nuisance."

Among the hosts of "good ideas" that fall into our laps the following finds a place:

"We have read and enjoyed the familiar talk upon 'the borrowing nuisance.' My sympathies are with both parties to the transaction—the borrower and the lender. I have overcome the borrowing habit by keeping paper and pencil by me and jotting down what is needed in the house as soon as I find we haven't it on hand. Then I do without it until I can get it from the store. If your correspondent would suggest this to her borrowing neighbor it may be of help to both of them. One way of stopping the nuisance is to tell the borrower that you have not the thing she wants and that you were just thinking of asking her to lend it to you. Or write down the things she has already had of you and then do a little borrowing on your own account, to keep things even, as it were.

"Telephone—5 cents for sending and 10 cents for delivering messages is charged by our grocer. We must pay for necessities and we are glad to do it.

"I hope somebody will find my suggestions as useful as I have found your corner.

"Mrs. J. D."

Your first expedient might strain a tender conscience. It is not an easy matter to look a woman squarely in the face and say that you have no sugar, coffee or vinegar in the storeroom when you have an abundance. The end does not justify the means.

Your second trick is capital. To one blessed with a saving sense of humor there would be a positively wicked delight in keeping the "little list" as one might a day book, and at the end of the week running into the borrower's house and begging for just as much of several articles as you have lent her. It is a novel method of squaring accounts, and if done tactfully will not offend, while it will abate, if not abolish, the nuisance.

Letter from Another Sufferer.

Another sufferer has a bitter word anent the same "Familiar Talk":

"You omitted in your censure of the Borrowing Habit to say that it is vulgar. I mean just that. It is unlikeable and when the loan is not returned it is every bit as bad as stealing. And another branch of the subject comes nearer still to me. I am a commuter's wife. We have some well born and tolerably well to do neighbors—a mother and two daughters—who have a way of dropping in early in the morning while we are at breakfast, or in the evening when it 'has come to their minds that they haven't this or that in the house and would Mr. M. be so kind as to bring it out next day? It is such a busy and even an affliction to have no man in the house—not even a boy who could run into town and get things when they are needed in a hurry—and the country stores keep such a wretched assortment.

"Sometimes it is a pound of tea; sometimes a box of candy, or a box of biscuits, or half a dozen apples, or a bottle of maraschino cherries, or, maybe, a copy of a magazine they 'are just dying to ask,' which Mr. M. can pick up in the station on his way out. You would not believe how various—and how petty—are their wants. Nor how gracefully they make them known. Nor how grateful they are to 'the very best neighbor ever gritted to a forlorn household of women.' They have told us a hundred times how much they think of what the youngest of the three—a kittenish thing of 48 summers—persists in calling 'that adorable husband of yours.'

"Least of all could you or any other honest person believe that in the three years during which this has been going on they have never once offered to reimburse him for the sums they have made my long suffering John spend in gratifying their whims. It is 10 cents one day, and 50 cents tomorrow, and 20 upon a third. We began to keep an account of them when the list got rather long. They actually owe him this hour in hard cash $40. He tried several times to, as he said, 'choke them off,' by forgetting what he was asked to buy. Then forgave him sweetly and, lest it should happen again, wrote out the memorandum and made the poor man put it into his pocketbook in their sight. Another time when his memory failed him rotten, Miss Mamie—the kitten—tied a square of her hair about his little finger to keep her in his mind.

"These are highly responsible people and they have had so many heroic-sounding with a few cases that the neighborhood pities and pets them. They send us flowers and strawberries from their garden and invariably when they have it for dinner, and all that. But they have stolen my husband's money as truly as if they had picked his pocket.

"I wish your free spoken constituents would advise us what to do. It isn't as if they were poor. What would you do were you in our place? If we present a bill, we shall be called 'mean and unneighborly.'

"This is a true story, cut and cut. I hope from the bottom of my heart that the robbers (they are nothing else) will see this letter.

Mrs. E. L. M."

There can be but one opinion with regard to the conduct of the unneighborly trio. It seems too strongly of premeditated dishonesty to be palliated by any excuse of possible forgetfulness or lack of business habits. Yet we shall be glad to hear what the constituency has to say upon the matter.

Two Timely Suggestions.

"I have seen in the corner a request for a method of washing a plume. Also, for renovating jet passementerie. The answered recipes may solve the problems for the uneasy possessors of trimming and plume.

"TO WASH A PLUME.—Shake a suds of floating soap and cold water, and let it stand for two or three hours. Then put the plume into hot water; let it remain about twenty minutes. Lay it on a clean cloth, and remove any dirt which may remain with a piece of soft cloth or silk dipped in soapsuds; rinse in five changes of hot water; lay it on a towel; touch it lightly with a piece of cloth rolled up, to restore the curl. When almost dry shake until fluffy; place in tissue paper and place in the warming oven of the stove to dry thoroughly. To curl it, if necessary, use an ivory paper cutter—the dull side of the blade.

"RENOVATING OLD JET.—Old jet can be so renovated as to look absolutely new, and by a simple process, one especially useful for old fringes, the thread and tape of which turn gray. First mend carefully, then spread in a small, flat dish and cover with a good ink—jet black, if possible. After a few minutes, lift out with some metal utensil that will not be stained by the ink, and drain on thick newspaper, spreading the trimming out flat until dry. Old fashioned jets rarely are made with anything but beads, but if spangles are in the trimming, greater care must be taken. Do not allow the slightest fold in the wet material, as the wet spangles may become sticky; and remove from the ink as soon as the threads have absorbed the color. Old trimmings made of 'bugles' are especially of value just now, these being the most expensive of all trimming jets.

"Mrs. S. J. Rusen."

When I tell you that we have had at the lowest computation a dozen queries as to the right way of cleaning soiled feathers and renovating rusty jet, you may feel complacent hands in the consciousness that you are, in two directions, a benefactress.

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

TIGER LILY CENTERPIECE

...thread. It is held in the left hand and should follow the lines suggested. Make all the parallel lines first. Then cross them as shown, and hold together by catching down the threads at the lines of crossing by using short stitches. This gives a beautiful effect, and is so easily and quickly done that you should not hesitate to give variety to your needlework.

Fill the edge with either darning cotton or flat cotton soutache braid. Work in buttonhole stitch and add, if possible, an edge of torchon or cluny to the pretty centerpiece.

I do not know which I prefer, the all-white or the colored work. Each is extremely lovely and is suitable in different rooms. The white is good for the dining table; the colored looks well in the living hall, the library or on the porch. If you choose the colors, be sure to select a soft shade of green, one with silvery lights in it, as the contrast will be too striking. Use brown or darker green for the lattice work and the same color for the edge.

Begin now with this pretty lily design. It is unusually artistic and will repay amply for your trouble.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

SOME TIMELY NEEDLEWORK NOTES

DAINTY strings for baby's cap are made of sheer lawn neckties with embroidered ends that are cut in half and sewed to each side of the little cap. Perhaps a better way is to pin them in place with small gold safety pins; then they can be taken off and laundered without trouble.

Ties with plain hemstitched ends can have a pretty spray of small flowers embroidered on the ends by mother's nimble fingers, if she wishes to give a personal touch to her little one's belongings.

When stitching seams on the machine in a silk garment, use either fine cotton or one thread cotton and the other of silk. By so doing you will obviate any puckering of the seams, and if you should have to rip them you will have far less trouble.

Always use very fine cotton when stitching chiffon, crepe de chine, silk, muslin net, mousseline or any of the finer materials. Place a piece of clean paper under the goods and stitch it with the material, then tear away the paper after the work is done. In this way you will avoid having the work drawn or puckered.

Pillow-case tubing makes practical petticoats for small children. The material is simply gathered into a band of low-necked sleeveless waist and trimmed around the bottom with a frill of lace or embroidery. This makes an easy garment to iron, having no seams.

Instead of sewing frills of lace into the necks and sleeves of your gowns, stitch the lace to strips of narrow tape and baste that into the dresses. Then it can easily be taken out and laundered without the trouble of ripping out the stitches of the fine sewing into the dress itself.

* * *

When initialed handkerchiefs wear out, cut the initials away from the worn linen and sew them on your corset covers and other underwear. This is a delightful way of marking and very easy to do, for the embroidered letters are caught down on the underside with fine stitches, then pressed. They look as well as if the work had been done on the material itself.

When darning a rent in dark woolen material, the best way to do is to ravel out some of the threads of the wool and use that instead of regular darning or sewing cotton. Thus you match the material exactly, and when the garment is pressed on the wrong side after it has been dampened a little, the darn will not show.

To thread a needle with woolen thread or saphyr, thread it first with a strand of fine cotton doubled, then catch the woolen thread through the loop in the doubled end of the cotton and pull it through the eye of the needle in this way.

straw. You can then cover up the marks of discoloration and make for yourself an stylish a head covering as any one would wish.

One yard of figured net will suffice to cover a large hat like our first model. The work must be carefully done, or it will be a failure.

If the crown can be detached from the brim, the work will be much easier; if not, then you must first make a pattern of the brim by covering the under side with tissue paper, pinning in many places around the edge; then smoothing it over the surface of the brim until you obtain a pattern of the exact shape.

The crown is covered first. Lay the net over the crown, fitting it down closely all around, and sew it with a long-and-short stitch at the head line, using a long milliner's needle and coarse thread.

Now cut out the net for the brim covering by the pattern, cutting a hole in the center to slip the crown through.

Lay the net smoothly over the brim and pin it in place to prevent its slipping while you sew it down.

Turn in the edge neatly and slipstitch it to the straw; turn the net in at the crown line also and sew this fast. Now cover this line of stitches with a narrow French fold of ribbon tied on one side with a flat bow and place a single rose or cluster of small blossoms on the brim, and your old-new hat is ready to wear.

Marks left by the sun's fierce rays in the second model are covered with ribbon and figured taffeta.

The work is done on the brim precisely in the manner before mentioned, and the ribbon is edged with narrow silk fringe and laid over the crown in soft folds.

Here china silk figured with cherry red covers the crown and brim, while artificial cherries are sewed on red velvet ribbon, forming circles that are applied as trimming.

Flowered cretonne is effective and practical as a covering for a sunburnt leghorn. This has a flat black velvet bow for trimming.

It is possible to utilize odd pieces of lace left from your summer gowns, all-over embroideries, and lace veils in covering the sunburnt hat.

If the hat is not too badly discolored, a plain net or malline makes a pretty covering if used as trimming in a high-wired bow on the side.

Do not discard your favorite straw hat just because it is burnt by the sun. Try this plan of covering it and profit by the success of others. It will take you through the rest of the season.

The Fortune Teller

ELEANOR DEAR:

Don't ever tell me there is nothing in "things occult." You would leave off scoffing had you heard the really wonderful things a gipsy told me the other day. But the future she prophesied is very pleasin. Dorothy's future is much more exciting. The whole joke is in the fact that Isabel Hall was the gipsy. The gipsy said—but I had better let Dorothy tell it you herself; what I will tell you is about the charming little frock she wore.

It is of soft white flowered taffeta made with the new-popular panier skirt. The peplum is rather plain—such pretty silk would only be spoiled with much trimming. Bands of yellow lace extend over the shoulders to the waist line, and are continued as an edge to the panier. Small black satin bows trim the bodice front, which also has a little inset yoke of lace. The short set-in sleeves are edged with it also, and three broad bands of it are used on the otherwise plain skirt.

She wore a bell-shaped hat of white net, shirred to a wire frame and trimmed on each side with small, close clusters of pink rosebuds.

My own frock I had made especially to slip on in the afternoons when I did not want to spend much time dressing. It is one of those convenient little one-piece affairs that fastens in the back and can be got into in just about "two shakes," as Jack says. There is a plain front panel on bodice and skirt which opens at the throat over a narrow puffed yoke of silk mull finished with a narrow frill.

Bands of the mull are also used to finish the lower portion of the bodice, beginning each side of the panel and extending all around the back.

The sleeves are a bit full, and each has a broad cuff of embroidery, with a little puff of mull underneath. This also is used for a puffed girdle, fastened at the side with black velvet ribbon, and again on the skirt, topping a very broad band of embroidery.

My hat of the occasion was a simply shady hat of white dotted crepe, trimmed with a band of pink ribbon run under wide embroidered beading and tied in a very large bow at the left side.

Really it was late at night when I got to bed, hearing about each one's Farewell for the present. Just think that I go for a week before dinner.

Ever affectionately
